Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—The near approach of new season's Teas tends to keep our market very quiet, the trade steadily working out of their old stocks and only buying for immediate wants. The public sales have again been small this week, but prices show no improvement, the quantity of common Tea offered being sufficient for the limited demand. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds : Siftings remain as before ; common to good common has sold at previous prices ; fair kinds are difficult of sale ; good to fine have been in moderate request, the stock being much reduced. Pak Lin kinds are without alteration. Black-leaf kinds : Common to good common have sold flatly, but at previous prices ; fair kinds show no alteration ; good to fine have sold at public sale at about last week's prices. New-make kinds : Further large supplies have been offered, but the demand is only dull, and prices have ruled in favour of buyers ; common have sold from 9d. to 10d., fair from 11d. to 1s., and good from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. A few small parcels of new Amoy Oolongs have been offered, but the quality has not been sufficiently good to attract buyers. In old season's there is nothing new to report. Souchongs show no change, being still difficult of sale. Scented Teas.—Canton kinds : Old season's Capers and Orange Pekoes have been dull of sale at rather lower prices. The first of the new season's came to hand per Ulysses ; the quality generally is inferior to last season's. They have met with a slow sale at from 11½d. to 1s. 8d. per lb. for fair to fine kinds of Caper—Orange Pekoes selling from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. In Foochow kinds nothing is doing, the supplies being exhausted from importers' hands. Green Teas.—There is no change to report. The bulk of the business is still at public sale without reserve, and prices show no improvement, many sorts now selling on a very low scale.

The public sales have comprised only 9.768 packages, the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz :—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.
Home Consumption	1,891,742 ...	2,021,471

SILK.

There has been very little doing since the public sales. As holders did not seem inclined to go on selling at the prices then paid, the result has been a good many offers for China Silk, but very little business. The news of the opening of the market at Shanghai on a basis of 1s. 6d. above our rates here may possibly induce some firmness, and result in more business. A line of Japans has been sold at a very low price—under 17s. for 2½ to 3 Maibash. The deliveries last month show no improvement.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Early in the past week an improvement occurred in the market, not only from the continued activity in and advanced prices of Cotton, but from a better inquiry, principally on indent account from India, which resulted in a fair amount of business at full prices. At the close, though quotations have been firmly held for, the tone has been quieter, buyers evincing no desire to go on at previous rates, and business has thereby been checked.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE MAIL SERVICE TO THE CAPE COLONIES.—Messrs. Denny Brothers, of Dumbarton, have launched a screw steamer of about 3,000 tons burden, to be employed by the Union Company in their Cape of Good Hope and Natal Mail Service. She is called the German, and her principal dimensions are—Length, 350ft.; breadth, 39ft.; and depth, 32ft. Her engines have cylinders of 50in. and 86in. respectively, with 54in. stroke, and very large heating serface. She is fitted with deck-houses and every modern improvement for the comfort of passengers and the safe navigation of the vessel. The upper deck is flush fore and aft, and on the main deck there will be accommodation for about 100 first-class and from 80 to 100 second-class passengers, besides space for a large number of emigrants when necessary. Rapid progress is being made with the German's completion, and it is expected that she will be ready for sea in time to accommodate the outward passenger traffic in the autumn. The completion of this vessel will increase the tonnage of the Union Company's fleet to about 32,000 tons. The tonnage employed by the same company in the Cape service twenty years ago was less than 3,000 tons.

THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER GAMBIA.—The Board of Trade inquiry into the loss of the mail steamer Gambia has been concluded. The Court, in the judgment delivered, stated that the master attributed the loss of the vessel to striking on an unknown rock, which he placed at about two miles to the seaward of the Athol rock. From the evidence, the Court could not be certain as to the course steered or the bearings taken, and therefore had no means of fixing the position of the alleged unknown danger. But the Court was strongly inclined to think that the Gambia was nearer the shore than was supposed, and that the witnesses were deceived as to the distance, as it was at dusk when the ship struck. The Court, therefore, had very grave doubts whether the Gambier did not really strike on the Athol rock. The master was an experienced man, and did all in his power to save life, in which he succeeded. His certificate was returned to him.

THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER MEIKONG.—The Messageries Maritimes have received telegrams from their agent at Aden, which announce that nearly all the passengers have taken passage to Suez, on board the P. and O. Company's steamer Zambesi, leaving Aden on the 25th ult. The company's agents in Egypt have been instructed to attend to the passengers on their arrival at Suez, and send them by special train to Alexandria, at which place they will embark on the 3rd of July on board one of the company's steamers, which will be due at Naples on the 7th, and at Marseilles on the 9th inst. The captain of the Meikong is also on board the Zambesi, and the crew have been shipped on board the French Government steamer Finisterre, bound for Toulon.

THE CLYDE SHIPWRIGHTS' STRIKE.—There appears to be but small prospect of a settlement of the lock-out in the Clyde shipbuilding trade. Meanwhile the distress amongst the workmen and their families deepens daily. The shipwrights' strike which caused the lock-out has now lasted twelve weeks, and the lock-out has been in force since May 19. Many men have tried to get employment in England and Ireland, but unsuccessfully. There are 118 unfinished vessels on the stocks. The masters have formed themselves into a stronger union than ever, and all appearances indicate a continuation of the struggle unless the men give way and return to work at the old rate of wages.

THE P. and O. Company's steamship Khedive, Captain J. D. Steward, from Calcutta, via the Suez Canal, arrived at Southampton on the 24th ult., bringing the heavy India and China mails, 197 passengers, 32 packages of specie (value not stated), seven packages of valuables, and 14,763 packages of cargo.

THE barque Condor, from Amoy, has commenced to discharge her cargo at the Victoria Harbour on the Clyde. She brings over 5,000 bags of sugar, which is consigned to the Dellingburn Sugar Refining Company. In one of the bags the sampler brought out three stones, weighing 19 lbs.

THE rock on which the City of San Francisco (str.) struck, while on the voyage from Panama to San Francisco, is situated in lat. 16.6 N., long. 98.36 W., 13 miles from land, and has been hitherto unknown.

MISSING VESSEL.—The Royal Family, of Liverpool, off. No. 51,532, Fowler, sailed from Bassein on the 23rd October last, for the United Kingdom, with rice and teak, and has not since been heard of.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

LOSS OF THE MESSAGERIES MARITIMES STEAMER "MEIKONG."

IN consequence of the loss of the mails by this steamer, which should have been delivered in London to-day, we are unable to give our usual summary of news from China, Japan, and the Straits. The details in regard to her loss will be received by the steamer Glenartney (expected in London on the 10th), which vessel rescued her passengers and crew.

THE INSURRECTION IN JAPAN.

THE following despatch from Yokohama, dated June 6, has been received by way of San Francisco :—

The situation in the south-west is virtually unchanged. The Imperial troops occupy all the strong positions, and the exact locality of the rebel leaders is absolutely unknown. Nevertheless, it is certain that agitation continues, and large tracts in Kinsia, in the extreme western part of the island, are held by roving bands of insurgents. The authorities say it is useless to carry the conflict into the mountains, where great loss of life would be inevitable. They prefer to wait a certain result, without sacrificing blood and treasure at this moment. Neither foreigners nor Japanese possess any true understanding of the condition of Satsuma. The Government frankly acknowledges that some weeks must pass before the end is assured. There is no anxiety, however, as to the ultimate perfect success of the Imperialists. Official returns of the casualties of the Satsuma rebellion show the killed in battle on the Imperial side to be 10,135 ; died in hospitals, 824 ; wounded, 8,752 ; now in hospitals, 5,584 ; recovered and returned to duty, 263.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

SHANGHAI, MAY 12, 1877.

As it is by no means impossible that a little gentle pressure brought to bear upon the Chinese authorities at Peking from home (query through the Chinese Envoys) may have a salutary effect in connection with a matter of considerable local interest here, I trust you will allow me space in your paper to draw attention to it. You will probably have noticed from time to time that the papers here have drawn attention to the steady deterioration of the river Hwang-poo, and there is no doubt that this has not been done without very good reason. Steady silting is going on between what is known as the Pootung Point (concerning which, by-the-bye, there was a very elaborate case determined in the Supreme Court some years ago) and the opposite shore ; and the result is that considerable changes are being made in the Bund line. This has caused some agitation to the Municipal Council, who have accordingly addressed the Chamber of Commerce, who will address the Consul, who will address the Taoutai, who will address the Peking Authorities, urging that a portion of the tonnage dues may be devoted to getting out a dredging machine and taking other steps of the same character to keep the river in order. There is no doubt that something should be done in the matter, and it would be only right that a portion of the tonnage dues should be devoted to the purpose ; but as this could only be done after a reference to head-quarters, I am afraid there is little chance of its being accomplished, unless the high officials at Peking are in some way "touched up" on the subject.

The Missionary Conference has commenced its sittings, and is likely to be of great interest and importance. Papers are promised on Taouism, Buddhism and Confucianism. It is satisfactory to find that missionary gentlemen are carefully turning their attention to these subjects. Without a thorough acquaintance with them, they must be at great disadvantage in their endeavours to propagate the Gospel, as before they can hope to convert others to Christianity they must acquire some knowledge of the religious tone of mind of those to whom they address themselves. This element in connection with Mission work has I think, been hitherto somewhat too much overlooked ; and I am sure that its receiving the prominence it deserves will be of great benefit to the cause of Christianity in this country.

Everyone here is delighted that the Queen has conferred the honour of Knighthood upon Sir Walter Medhurst, in recognition of his long and able services. I have had occasion over a series of years to know him both personally and officially, and am certain that the Consular and Diplomatic Service never had a better man in it. It seems to me a pity that he should not have been induced if possible to continue somewhat longer in the service, as experience and talents such as he possesses are assuredly much wanted in it. The North China Daily News speaks as follows on this subject :—

The value of a gift may be very much enhanced by the mode of presentation ; and we are glad to learn that the circumstances under which the honour of knighthood was lately conferred on Mr. Medhurst were of the most gratifying character. Mr. Medhurst was specially summoned to Windsor and introduced to the Queen, who performed the ceremony with her own hand. We are sure Sir Walter's friends will share the gratification which he cannot fail to have felt, personally, at the courtesy with which his long services have been recognised, and at the confirmation which is thus given at home to the kindly opinion expressed by the Shanghai community.

We have been rather amused here at some of the doings of the Chinese Ministers as reported from time to time in your paper. Fancy a Chinese mandarin conversing with Browning on poetry ; and "Lady Kwo" assisting the young ladies at South Kensington with their embroidery ; the entente cordiale is certainly increasing, and I hope that it may continue to do so. The following paragraph, which appears in one of the papers here, shows that our efforts to assist the unlucky famine-stricken people have not been unappreciated:—

We are requested to publish an audited statement of the accounts of the (South Gate) Refugee Fund, and to assure those who contributed the money that the refugees seemed very grateful for the kindness shown them. On one occasion when expressing their gratitude, they were told that they were indebted to the foreigners in the settlement [illegible] "If foreigners should come to your homes, would you allow your children to call them foreign devils?" "No! no!! We would call them yang sen sang" (Mr. Foreigner), was screamed forth by many voices.

I am glad to be able to state that the old epithets of Fang-qui, &c., are now much less frequently heard than formerly. In fact, the natural result of the people becoming more familiar with us is being produced. As they get to know us better they are inclined to treat us more civilly, not less so, as some anti-progressionists would wish to make it appear.

CANTON.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

CANTON, MAY 18.

The most important event which apparently has taken place in this city during the past fortnight is the examination for the first literary degree, or that of Bachelor of Arts. The result has not yet been made public. It is supposed, however, that a list bearing the names of the successful candidates will be published in the course of three or four days. Undergraduates of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge would, I think, be surprised on hearing of the difficulties which beset a Chinese undergraduate when a candidate for his first degree. As an account of an examination of this nature may prove interesting to your readers, I shall endeavour, in the following sentences, to furnish them with a few items bearing upon a subject so interesting. Let me begin, then, by observing that each candidate for the degree in question is required by the ruler or chief magistrate of the county of which he is a native to produce, in the first instance, a certificate which has been duly signed and sealed by two graduates—Bachelors of Arts—who have agreed to act for him as sureties. This certificate not only sets forth the age and names of the candidate, but the names, also, of his parents and grandparents. It sets forth, too, the name either of the hamlet, or village, or town, and that of the country in which he was born. It further declares that he is not in mourning,* that—with the view of describing his personal appearance—he has or has not a beard or moustache, and that he is not the son either of a soldier,† or a playactor,† or a slave,† or a whoremonger,† or of one† whose occupation consists not only in attiring corpses in grave-clothes, but in conveying them, when so attired, to the tomb. This certificate having been examined and approved by the chief magistrate of the county, the candidate is called upon to repair to the capital city of his native country, in order that on a day appointed he may there be examined as to his literary attainments by the county ruler and other members of the literati. On the day of examination, at the early hour of six A.M., the candidate, together, of course, with many others, enters the examination hall; and here let it be observed that with an institution of this kind each county city is provided. At seven A.M. the county ruler and the literati, the examiners—arrive, and at eight A.M. the doors of the examination-hall are closed. To each candidate the subjects for examination are then given. These subjects consist of two essays on themes or texts, which are selected from the four books, and one poem. Each essay must consist of not more than seven hundred characters, and not less than four hundred. The poem must consist of twelve lines, and each line must measure five metrical feet. At one or two o'clock in the afternoon the gates of the examination-hall are thrown open, in order that all candidates who have finished their papers may retire. Candidates, however, who are not ready writers are permitted to remain in the hall until nine or ten o'clock in the night, at which hour they are peremptorily called upon to place their papers, whether in a finished or an unfinished state, in the hands of the examiners, and to go, without any further delay, to their respective quarters. In the course of a few days following this examination a list bearing the names of the successful candidates is posted upon the walls of the temple, in honour of Confucius, for in each county town such an edifice, of course, stands. Of preliminary or previous examinations of this nature not less than eight are held, and between each not more than six or eight days are suffered to intervene. Now all candidates who have succeeded in passing three or more of the eight examinations to which we have just referred repair in the next instance, on a day appointed, to the prefectural or capital city of the prefecture of which their respective counties are integral parts or political divisions, in order that they may also, in regard to their scholastic attainments, be examined eight times by the prefect and certain members of the literati. Each of these eight prefectural examinations, if I may so term them, is confined, as in the former instance, to one day, and between each examination not more than six or eight days are suffered to intervene. The subjects at each of these tests consist of two essays and one poem. The texts for the themes are chosen from the four books and certain portions of the Chinese classics. Each essay must consist of not more than seven hundred characters, and not less than four hundred. The poem must consist of twelve lines, and each line must measure five metrical feet. At the close of each of these prefectural examinations, a list containing the names of the successful candidates is posted on the walls of the temple of Confucius, for, as in each county city, so also in each prefectural city a temple stands in honour of that illustrious sage. All candidates who have succeeded in passing three or more of the eight examinations to which we have just referred are declared to be fully qualified to present themselves to the Literary Chancellor for a final test or examination. This last examination, which, as we have already stated, is conducted by the Literary Chancellor, by the prefect, by the rulers of the various counties forming the prefecture, and by certain members of the literati, who, for this purpose, have been nominated by the Literary Chancellor, is confined to one day. As the candidates for this final test are very numerous, coming, as they do, from the many counties of which the prefecture is composed, and as the examination commences at the early hour of six in the morning, they are, throughout the course of the preceding night, admitted into the examination hall by fifties at a time. Each candidate upon entering the outer gates of the hall responds to his name. He is then searched, in order that it may be ascertained whether or not there be concealed in his pocket, or in the wide sleeves of his dress, a pocket edition of the four books or of the classics in which it is intended that he shall be examined. A cylindrical-shaped basket, too, in which he carries his pens and inkstand, is, for similar reasons, searched at the same time. This search is, in all respects, repeated as the candidate passes the inner gates of the examination hall. This second scrutiny of the candidate's dress having been brought to a close, he is publicly identified by his sureties (graduates), who wear on the occasion their official or academical costumes. Sheets of paper necessary for the examination are now presented to the candidate. For these sheets of paper, however, which are provided by the Government, he is made to pay. All the candidates having taken their seats at the various stone tables with which the examination hall is furnished, the subjects for examination are immediately given. These subjects consist of two essays and one poem. The texts for the essays are chosen from the four books and other portions of the Chinese classics. As in the former cases, each essay must consist of not more than 700 characters, and not less than 400. Each poem, too, must consist of twelve lines, and each line must measure five metrical feet. At the close of this final examination, which, as I have already intimated, is confined to one day, the numbers rather than the names of the successful candidates are placed on the walls of the literary chancellor's yamen or official residence. The examination for the second degree or that of Master of Arts is, of course, still more difficult than the one of which I have just given an account. Time and space, however, would fail me were I now to enter into a description of all its details.

COCHIN CHINA.

The French Colony of Cochin China was very little known to Europeans until the French conquered that country in the years 1859 to 1868.

Since then all nations have had access to its ports, which are few, Saigon having all the foreign commerce, the other towns having only coasting trade with prows from the northern coast of Cochin China junks from the Tonkin Siam. The Malays also trade to Hatien, from Singapore, and exchange produce of their countries. I have seen, in the mouth of the river, some of these coasting vessels loaded with all kinds of produce, and crowded with poultry—cocks and hens, ducks, turkeys, pigeons, &c., in numerous baskets hung round the vessel's sides and all available out-of-the-way places, and swarming with bronze figures, half-naked, in all kind of postures, some holding by the mast, ropes, sails, rigging, or sitting a la Turk, and jabbering a language which appeared to me a continued noisy sound, without intermission. I have heard half-a-dozen fish and market women speaking all at once, causing a babel of sounds, of which I could not understand a word of what they said; so how much less could I distinguish words of foreign gibberish, with scores of tongues jabbering all at once? But it could be easily imagined that they were occupied discussing what each thought of us and our craft, which being a steamer must have been an object of wonder to them, as we approached them very quick, although it was calm and a strong tide against us; some of the green-horns must have stared in amazement at our steamer approaching them like an infernal machine, smoking and puffing, our propeller splashing the water about under our sterns, the ends of the blades being between wind and water, causing quite a confusion of swells, assisted by the hull of the steamer going through the water, pushing a wave forward and raising the water in a swell before the bows of the vessel, our stem splitting it in two, and sending two jets up in a graceful curve, in imitation of fountains in ornamental waters. As we steamed abreast of this open coaster, we saluted them with our shrill whistles, of which we had two, and startled them with different sounds, which came upon them so unexpectedly quite startled them. Our crew were quite amused at the confusion it caused among the crew and passengers of the coaster ; almost every one screamed, and the younger ones run crying, and hid themselves; one of them lost his balance and fell overboard in the water, but they being so accustomed to the water soon secured a rope and managed to creep aboard again.

In the autumn of 1872 I was engaged, under contract by a London financial firm, to take out a river steamer for Saigon, to trade in the interior of Cochin China, in the navigation of the Meikong, with its numerous branches ; the two principal ones, which are called by the French Fleuve interiur et Fleuve exteriour, very fine rivers ; navigable for vessels of twelve feet draught for two or three hundreds of miles up, from its mouth; they branch off in almost every direction, and cut the country into thousands of small and large islands; and, in a manner of speaking, Lower Cochin China is a country cut up in all manner of ways, by water-roads, travelled by the natives by twenty boats of all shapes, canoes, sampans of every description and size, from a small log canoe of two metres long, capable only of carrying a boy, to above a hundred feet long, having more than hundreds of rowers, or rather paddlers, not more than one metre wide, easily upset. I have seen some of the mandarin's boats, with more than one hundred paddles, racing, and going at such a force and speed through the water that they have fairly been sent under water, filled and swamped, the whole crew in a moment swimming and bailing their boat, and in a very short time renew the race, the rowers not the least affected by their bath.

The boats of the country people are more clumsily constructed, full of lumber and furniture, if their family and household utensils can be called furniture, as one-half of the population live in boats entirely, like the Chinese in the Canton water ; whole floating villages of these are to be seen.

The commercial villages, or, more properly, market towns, are situated about twenty to thirty miles apart on the banks of the numerous rivers which form the highways, that is a tide's work, resting each tide at some well-known place of rendezvous, the principal and centres of commerce being Saigon and Cholons (Cholens), almost entirely a Chinese market town, or central depot, where all the Chinese counting-houses are, and keep their stores for the storage of the produce of the country, where they collect all kinds of merchandise ; and when goods are ready for exportation they are shipped in large cargo boats of the capacity of about 1,000 piculs, when they are rowed down the Cholen river to Saigon, and transhipped in the foreign vessels lying at anchor in the roadstead. The limits of the commercial port are from little below the Fort du Said to abreast of the Harbourmaster's office, which is near the wharves of the Messageries Maritimes French mail boats, extending nearly two kilometres, and joining Le Port de Guerre, opposite the town of Saigon, the town dividing the two roadsteads, the commercial one occupying three-fourths the whole breadth of the river, leaving the left bank for a passage up and down the men-of-war roadstead, occupying the whole breadth of the river above Saigon, where moorings are placed at swing distance from each other for large vessels of war, the smaller Government vessels and hulks being moored on all fours and in tiers along each bank of the river, of which there are above half a hundred of the different classes and sizes ; the old line-of-battle ship Flurus, now a sheer hulk and flagship, being moored along the Esplanade, its guns commanding the whole Rue de l'Opital, and, we may say, the town of Saigon and saluting ship.

Above the naval roadstead, and opposite the dockyard arsenal, is a very fine and large useful and commodious iron floating dock ; it was finished a few years ago, and the last rivet clinched by one of the most celebrated young ladies resident at Saigon, a brass plate describing the ovation being fixed on the upper end entrance, the exact description of which I have lost in my travels. Often two vessels are docked at one time, and the largest mail boats could be repaired, and some of them are nearly 150 metres long.

The whole banks of the river roadstead are still in their primitive state ; débris of a few old wooden wharves mark where there have been some kind of accommodation for landing or shipping cargo. At the time when only sailing ships came up the river as many as 150 to 200 have been busy on the Saigon river ; but at this present date trade is carried on in a very different manner. Many say the steamers have been the ruin of Saigon (comme un port de commerce); I suppose these means in compradores, stevedores, carpenters, caulkers, &c., and amongst the most common the sailors' grog-shops, the necessary evil to a large congregation of sailors. All these wooden and sailing vessels loading rice, and giving employment to so many trades following the necessities of commercial vessels, like the appendant followers of an army, it must have given employment to many. How different it is at the date of which I write ; scarcely any sailing vessels ride in the roadsteads ; they have made way for the more speedy and more modern carriers, in the form of iron steamers that now frequent the port, some of them taking as much as eight to ten sailing ships' cargoes. I have seen there the s.s. Hankow take about 70,000 piculs of rice, and that in a very few days, and off again—very different from the slow way ten sailing vessels would have been expedited. The difference tells in many ways ; this large steamer had only its complement of officers, so had the other ships ; but there were ten of them, each different characters, some frolicking, &c., others quiet and of a gentlemanly behaviour, as my friend the commander of the s.s. Hankow was, with his officers following in his steps, only leaving what money to the tradespeople of Saigon was required to pay for their requirements. I speak of this steamer because she was the largest coming under my notice ; there were others smaller and trading regularly to Saigon and Hong Kong, being chartered by Chinese merchants and speculators by the month for a lump sum and underlet to others, and being on time charter it was to the advantage of the charterer to make the most of his bargain ; so dispatch was his hobby ; the more voyages his chartered steamer made during the time, which was about a six months' charter, the greater was his profits. Small Chinese brokers were known to make good bargains and become rich in no time, being able to make handsome presents to the officers of the steamers, to give them a stimulation and lose no time. Many a bright gem I have seen on a captain's finger or in shirt studs, &c., presents from their charterers, a compliment which injured nobody ; as the charters were effected by the owners' agents there could not be any connives, but more attention paid by the officers, and, may be, little more wear and tear of the ship and apparel, and in the case of a steamer of the engines. I said more attention, which might be artificial, for I look upon any ships' officers, if they are honest men, it will not matter how their ships may be employed; good officers will always exert themselves to the most of their abilities. But John Chinaman is cunning enough to know how to stimulate those abilities to his advantage, and knows how to work on the principle of giving a sprat to catch a mackerel. Be it as it may, some of those Chinese act very liberally, and as good business men, and in many instances outdo European sagacity. The Chinese merchants as a body in general are superseding our old established European merchants ; our old Oriental merchant princes in many instances are disappearing the stage of commerce, and are superseded by new firms managed entirely on new principles, on economical discipline both moral and financial means, some of the good old times are past and gone; things are changed. Formerly the mode of trading and material of commerce was in the hands of fewer adventurers, who in many instances had to risk life and fortune, and encounter all kind of enemies both in climate, plagues, robbers, murderers, &c.; but now, thanks to these enlightened days, all things are becoming more and more on equal terms, the headstrong unbelieving Asiatic, of whatever nation or religion he may belong, are beginning to see the great advantage that can be derived by liberal ideas ; they open their eyes to the immense advantages they can derive by free intercourse, free exchange of thoughts as well as of goods ; those who had no need, but lived in their primitive, and I may say savage mode of life, are now proud to descend from their lofty thought of natural and primitive savage life. Thousands, I may say millions, are now flocking to the standard of commerce; they see that in it all their wishes and needs can be supplied ; and though they might not have known these wants had they continued in their primitive habits, India, and particularly China, gives us good proofs of these changes, which I shall call civilisation. See our little island of Hong Kong, a mere rock on the coast of China on the south-east ironbound coast of the great Chinese Empire and Continent of Asia, with its millions of souls ; see them, how they are gradually assimilating their views to ours, particularly those more thrown in contact with Europeans, and in many instances superseding them in commerce ; for instance, see our great emporiums of commerce in the East, wherever the Chinese are under our European institutions, particularly those under the English free institutions in most part of India, China, and those great commercial regions which are protested by the British flag; see how they advance with confidence ; the emblem of security, wherever it is seen, means safety, commerce and wealth ; wherever gentle breezes are wafted to unfold that glorious banner of Union there is activity, wealth and prosperity, I could also say peace ; but as, in some instances, her enemies, by envy, greed of gain, &c., will try to disturb that, peace, so much needed for the true development of commerce, may be broken occasionally. By the great competition and even, I may say, our own merchants, they have ruined themselves in many instances and enriched the Chinese, see Hong Kong for instance, those who have been or had come there lately will understand what I say ; dwellings cannot be built fast enough, or convenient ground be found to build upon for the converted Chinese who flock by thousands to the British standard for commerce, as well as for protection and chiefly instinct of gain.

The Chinese are fast drawing the Chinese trade into their hands ; even the English or other European houses do most of their commerce through their compradores, and teach them how to trade and carry on a profitable business ; which in time said compradores go into business themselves, and with greater economical management, outdo their old employers. How many houses now in Hong Kong could wind up their affairs on advantageous terms—what would be left to them ? Many of them do not know, and I am sure I do not, but from hearsay while there I gathered the information that if some of the houses were to liquidate it would be ruination to them ; and why so, many will say that trade and commerce is not so good as formerly, may be the reply; but that is not correct, for the consumption and supply is greater than ever it was. Why, it is fabulous to read the reports of the customs, &c.; add to that the conniving unlegal commerce which is carried on, and which never sees the reports on commerce, and the answer is that commerce and intercourse of nations is greater than ever it was; in no time was the nations more prosperous than they are now; some kingdoms, governments, communities, companies, firms or individuals may have some change in their prospects for the better or for the worst; but taking the world as a whole, its inhabitants were never more prosperous; wealth abounds everywhere, if an individual hath it not many others have; so my reply to those who say that trade or commerce is not so good as in years gone by is, that the few old merchants who have made colossal fortunes when they were alone are now superseded by hundreds who have embarked in the same line of business, and have to compete with everybody.

In Macmillan's Magazine we find a postscript to the article in the last issue of that journal on Rajah Brooke, in which the author points out a mistake into which he fell in stating that negotiations for the transfer of Sarawak to England had some years since been renewed by the present Rajah, adding that so much misunderstanding has arisen in relation to that country that he was anxious to correct his mistake as early as possible, and to state that the cession of Sarawak to England or to any other Power has never been the subject of any negotiations to which the present Rajah was a party. The Bulletin of the Société de Geographie of Paris for this month contains a detailed account of the discoveries of the Challenger, in an exhaustive notice of geographical works during the past year. In the Friend of China (organ of the Anti-Opium Society) are some further notices of the Chinese critics of the works of those connected with that institution. Mr. Thomson's Street Life in London for July has as subjects for the photographs, "A Convict's Home," "The Wall Worker," and "Covent Garden Labourers."

The Nineteenth Century contains a very pleasing description of the journey which Mr. Brassey, M.P., recently made round the world in his yacht the Sunbeam. The undertaking of travelling 35,400 miles with his wife and four children was certainly not a small one, and the journey was accomplished in forty-six weeks, from which must be deducted 112 days in harbour. The voyage was via Buenos Ayres, Valparaiso, and the Straits of Magellan, and across the Pacific to Japan, and thence to China and home via Suez. Mr. Brassey describes his arrival in Japan and his voyage homewards as follows:—

We had made the passage from Valparaiso in seventy-two days at sea, and had indulged ourselves in only seventeen days of rest and relaxation in harbour. By far the greater part of this passage was made in the favoured region of the trade winds, no severe weather having been encountered until we entered the Kuro Siwo, or warm Japan current, a sea not less stormy than the Gulf Stream of the Atlantic, and probably rendered boisterous from similar causes. After a short stay at Yokohama we proceeded to Kobe, in the Inland Sea, and attended the opening of the railway to Kioto by the Mikado. From Kobe we steamed through the Inland Sea in truly winterly weather to Simonoseki, where we found the people much agitated by the recent insurrection of the Satsuma clan. Bidding farewell to Japan with regret, we steamed to the southward. We issued forth from the Inland Sea by the Boungo Channel, through which Admiral Kuper conducted the combined fleets to the bombardment of Simonoseki, but which has since been rarely used. Passing between the Linschoten Islands, many of which are active volcanoes, and the Liukiu group, we entered the Formosa Channel on the 24th of February, on which day, aided by the current, and running before a strong north-east monsoon, we made good upwards of 300 knots under sail only. This was the best performance of the voyage. On the following evening we arrived off Hong Kong. We sailed from Hong Kong on the 7th of March, touched at Macao on the same day, ran down the China Sea before pleasant north-east breezes, and reached Singapore on the 17th of March. After calling at Johore, Malacca, and Penang, we crossed the Indian Ocean, in calm and oppressively hot weather, and arrived at Galle on the 29th, and Colombo on the 30th of March. On the 5th of April we were "once more upon the waters," and on the 15th, having steamed the whole distance of 2,100 miles, we reached Aden.

Mr. Brassey notes the importance of the Suez Canal, and the large proportion of vessels passing it which carry the British flag. The Sunbeam steamed through the Canal in two days.

China. By Baron F. F. VON RICHTOFEN. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer. London: Trubner, and Co.—The first volume of the long expected work by Baron von Richtofen upon China fully promises to fulfil the expectations which have been formed with regard to it. As our readers are aware, the author has travelled extensively in China with the object of obtaining detailed geological and geographical information, and many of his notes made during the journeys which he undertook have already been published. During the time which has intervened Baron von Richtofen has evidently been well employed, and has supplemented his own information with very careful reading of standard works and of the reports from other travellers, such as Mr. Michie, Mr. T. T. Cooper, &c., so that the scope of his work has been considerably extended from what was at first expected, and in fact it will when completed be a perfect encyclopœdia upon matters connected with China, in addition to containing Baron von Richtofen's own valuable scientific observations and his notes upon the country and the people. In the preface which he gives, the author explains that the scope of the present volume is to some extent circumscribed by the fact that the main object of his journey in China was the investigation of geological and geographical matters in that country. He reserves a detailed account of his travels for a future volume, and in the present one gives the results of his work, the main subjects being geology and geography. These form the base-line of the volume, and more general remarks upon the country, the manners and customs of the people, and the like subjects do not fall within its scope. The subjects treated are therefore comparatively few, but a large proportion of them, being from Baron Richtofen's own observations, are of much value, and throw light upon many matters hitherto only dealt with in a cursory manner. Baron Richtofen acknowledges being indebted for much assistance to Mr. Ross Browne, formerly United States Minister at Peking; Mr. Cunninghame, formerly the head of Russell and Co.'s house in Shanghai; Mr. F. B. Johnson, of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co.'s, Mr. A. Michie, Baron Rehfus, and others. It is worthy of note that in speaking of the Chinese officials he says that on the whole he has reason to be contented with the treatment he met with at their hands. He states that he had not much to do with them beyond having his passport renewed every year; but that he was invariably treated with tact and civility, has an agreeable recollection of his intercourse with them, and does not appear to consider that there are grounds for the frequent complaints that are made against them. No doubt troubles of this kind arise at times from a want of care and tact on the part of travellers; but we fear that Baron Richtofen must be considered to have been exceptionally fortunate, probably from the fact which he states, that he luckily had but very little occasion to have recourse to the officials for aid or advice. It is explained in the preface that the reason why the author decided upon first writing a large volume upon introductory matters is, that the maps are not all ready, and that detailed accounts of the expeditions in China cannot be understood without them. We shall look with much interest for the future volumes of this valuable work.

Treaties Referring to Trade Between Great Britain and China, by EDWARD HERTSLET (Librarian of the Foreign-office.)—This portion of the important work by Mr. Hertslet on our treaties with China will be of great value to all who require a handy book of reference to show the exact nature of our rights and our relations with that country. It contains a short history of the treaties between China and Great Britain, a list of those between China and other foreign countries, with an abstract of the contents of each, the orders in Council of 1865, Mr. Wade's articles of agreement with reference to the seizure of British ships, orders in Council respecting fees, &c., and, in short, all the most important public instruments in force in China. Extracts are given from the treaties between China and other foreign nations, indicating the privileges which we are entitled to claim under the most favoured-nation clause, and the work is accompanied with a valuable map, showing the various ports now open to foreign trade.

The Russian Geographical Society has received a telegram from Colonel Prjevalsky announcing the safe arrival of the exploration party under his command at a place distant a few versts from Lake Lob Nor. Thus far the scientific exploration of Kashgaria has been crowned with success, and discoveries have been made in the debatable land between China and the Emir's territory which will be communicated at the next meeting of the society.

Le Catholicisme en Chine. By P. DABRY DE THIERSAUT; Ernest Leroux, Paris.—This pamphlet, the author of which was formerly Consul for France at Canton, is issued with a view of throwing additional light upon the well-known inscription at Tsi-Gnan-Foo, which forms one of the most magnificent pages of the history of Christianity in China, and which, after being variously interpreted by sinologues, has been attributed by some of them to Catholics, and by others to Nestorians. The author considers that in view of the importance of the monument and of the divergent opinions which have been given out on the subject, a new translation of the inscription and the publication of some documents connected with its origin would be of a nature to interest at once the Savans, who seek truth in her most elevated and noble sphere, and all those who still believe in the influence of Christianity on the progress of civilisation. The proceeds of the work are to be devoted to the propagation of the Faith in China.

The United States Silver Commission. We have received a copy of a pamphlet containing the testimony of Mr. Francis P. Knight, of China, before the United States Silver Commission, in January, 1877. Mr. Knight has been long resident in China, and his observations are, therefore, entitled to much consideration. Respecting the proposal made some time back to establish a Chinese Mint, he considers that the result would be to reduce and finally altogether to abolish the use of foreign coins, but to increase the demand for, and employment of silver in China.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—APPEAL CASE.

BENECKE, SOUCHAY, AND CO. (APPELLANTS) V. WHITTALL AND OTHERS, TRUSTEES OF THE ESTATE OF AUGUSTINE HEARD AND CO. (RESPONDENTS).

This was an appeal against a decree of the Supreme Court at Hong Kong, dated Feb. 16, 1876, and made in a suit in which the above-named appellants were defendants. The suit was instituted by the trustees of Augustine Heard and Co. (the respondents), in virtue of a deed of assignment expressed to be made and entered into by and between the members of the firm of Augustine Heard and Co. and their creditors, dated the 19th April, 1875, and under provisions of the Hong Kong Bankruptcy Ordinance of 1864, and the object of the suit was to have certain mortgages, eight in number, given to the appellants (Benecke and Co.) by Augustine Heard and Co. set aside for the benefit of the creditors under the trust deed. The decree of the Supreme Court in Hong Kong set aside the mortgages given to the appellants, and against this judgment the present appeal was instituted.

The reasons for the appeal were as follows:—

1. Because the said deed of the 19th of April, 1875, did not place the respondents in the position of assignees in bankruptcy, and gave them no title enabling them to impeach the mortgages.

2. Because the appellants cannot be treated as having assented to the said deed, except upon the condition that their securities should not be compromised.

3. Because by virtue of the arrangements between the appellants and the said firm of Augustine Heard and Co., the proceeds of all bills drawn upon the appellants, under the aforesaid letters of credit, were specifically appropriated to the purposes of the said arrangements, and the said firm of Augustine Heard and Co. took upon themselves the duty and obligation of investing such proceeds pending the remittance thereof to the appellants, and could not use for their own purposes any part of such proceeds without, at any rate, incurring, as from the date of such user, an immediate and continuing liability to give good security for the same.

4. Because the said firm of Augustine Heard and Co. had applied for their own purposes the proceeds of bills for between £22,000 and £23,000, drawn under the said letters of credit, Nos. 936, 965, and 966, and were under an obligation to give security for the same at the time when the first six of the aforesaid mortgages were given, and as part of the same transaction with the giving of the said mortgages they obtained on the credit of the appellants, and for the purposes of carrying on their trade, and applied in payment of their trade debts the proceeds of bills for £20,000, drawn under the said letters of credit, Nos. 998 and 999.

5. Because all the impeached mortgages were given in pursuance of the obligation to give security for the proceeds of the said bills.

6. Because the said mortgages were not executed in contemplation of bankruptcy, but in the expectation that, by the help of the monies raised by the negotiation of the said bills for £20,000, the said firm might be enabled to tide over its difficulties and continue its business.

7. Because the evidence shows that the said mortgages were not executed with the intention of fraudulent preference, but from a sense of obligation.

8. Because the original execution of the said mortgages was not the voluntary and spontaneous act of the mortgagors.

9. Because the completion of the security intended to be given by the said mortgages of February, 1875, by the handing over of the mortgages and of the title deeds to agents of the appellants, and the granting of the further mortgages of the 13th of April, 1875, were the results of pressure on the part of the appellants, and in no sense voluntary or spontaneous acts on the part of the said firm of Augustine Heard and Co.

10. Because, independently of the operation of the said mortgages of February, 1875, the handing over of the title deeds of the property, under the circumstances above appearing, entitled the appellants to an equitable mortgage over all the hereditaments comprised in such title deeds, for securing the amount which they have paid in respect of the bills drawn upon them aforesaid, and to a lien on such title deeds for securing the same amount.

11. Because the appellants are entitled to consider the said mortgages as investments of the proceeds of the bills drawn under the said letters of credit.

12. Because the decree of the 16th of February, 1875, setting aside the said mortgages, and ordering the title deeds to be given up, is erroneous.

The respondents replied as under:

1. Because the appellants assented to the deed of the 19th April, 1875, and the said deed and the provisions of the 167th Article of the Bankruptcy Ordinance, 1864, relative thereto, were binding and effectual as against the appellants.

2. Because at the time of the date and execution of the said several deeds dated respectively the 2nd and 24th of February, 1875, and the 13th April, 1875, the firm of Augustine Heard and Co. were insolvent, and the said several deeds were executed by or on behalf of that firm voluntarily and in contemplation of bankruptcy and to give the appellants a fraudulent preference over the other creditors of the said firm.

3. Because the security attempted to be created by the said several deeds dated respectively the 2nd and 24th of February and the 13th of April, 1875, was a fraud on the other creditors, entitled to the benefit of the said deed of the 19th of April, 1875, and the appellants are not entitled to the benefit thereof.

4. Because the delivery of the said deeds on the 13th day of April constituted in substance an alienation of the whole of the debtors' available estate and effects, and was an act of bankruptcy; and the said deeds are therefore void as against the respondents claiming as trustees under the said deed of the 19th day of April.

The judgment of the Privy Council was delivered by Sir R. Collier on the 30th ult., and was to the effect that the requirements of Section 163 of the Hong Kong Ordinance not having been complied with, the deed for the benefit of the creditors under which the trustees of Heard and Co. claimed was only receivable in evidence under Section 165 of the same ordinance, and that the trustees had not the rights of an assignee in bankruptcy, Section 167 of the ordinance only applying to deeds registered under Section 163. Their Lordships also intimated that, even without this, the mortgages would probably have been found to be unimpeachable as having been given in pursuance of an antecedent obligation to give security.

The decree of the Supreme Court in Hong Kong was therefore reversed, and the appeal allowed with costs.

THE MAHARAJAH LELA.

Sir P. Benson Maxwell has addressed a letter to The Times in which the subjoined observations occur :—

"When, some weeks ago, Sir Charles Dilke asked, in the House of Commons, whether there was any truth in the assertion made by Maharajah Lela, upon his trial for the murder of Mr. Birch, that he had given himself up on the promise that he should not be prosecuted or put in peril, the Under Secretary for the Colonies replied that no such promise had ever been given him. With deference to Mr. Lowther, I think I see it plainly enough in the correspondence on Malay affairs just laid before Parliament. Sir W. Jervois, the Governor of the Straits Settlements, certainly instructed the messengers who were sent by the Maharajah of Johore to negosiate with Lela and his companions, that the only guarantee which could be given them was that if they surrendered themselves to us they should have a fair trial. But the Blue-book sets out the guarantee which was actually given ; and this document proves conclusively that the messengers never said a word to the Malay outlaws about either surrender or trial. It shows that they invited them to Johore to visit the native Chief of that country and their own ex-Sultan, who had found hospitality and protection there. It was not until they had been entrapped on that soil that they first heard of surrender to us and a guarantee of a fair trial. Then, indeed, the native Chief of Johore and the English Governor talked to them about surrendering themselves and about a fair trial. But they were then no longer free agents, and they were not offered leave to return to their hiding-place if they did not like to face the chances of a trial for their lives. But in an invitation from the Chief to visit him in his country, coupled with silence as to the surrender to the English authorities, which was the secret object for which the invitation was given, can the Colonial authorities and the Colonial Office have failed to see that promise of safety to which the Malay prisoners appealed ?"

THE SUEZ CANAL IN DANGER

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—It has been rumoured in London that a project is on foot to blow in the sides of the Canal and block it up, and that means would be taken to do the work under the British flag. Who are the projectors of such an infernal deed is not known ; but it is not impossible to do that with little inconvenience. A few determined men could easily procure some of our old steamers now lying rotting in our docks, partly load them with the materials and fall in with an accident when in the Canal. The authorities in charge of the Canal had better be on the alert. "Fore warned, fore armed."—Yours &c., EGYPTIAN.

FOREIGN INTERCOURSE WITH CHINA.

The Glasgow Herald contains an article on the "Later Intercourse of China with the West," in which some severe strictures are cast upon foreigners. The subjoined extract will serve to show the extreme nature of the writer's views :—When Western adventurers came to the shores of China and Japan in the 16th and 17th centuries they found the Governments disposed to traffic, but the conquests afterwards made by Europeans in the Philippines, Java, India, &c., and their cruel treatment of the natives, led these two eastern nations to apprehend like results to themselves if they did not soon take precautionary measures of exclusion and restriction. At that time there was the belief in Europe that the Pope had a right to dispose of all Pagan lands, and only men and means were wanted everywhere to carry it into effect. The mercantile contests and perpetual hostilities which existed among the English, Dutch, and Portuguese adventurers struck the Chinese, and to this day the character of Europeans is so represented, as a race of men intent alone on the gains of commercial traffic, and regardless altogether of the means of attainment—crafty, domineering, avaricious, contumacious—a people that must be kept down in every possible way, so as to insure their own safety—hence the jealousy and exclusion extended to them which was not exercised towards their more peaceful predecessors, the Arabs. "The worthless character of a numerous gathering of foreigners of all nations under no effective control is a national reproach, as well as a public calamity. All European Governments suffer in character and interests, both immediately and prospectively. This is the danger which has long threatened the worst consequences, in widespread hostility and interrupted trade. [After the treaty of Nanking we find foreign merchants all more or less venal and corrupt, launching into a wholesale system of smuggling and fraudulent devices for the evasion of duties. Foreign trade was demoralised, and converted into a game of haphazard and overreaching. Some of the treaty advantages were lost to us thereby, and new obstacles to further advance created. If the gross abuse of foreign flags, and the immunities they gave by treaty, had not been habitual and matters of notoriety, especially in the class of lorcha vessels—smugglers and pirates all—the particular ground of quarrel in which the Canton difficulty in 1857 began would in all probability never have arisen." A fruitful source of difficulty was the turbulent conduct of the sailors. In an early Chinese memorial foreigners were accused of levelling graves at Macao to make roads, and landing goods at points to evade duties and port charges. This latter charge has, unfortunately, received a practical commentary last year at Chingkiang, where, according to our Consul's report, smuggling seems to be revived among the foreign merchants.

THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.—This Association, which has for its object the advocacy and promotion of the public interests of the inhabitants of India, has held its annual meeting at Great George-street, Westminster. A proposal was made to erect a suitable hall and offices on a convenient site, near the Houses of Parliament, where members of the Legislature could conveniently attend the Association's public conferences on Indian subjects, the estimated cost being £20,000. The Association numbers among its members the Marquis of Salisbury, Lord Strathnairn, Sir Bartle Frere, Sir C. Trevelyan, Mr. Juland Danvers, and a large number of retired officers of the Indian services, as well as many of the Princes and Chiefs of the native Indian States.

THE death of Captain Dunlop, late of the China trade, at the advanced age of seventy-seven is announced. In 1837, when the China ports were opened he commenced running there, and brought the first cargo of tea from China to Glasgow in the Jane Brown. He subsequently commanded the Sappho and Investigator, in the China trade, till 1851, when he left the sea and obtained the appointment of shipping-master to the Sailors' Home, London, under the Board of Trade.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has appointed Mr. Henry Grant, now Consul at Brindisi, to be Consul at Naples, also to approve of Mr. J. E. Cobb as Consul at Stanley for the Republic of Chile ; Mr. Jorge Levvis as Consul at Kingston, Jamaica, for the Republic of Guatemala ; Mr. Harry Lewis Hayman as Vice-Consul at Birmingham for the King of the Belgians ; and Mr. Eduardo Toda as Vice-Consul at Hong Kong for the King of Spain.

IN the House of Commons Mr. Forsyth has given notice to ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was true that the Chinese invading force had come into collision with the troops of the Ameer of Kashgar, and whether it was the intention of the Secretary of State for India to interpose his good offices to restore peace, if possible, between China and Kashgar, and thus preserve the independence of the latter territory.

A MEETING of the United Society of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders who are locked out on the Clyde has been held. The lock-out was thoroughly discussed, and it was unanimously resolved to adhere to the former resolution—viz., not to resume work without an advance of 10 per cent. on time and piece work.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JULY 4.

The days of reports of commercial and banking companies have arrived. The principal one certainly was that of the Dutch Trading Company, which announced a dividend of f.53 per share. Great losses were sustained in Japan, viz., f. 627,000, so that the directors deliberated about the question whether it would not be advisable to finish with the commercial operations in that country, which have become more difficult since the war has broken out, and by which it has become almost impossible to settle the accounts. It was, however, resolved not to finish with Japan, but to diminish the trade with that country by abolishing several places of settlement. The profits made amounted to f.2,816,000, of which the State paid f.1,150,000. The first-named amount must, however, be reduced to f.1,957,000 by several losses. It seems, indeed, that the capital of this Company is too large, viz., f. 36,000,000. It is impossible to find employment for so large an amount. Perhaps it would be better to follow the example of the Amsterdam Bank, who resolved to diminish the capital from ten to six millions.

The re-elections for members of the Second Chamber of the States General, which ought to take place at Delft and Almeli, have given the foretelled result, Messrs. A. M. Schagen Van Leeuwen, and H. A. Insinger being elected. It has caused some astonishment that Mr. S. Gille Heringa obtained in Delft 1,060 votes, that is 400 less than he who won the battle. The papers are of course discussing the chances of the Cabinet, and they foretell day after day that the country has decided that the Ministers must resign. My opinion is that it would be very dangerous for the Liberal party to accept the reins of Government before the lower class instruction question has been decided.

H.M. the King has arrived at Zurich, where he lives in the hotel Bouwers, and where he will reside a very long time. The Prince of Orange will not leave the Hague ; he and his brother Alexander will be present at the opening of the exhibition of art and industry, which will take place on the 10th inst. Prince Henry started for Ems to compliment the German Emperor. The Emperor and Empress of Brazil will arrive here on the 15th inst.

According to the Amsterdam Courant, the treaty or sugar-convention will be under-written within a short delay, the difficulties which were brought on the tapis by our Cabinet being removed.

A provincial Historical Exhibition was opened some days ago at Leeuwarden. The collection is a very rich one. Those of your countrymen who visit Holland on their passage to the Rhine or Switzerland must not forget to make a trip to the capital of Friesland, in order to see the mass of curiosities.

I regret that I have to state the death of Mr. C. Hœkwater, ex-M.P. for Delft, and that of Dr. G. A. Schneither, who had so many friends in the East.

On the 21st inst. a detachment of 125 soldiers will start from Harderwyk, to reinforce the East India army. It seems that the enrolments are very easy now. About our war with Atchin we don't hear anything. It looks as if peace is already concluded.

Mr. W. Vissering concluded his studies at the academy at Leyden with an English dissertation entitled "On Chinese Currency, Coin, and Paper Money." I hope to be able to get a copy in order to forward it to you.

Much anxiety prevails here that the Colorado-beetle (Doryphora decemlineata) will be introduced in our country. Some days ago such an insect was found at Rotterdam. It had arrived with a steamer plying between that town and New York.

MR. GLADSTONE ON THE LATE RAJAH BROOKE.

THE promised article from Mr. GLADSTONE in defence of the statement which was recently made regarding Rajah BROOKE has appeared in the Contemporary Review for the present month. It is written with considerable force, but will scarcely add much to the author's reputation either for logic or for sincerity. The statement which he made and which was objected to by Lord GREY was a direct attack upon the reputation of the late Sir JAMES BROOKE; but, upon its being shown that this was unjustifiable, he stated that he intended to cast the whole blame of the matter upon the Government and not upon the individual. The article under notice may be described as the same theme enlarged. Mr. GLADSTONE stigmatises the attack on the pirates in the strongest terms; urges facts (such as there being women in some of the boats) which, if his version of them is not grossly exaggerated, could not possibly have been known to the attacking party, and chooses completely to ignore the direct contradiction given to his assertions by Admiral FARQUHAR, who distinctly states that as soon as the fight was over orders were issued to stay the pursuit. That in an attack upon pirates some persons who are innocent may have suffered with the guilty is unfortunately by no means unlikely; and the circumstance is one which no one, with ordinary feelings of humanity, can fail to deplore. But such sad accidents are common to war, and, in fact, to all use of main force; and it is certainly no argument against the justifiability of an attack upon a horde of notorious pirates, that, after the action, it appeared that some who were innocent suffered with the guilty, when there were no means of ascertaining the fact before.

Beyond this appeal to the feelings Mr. GLADSTONE'S article is no reply whatever to Lord GREY'S remonstrance, and the manner in which he condescends to special pleading may be judged by the following passages :—

> The name (Rajah Brooke's), which I used simply to identify the case, has been treated as the subject of my charge; and it is forgotten that I at once proceeded to state explicitly the fact, that the entire responsibility was assumed after examination by the Government and by Parliament.

Immediately following this Mr. GLADSTONE says :—

> But, secondly, I have no means of determining—and I should be very wrong, therefore, in affecting to determine—the degree of participation which can be fastened upon Sir James Brooke in the particular matter that formed the subject of my reference. That he counselled, planned, and generally directed the plan of the operations, there is, I apprehend, no doubt. That he supported and applauded in the mass what had been done, after it had been done, is certain. But, in approving after the fact, he only stands as do other approvers who held the same language at home and elsewhere.

In other words, Mr. GLADSTONE does not know whether Sir JAMES BROOKE was responsible for the alleged cruelty, but has no doubt that he "counselled, planned, and generally directed the plan of operations." At this point we are content to take leave of the greatest logician of the age.

THE CASE OF DE BUSSCHE V. ALT.

THE important point involved in the above case is that concerning trade customs. Nothing is more common than to set up a so-called custom of trade in support of a transaction which has been conducted contrary to well-known principles of law or equity. But it is quite a mistake to imagine that any principle of action, even if very generally acted upon, will be looked upon by the Courts as a mercantile custom binding upon the parties to a contract. In order that a custom may be thus recognisable at law, it must have two essentials: it must be universal, and it must be reasonable; universal in the sense of being accepted in all transactions in the trade to which it applies, and reasonable in the sense of not going counter to any well-known principle of morality or law. With respect to the last essential the Courts are not needlessly strict, and will give due weight to customs even when they are in opposition to general law, provided that they do not go counter to any great and well-known principles of public or mercantile morality. In accordance with this, we find that Vice-Chancellor HALL, in the judgment under notice, says that the custom which was set up with regard to taking over steamers at a minimum limit was "too loose to be considered a custom," but goes on to say :—"In reference to a custom it is not unimportant to consider and bear in mind that for the purpose of establishing a known and recognised custom, contrary to, and at variance with the general views of equity and right and law as between principal and agent, that to establish such a custom in a place like Japan, the place where the transaction of the sale took place, a country which has only been established in reference to commercial relations with other countries for a very few years antecedent to the time the transaction took place, the evidence must be very clear indeed," thus restricting himself within the possibility of a custom even of a doubtful character being recognised if supported by very strong evidence, but at the same time indicating that this is only a bare possibility, and in fact one so small that the great weight of probability is against its being recognised either in law or in equity. It may, therefore, be safely concluded that in general no mercantile custom which is unreasonable in itself, or which goes counter to recognised principles of commercial morality will be recognised by the Courts; and in connection with the case under notice it may be observed that there is no principle more thoroughly established at law than that a person acting as an agent for the sale of goods on account of another cannot himself become the purchaser. The case, therefore, forms a warning against entering upon transactions (even though, as we are glad to see the Vice-Chancellor fully recognised with respect to the defendant, it be done in perfect good faith), based upon any custom contrary to the salient principles of commercial law and morality, and it is the more important that this warning should be heeded, seeing that the judgment shows that where such has been the case the party injured can sue for damages, even though he may only discover the irregularity at a date long subsequent to the transaction called in question.

OFFICIAL INTERCOURSE AT PEKING.

THE invitation which has been given by the Prince of KUNG to the Foreign Ministers at Peking to come to his private residence and those of the other members of the Tsungle Yamen in friendly visits, is one of the most satisfactory proofs which we have for a long time had of an improvement in the tone of our official intercourse with the Chinese. It is evident that some portion of the old spirit of exclusiveness as regards foreigners is wearing out, and that the Court of Peking is beginning to recognise that it is at once wise and courteous to treat Europeans in some other spirit than as people whom it is desirable at all hazards to keep at bay, and whom it is impossible to deal with upon any footing of equality. There can be no doubt that this salutary change is to be traced at least in a considerable degree to the influence which has been exerted upon the Peking officials by the establishment of the Legation here. The Ministers have received the utmost courtesy from all classes of society, from the general masses no less than from those in the highest positions; and it is impossible for this fact not to have produced a salutary effect by making the authorities at Peking feel that for once they have undoubtedly been outdone in politeness by the outer-barbarian. The moral effect of this feeling is obvious. The Chinese always pride themselves upon their politeness, and cannot feel satisfied while an opening is left to accuse them of not being willing to return as good as they receive in this respect. It is sincerely to be hoped that the improvement in the tone of our diplomatic relations, which has of late become apparent in a variety of directions—in the readiness with which the proclamation concerning the MARGARY difficulty was posted in the various Chinese cities; in the orderly manner in which the new ports have (with the exception of one slight hitch) been opened; and, lastly, in the invitation now sent to the foreign Ministers to make friendly calls upon the high authorities—will be continued and form the prelude to a more satisfactory state of matters than that hitherto existing. The larger portion of our difficulties with China have resulted simply from mutual misunderstanding, and nothing can tend more to remove this than granting facilities for friendly intercourse and opportunities for discussing matters of general interest without the restraint which is of necessity called for when they are brought on the tapis in an official form.

WE have more than once indicated that the SECRETARY of STATE for Foreign Affairs did not feel satisfied at some of the clauses in the Chefoo Convention, and notably those relating to the Lekin tax. Our views are now confirmed by a telegram from China, given in another column, announcing that the Chinese Government have consented to open fresh negotiations on the subject. This announcement also confirms the statement we ventured to make, that the publication of the Blue-book—containing the concluding correspondence on the Yunnan Expedition and the Chefoo Convention—was delayed in order to give time for the rectification of the unsatisfactory clauses in the said Convention. The delay, however, has caused much inconvenience and loss to the merchants engaged in the trade, and we regret that Lord DERBY should have adopted this course. We submit that the Under-Secretary should have been directed in answer to the numerous interrogations by members of Parliament, to state the real cause of delay, and not that assigned, viz., the non-completion of Sir THOMAS WADE'S report. We are now drawing to the close of the present Session, and it will be almost impossible for members who are interested in the question to obtain a day for the discussion of the papers when presented.

IN the present day, when so much attention is being paid to matters of education, the description which is given by a correspondent at Canton of the Chinese examinations will, we doubt not, be perused with much interest. The subject is not a new one to those who have resided in China, but our correspondent gives some details which are not very generally known. The description of the classes who are excluded from passing literary examinations is characteristic of Chinese society and is of some interest as showing by implication the position which the army occupies in that country, a soldier being ranked with slaves and other proscribed person, a play-actor also being relegated to a similar position. The precautions taken to prevent any deception in the examinations, rigid though they are, are not proof against all artifice, as Chinese scholars who are unable to come up to examination standard, and cannot, on account of their being searched, adopt Mr. Verdant Green's plan of having an "examination coat" with pockets specially designed for "cribs" of particular subjects, occasionally contrive to meet the difficulty by getting a more erudite friend to personate them. This ruse, however, is naturally attended with some risk, and is not very frequently resorted to. On the whole, the examinations are fairly conducted; and the general desire for learning is one of the most creditable features in the Chinese character.

A SUGGESTION is made by a correspondent in Shanghai to the effect that possibly the Home Government might be instrumental (we presume by giving the necessary instructions to the Minister at Peking) in inducing the Chinese Authorities to devote a portion of the tonnage dues to keeping the River at Shanghai in order. It is hardly to be supposed that the Foreign-office would take any steps in the matter unless it were specially referred to it from Peking; but at the same time there is no doubt that the Chinese Authorities have been lax in regard to it. The treaty provides that the consuls and local officials shall "consult together" as to devoting the tonnage dues to keeping up the necessary buoys and beacons, and so the question is really of a local character; but as this matter in common with so many others has come to be practically under the Inspectorate of Customs, and that institution is now centralised at Peking, the nature of the case is somewhat altered. In connection with the subject, it is only just to note that the residents at Shanghai, being specially interested in the preservation of the river, might reasonably be expected to pay at least some share of the expenses.

IN the report of the opening of the Tea market—which we give in another column—it will be seen that the results are even more disastrous than the past few years. To say that the importers are utterly demoralised and seem bent on smashing the market and each other is about all we can state at present. We trust, however, that bankers will make a note of the losers, should the present state of affairs—in which, apparently, a neck or nothing race at selling, regardless of all considerations of prudence, is being run—be continued.

THE appointment of Sir JAMES ROBERT LONGDEN, K.C.M.G., late Governor and Commander-in-Chief of British Guiana, to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon and its dependencies, was gazetted on the 3rd inst.

THE OCEAN RACE FROM CHINA.

It will be in the remembrance of our readers that in the early part of the year much interest was excited among nautical critics and those interested in the China trade as to the respective merits of the two new steamers Loudoun Castle, built by Messrs. J. and G. Thompson, for the Castle Line of steamers from London to China, and the Gleneagles, built by the London and Glasgow Engineering Company for the Glen Line of steamers. Opinion was somewhat divided as to the respective merits of the steamers, and their progress on the out and home voyages has been watched with the greatest interest. On the outward passage the time occupied by both steamers was nearly equal, but as the Loudoun Castle was detained an unusual time in the Canal, through another steamer getting aground a-head of her, it was considered that she had the best of it. Opinions in China were, however, divided, and heavy bets were laid on both vessels as to which should be first in London. Both vessels were loaded with the new teas at the same rate of freight, and the Gleneagles left Hankow at 8 P.M. of May 23, the Loudoun Castle following at 1 A.M. of the 24th, five hours after; both passed Woosung at 5 P.M. of May 25, the Loudoun Castle arriving at Singapore at 2.30 P.M., June 2, and the Gleneagles about two hours later; after taking a supply of coals the steamers again started, the Loudoun Castle being about five hours in advance, and ultimately arriving at Suez at 3 A.M. of the 21st, the Gleneagles arriving at 8 P.M. of the same day. Both vessels passed rapidly through the Canal, coaled at Port Said, the Loudoun Castle leaving that port at 2 A.M. of the 22nd, and the Gleneagles about twenty hours thereafter. The Loudoun Castle passed Dover at 7 P.M. of July 2, and after waiting at anchor some hours for the flood-tide, proceeded direct to the South West India Dock, which she entered at 6 A.M. on the morning of the 3rd, and delivered the cargo on the same day to the importers, a considerable portion of which found buyers on the day of arrival. The passage of the Loudoun Castle is unprecedented in point of speed, the time occupied from Woosung to the Downs being thirty-eight days two hours, including all stoppages, and from Hankow to the Docks forty days five hours, including all stoppages. The Gleneagles arrived in the Downs at six o'clock on the morning of the 4th, and docked at nine the same evening, having been detained by hot bearings. In a friendly lottery, which took place at Hankow, the Gleneagles was the favourite steamer, the Loudoun Castle second, and the Glenartney third.

VISIT OF THE CHINESE ENVOYS TO IPSWICH.

On the 2nd inst. the Chinese Envoys paid a visit to the well-known works of Messrs. Ransomes, Sims and Head, and Messrs. Ransomes and Rapier at the above place. The event went off in every respect in a successful manner, and will doubtless tend to give their Excellencies a very favourable impression of foreign engineering appliances. It may be interesting to note that Messrs. Ransomes and Rapier supplied the plant, machinery, &c., for the Woosung Railway. They sent out the "Pioneer," the first locomotive engine in China, and also the "Celestial Empire," and the "Flowery Land," and a fourth engine, called the "Vice Roy," was despatched by them to China about a month ago.

The party consisted of the two Envoys, their Excellencies Kuo and Lieu, the Chinese Secretary and Attaches, Dr. Macartney, English Secretary of Legation, Mr. Hillier, of the Consular Service, and others. They were met at the Liverpool-street Station by Mr. Rapier as representing the two firms, and by Mr. Allen Ransome, and left in a specially fitted saloon carriage at ten o'clock. At Colchester Mr. T. C. Cobbold, M.P., one of the Ipswich borough members, joined the party. Ipswich was reached in two hours, the Envoys expressing their astonishment that they should have been able in that short time to have covered a distance which, in their own country, would have taken two or three days. Mr. Robert Charles Ransome, Mr. John Head, Mr. James Edward Ransome, Mr. E. G. Midgley, and numerous other gentlemen were in waiting at the Ipswich Station and received the party, who were conducted to a number of carriages, and they were forthwith driven direct to a field by the side of the Bucklesham-road, in the occupation of Mr. Watkins, of the Purdis Farm, Nacton, where, in a spacious tent erected for the purpose, they were entertained at luncheon. Mr. R. C. Ransome occupied the chair, on his right being Kuo Ta-jen, the Chief Envoy; Dr. Macartney, English secretary, Chinese Legation; T. C. Cobbold, Esq., M.P.; Mr. F. Liu, attache Chinese Legation; and Mr. Li Shu-Chang, secretary. On the Chairman's left was Lieu Ta-jen, assistant Chinese Minister; the Mayor of Ipswich, Mr. Walton Turner, Fung-Zee, interpreter to the Chinese Legation; and Mr. Chang-szu-Hsun, attaché, and Mr. Head. Mr. J. E. Ransome and Mr. J. R. Jefferies occupied the vice-chairs. At the conclusion of the luncheon Mr. R. C. Ransome alluded to the honour which the members of the Embassy had paid, not only to his firm and the Waterside Works, but also to the whole town, by their visit. It would have given the members of the two firms great gratification to have entertained them at their own private houses if time had permitted them to have done so. He hoped they would enjoy the day, and preserve an agreeable recollection of their visit. He also trusted that the Embassy which was commenced with them might continue for a long series of years, so that this, and the great country they represented, might become continuously and steadfastly friends. He concluded by giving the health of the Chinese Ministers. This speech was interpreted by Dr. Macartney, and Kuo Ta-jen, who, in reply, spoke in Chinese, thanked the Messrs. Ransomes for the fine entertainment they had given, and for their invitation to inspect agricultural implements, and hoped that China would not be long in adopting them. Lieu Ta-jen also acknowledged the toast, and he caused some amusement by his somewhat vehement style of address. He said he was not aware that there were so many good points amongst us as Englishmen, or that our trade was so large, and he added that when he went back to his own country he should have much to report. The Company then proceeded to the field where the agricultural experiments, which were all of the most interesting character, were commenced. The Envoys were first shown the most perfect method of cutting and making hay by means of mower, horse rake, and haymaker of the most improved construction, and the great economy effected over the old system of hand labour. The celerity of the work may be judged of by the fact that by these machines the work can be accomplished in an hour at 2s. an acre that would take a man eight hours at 4s. an acre. On a portion of the cleared land adjoining some dozen ploughs were at work, illustrative of the different systems of ploughing in various parts of the world. The visitors did not fail to notice the sharp regular looking work of the English implements, and were much interested in the light iron ploughs specially adapted for tropical agriculture, to the requirements of which Messrs. Ransomes, Sims and Head have for many years devoted their particular attention. The new multiple ploughs of the firm were regarded also with considerable admiration. These ploughs are coming rapidly into use in the various corn-growing countries of the globe, and effect a great saving in men and oxen. The implement requires practically no guiding when at work, and by means of the patent lifting apparatus it is turned at the headland and transported from place to place with the greatest facility. The operation of thrashing was next inspected, the thrashing machine exhibited being fitted with an improved apparatus for chopping and bruising the straw. In South America, Spain, Italy, and other hot countries where hay cannot be grown as food for cattle, these animals are fed on the straw from which the grain has been trodden under the feet of horses, and which has itself been chopped and bruised by the action of the animals' hoofs. This bruising is very necessary, on account of the woody nature of the straw of hot countries, which contains a much greater quantity of silica than that grown in more northern regions. In the thrashing machine exhibited this chopping and bruising is effected by an ingenious mechanical arrangement, and being free from dung or dirt of any kind, the chopped straw delivered by the machine is much superior to that gathered from the ancient clay-thrashing floor.

The most attractive feature of the exhibit, however, appeared to be Head and Schemioth's portable engine for burning straw, reeds, dry grass, cotton stalks, brushwood, &c. This engine was brought out in 1873 to meet a want long felt, viz., a motive power for use in countries where coal and wood cannot be obtained, or only at a price quite prohibitive. It has rapidly sprung into public favour, and many hundreds have been already manufactured for all parts of the world. The Envoys and their suite attentively regarded the perfect manner in which the engine was keeping up steam stoked with straw, brushwood, and reeds, and the leisurely way in which it was being fed by the attendant; and they learned with evident interest that several of these engines have been sent to the Indian tea gardens for working with dry jungle grass as fuel. Many hundreds of acres are also irrigated in Egypt by these engines with fuel supplied by the refuse stalks of the cotton plant. It was explained to the Envoys that the straw-burning apparatus could be adapted to engines for steam-ploughing also, and the result of the foregoing experiments was to show that the leading agricultural operations of the farm—ploughing, thrashing, grinding, &c.—can be effected in the most perfect manner by steam power generated by fuel obtained on the estate, thus rendering the proprietor of the steam engine entirely independent of wood and coal.

A complete steam plough of Messrs. Fowler's was also working on the ground, and it may easily be conceived that the ease and perfection of its performance were regarded with no small wonder by the Chinese. The experiments concluded with the exhibition of one of the new traction engines of the firm, by which the machinery had previously been hauled to the trial field, and the Envoys then returned to Ipswich to visit the manufactory, passing through the various shops and carefully watching the working of the numerous labour-saving machines which are employed at the present day on so large a scale in the manufacture of agricultural implements. One of Messrs. J. and H. Gwynne's centrifugal pumps was shown drawing water from the quay adjoining, also a large direct action pumping engine recently manufactured for the district of Bombay. These pumps can raise 1,000 gallons of water, a minute at a cost of one penny per 1,000 quarts.

The party then crossed the river to the works of Messrs. Ransomes and Rapier. It was here that they were shown a great variety of engineering operations, including the manufacture of turntables, switches, tanks, and other railway machinery, and they were much interested with the process of making the keys and treenails. Before leaving the party were driven to Stoke Hall, the seat of Mr. R. J. Ransome, where they partook of refreshment. Mrs. Ransome, Mrs. Head, and her two little daughters, and other ladies were present, and were much interested in the Oriental visitors. The party left by the six o'clock train, and as it started three hearty cheers were given by the crowd assembled, and were courteously acknowledged by the Envoys, who were evidently much gratified at the hearty reception which they had met.

Monetary and Commercial.

The Loudoun Castle arrived in dock on the 3rd inst., and a few sales were made that day at 1s. 2d. and 2s. 5d. About 12,000 packages have been offered at public auction, and prices at the first sale were on the whole better than was expected, as compared with those obtainable by private contract. This is accounted for by the unwillingness of the trade to commit themselves with the knowledge that there are heavy supplies close at hand. At the auction Thursday prices were much lower, being about 2d. under those of the previous day. One parcel was sold, at Wednesday's sale, at 1s. 6d., and its counterpart on Thursday fetched only 1s. 2¾d. The reception of the Teas was upon the whole by no means eager, notwithstanding the comparatively moderate range of values. The opinion expressed as to the quality in China is fully confirmed on this side. The outturn has been very varied, and the profits on some parcels have been more than counterbalanced by losses upon others. Some of the sales, however, show a loss of as much as 4d. per lb., while the profits upon some few lots sold are only from 1d. to 2d. Two further public sales announced for Friday were withdrawn, probably in consequence of the discouraging results of the previous auctions.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 30th ult. was 2,735,875 lbs., or a decrease, compared with the previous return, of 13⅜ per cent. The amount taken for home consumption was 1,939,571 lbs., while 440,265 lbs. was removed coastwise; 312,595 lbs. was exported, 40,259 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,185 lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received was £48,489, or an increase of 2½ per cent.

The tone of the Silk market is slightly better, but holders are unwilling to sell at present rates, and business has in consequence been limited. According to last reports, the general opinion is that the European crops will turn out to be about half of an average yield. Since the opening of the market in Shanghai, reported in our last, only 100 bales are advised as settled, and we must look for advice of more business before we take this as the basis on which operators are willing to buy; one thing, however, must not be lost sight of, namely, that no quantity of new Silk can possibly arrive from China till September, thus giving holders here more time to relieve themselves of their stocks.

In the Produce Markets the principal articles have remained in a dull and unsatisfactory condition, the demand for actual consumption being limited, and speculative inquiry absent; the tendency in prices has, therefore, been again downwards. Coffee is quiet, but good and fine qualities of Plantation Ceylon are firm. Sugar continues extremely quiet. Cutch has declined in value. Gambier is firm and steady. Spices have been very dull. Tin is lower, Straits being quoted £68 per ton. Black Pepper is active, with an advancing tendency. Rice has also improved, floating cargoes being sold on higher terms.

The partnership heretofore subsisting between Alexander

Lawrence, Charles Clark, and Alexander Macclesfield Lawrence, trading as merchants under the firm of Lawrence, Clark and Co., has been dissolved. Messrs. Lawrence will henceforth carry on business under the firm of Lawrence, Son and Co., at 11, Great Winchester-street, and Mr. Clark will carry on business at Windsor Chambers under the firm of Charles Clark and Co. The debts and liabilities of the late firm will be paid by Mr. Clark.

Notice has been given that the partnership between Messrs. Sam Mendel, John Ludwig Siltzer, Gustavus Roskillr, and Albert Windmuller, carrying on business at Manchester, under the style of "John Siltzer and Co," has been dissolved, so far as relates to Mr. Mendel. The business will in future be carried on by the other partners under the same style.

The failure is announced of Mr. Hermann Clason, carrying on business at Bombay, Liverpool, and Stuttgart, under the title of H. Clason and Co., as an East India merchant. The liabilities are estimated at about £100,000.

The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph Company for the month of June amounted to £24,126, against £11,407 for June, 1876, showing an increase of £12,719; and those of the Eastern Telegraph Company to £45,477, against £26,249 for the corresponding period of 1876.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts in June, 1877, were £19,663. The total receipts from January 1 to June 30, 1877, were £95,819, and in the corresponding months of 1876, £95,382; 1875, 77,331.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 4th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £159,000; Bombay, £80,000; and Madras, £1,000. Tenders on all Presidencies for bills and telegrams at 1s. 8 11-16d., and above will receive in full. There is no change in the price of remittances compared with last week, but the demand has apparently been less.

The P. and O. Steamer Bokhara, due at Southampton on the 9th inst., brings the largest amount of specie received for some time. In all it totals up £959,025, from the following sources: From Australia, 701,350 sovereigns and £175,363 in bar gold; from Japan, £58,190 in gold coin; from Bombay, £9,620 in bar gold; from Shanghai, £5,400; from Hong Kong, £3,965; and from Alexandria, £5,137 in gold coin.

The inquiries for Bar Silver have been limited, and the price has declined to 53⅞d. per oz. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 54½d. per oz., but the market is not very active at that price.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says there has been no change in the position of our market during the past month, which has continued exceedingly depressed for nearly all low grade Teas; the chief feature noticeable has been the manifest desire of importers to quit holdings in these descriptions, and commou Congous which have been pushed off largely at public sale have gone at a further reduction in value. In Medium class there has been little doing, and Fine and Finest being scarce have fairly maintained previous quotations, and the same remarks will apply to Red Leaf and Kaisow Teas. The interest of the moment is centered in the New Season's Congou arrivals, the first steamer to hand being the Loudoun Castle, on the morning of the 3rd inst., and the second the Gleneagles, on the 4th, making the passage from Woosung in the wonderfully short space of thirty-eight and a-half and forty days respectively. The New Teas were placed upon the market immediately after arrival, and sales effected ranging from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10½d., and on the following day at public auction at 1s. 5d. to 1s. 9d., and privately at 1s. 2½d. up to 2s. 8d. for extra fine for Russia. Heavy public sales also took place on the 5th, at which a reduction of quite 2d. per lb. on the above prices must be noted, something like a panic having taken place in the market, occasioned by the unusually large quantities of New Teas sent to public sale. The quality of the samples already shown have nothing striking to recommend them, many being poor in make and wanting in strength; there are, however, some really fine parcels amongst them.

Quotations.—Congou: New season's, 1s. 1½d. up to 2s. 8d. for finest; old black and red siftings, 6½d. to 7d. Black Leafs: Low to good common, 6¾d. to 8½d.; fair to good medium, 9d. to 1s. 3d.; fine and finest 1s. 4d. to 1s. 10d. Red Leafs: Low to good common, 6¾d. to 8½d.; fair to good medium, 9d. to 1s. 3d.; fine and finest 1s. 4d. to 1s. 9d. Tayshans: New common, 9d. to 11d.; good, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. Souchong: Few transactions. Oolong: Sales in New Formosa, good medium at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4d. Scented Capers: Old, difficult to move; new, Canton kinds, fair common to good, 11d. to 1s. 3d.; medium to fine, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. Scented Orange Pekoe: Canton, fair common to good, 11d. to 1s. 2d.; medium to fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 7d. Green Teas: Recent sales show no improvement in value. Gunpowder, 7d. to 3s. for finest; Imperial, 5d. to 1s. 4d.; Hyson, 6d. to 2s. 2d.; Young Hyson, 5d. to 1s. 10d.

Messrs. James Goddard, jun., and Co.'s Circular says :—The Loudoun Castle was in dock on the morning of the 3rd inst. Samples were quickly on the market and a few sales made. In a few hours an auction was advertised of 3,700 packages for the next day. On the 4th other catalogues were again issued for the 5th inst., amounting to 10,810 packages, and a futher auction of 3,509 packages ex Gleneagles, just in dock. It is impossible to give any adequate idea of the market. The quality of the crop is considered very indifferent.

Stocks	50,338,890 ...	58,319,332

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular says :—The Loudoun Castle, from Hankow, arrived on the 3rd inst., followed by the Gleneagles on the 4th inst., with the New Season's Black Leaf Congous. The quality is considered inferior, and the dealers showed more indifference in purchasing than usual. The sales during the first day were small, at 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 10½d. for fair to fine, 2s. 5d. being paid for a parcel of finest. Since then nearly 19,000 packages have been sold "without reserve," at irregular rates, showing a reduction varying from 2d. to 3d. per lb. As regards Teas of old import there has hardly been any inquiry whatever, and business has been confined to public auctions.

SILK.

Messrs. John Kershaw, Kilburn and Co.'s Circular says :—There was very little doing in the market during June until the public sales, when some business was done in the several classes of Silk at easy rates; since then there has been more inquiry for medium and common Tsatlees on a basis of 16s. for good No. 5, but holders will not sell at this price, and business is thereby restricted. There have been some transactions in Japans at 16s. 6d. to 17s. for 3 to 2½ Maibash, but here again the rates are so low that holders decline to sell to any extent. In Cantons more firmness is shown, and where transactions occur they support previous quotations. The deliveries in June were an improvement, but still they are so poor that the stocks show very little alteration.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says :—The position of our market can no longer be looked upon as unsatisfactory. The result of the European crop seems to be about half an average, an excess of only 10 to 15 per cent. over last year. The arrivals of new season's Silk at Shanghai are 2,500 bales, against 24,000 and 23,000, and settlements 100 bales, against 14,000 and 13,000 in 1876 and 1875; the Chinese holding for rates equal to 1s. 6d. per lb. above the prices now ruling in London and Lyons, which are in many cases identical and in none more than 10 per cent. above those of July, 1876. The deliveries though poor show an increase on the past two months, and some of the unemployed looms, both here and on the Continent, are being put to work.

Messrs. Hogg, Walker, and Co.'s Circular states that there has been more inquiry during the last few days, and a fair business has been done at the decline in prices recently established. Deliveries from 1st to 4th inst. inclusive—China, 247 bales; Canton, 37 bales; Japan, 24 bales; Bengal, 2. Total, 310 bales.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 224 bales met a poor demand, and only 70 bales found buyers; white £9 5s. to £11, medium to good medium £12 to £15 5s., good £16 to £17 10s.

COCOANUT OIL continues steady but inactive; Cochin is quoted £42, Ceylon in pipes £37 15s. to £38.

COFEEE.—During the past few days an upward tendency for Plantation Ceylon has prevailed, and closing prices show an advance upon those for last mail. Native has been dull of sale. Quotations are:—Plantation triage 80s. to 96s., common grey to coloury small 94s. to 101s., fine ordinary 99s., low middling 101s. to 104s. 6d., middling 105s. to 107s. 6d., good middling to fine middling coloury 108s. to 110s. 6d., dull to fine bold 111s. to 120s., pea-berry 105s. 6d. to 113s., Native ordinary and small 75s. to 81s., good ordinary 86s. to 88s., closing 86s. to 86s. 6d., bold 90s. to 92s., peaberry 89s. to 91s.

COTTON.—A dull tone has prevailed, especially during the past few days, when only limited sales have taken place, and prices have gradually declined. In East India the reduction for a fortnight is only 1-16d. to ⅛d., but in American ¼d. per lb. Closing prices on the spot are:—Tinnivelley 5¼d. to 5¾d., fair to good; Western Madras 4¾d. to 5⅝d., barely fair to good; Salem 4¾d., middling fair; Broach 5¾d., good; Coconada 5¼d., good fair; Sawginned Dharwar 5⅛d., good fair; Bengal 4 9-16d. to 5d., fully fair to good.

CUTCH has declined in value. At auction 300 boxes soft Pegu (G. W. & Co.) sold at 23s., and subsequently 100 boxes middling soft Calcutta Pegu (J. S. & Co.) sold at a further decline, viz., at 20s., the first lot 18s.

CAMPHOR.—400 tubs Japan have been sold at a price not disclosed.

EBONY.—At auction 2 tons Ceylon were bought in at £15.

GAMBIER continues firm. On the spot whole bales are quoted 20s. 3d. to 20s. 6d. For arrival about 250 tons May-June and July-August shipment have been sold at 20s. 6d. to 20s. 9d. ex ship, closing at the latter price. At auction 108 bags rather blocky and damaged cubes sold at 25s. 6d. to 26s.

GUM COPAL.—36 cases 858 bags Manila met a restricted demand, and were all bought in, black, yellow, &c., at 20s. to 28s., good hard 30s.

HEMP.—The market for Manila remains in the same dull state reported for some time past, but prices are without further change; about 500 bales have been sold privately during the week and the small supply at auction, consisting entirely of damaged, sold at previous prices. At auction 308 bales damaged Cebu chiefly sold, 1st class at £27, 2nd ditto £25 15s. to £26 5s.

JAPAN WAX continues quiet, with small private sales of saucer at 45s. 6d. At auction 662 cases were bought in, saucer 45s. to 47s., squares 46s., except a few medium saucer which sold at 45s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black has been in improved demand, and business has been done privately at firmer rates, including 1,000 bags Penang at 3 7-16d. to 3 9-16d., and 100 bags Singapore at 3⅜d. cash. For arrival 100 tons West Coast Penang have been sold at 3⅝d., also about 150 tons Singapore at 3⅝d., Penang at 3½d. In public sale with a good demand 1,314 bags at auction were all sold, 57 bags sound Singapore at 3⅜d., 797 bags damaged ditto at 3⅜d., for first-class, 260 bags sound Penang at 3 9-16d., and 200 bags Malabar at 4⅜d. to 4½d. White: The market continues quiet, but prices are unchanged. Of 414 bags Singapore 200 bags sold, fair at 6½d., chiefly good at 6¾d., fine at 6⅞d. Of 336 bags Penang 150 bags sold at 6d., a few good bold at 6¼d. to 6⅜d.

PLUMBAGO.—230 barrels Ceylon were all bought in, lump 15s., dust 9s., except 50 barrels good bright small lump, which sold at 14s. 3d., fine 15s. per cwt.

RICE.—With a steady demand for floating cargoes business has been done at again firmer rates. Four floating cargoes have been sold, viz.:—The Hedwidge, 1,332 tons Bassein, April sailing, at 9s. 9d. open charter. 500 tons Ngakyouk Rangoon, per Enterprise, February sailing, at 9s. 3d. ex ship. The Zorida, 679 tons Rangoon, April sailing, at 10s. 1½d. open charter, and the Thorvaldsen, 949 tons Necransie, off coast, at 9s. 4½d. for Hamburg. About 850 tons Rangoon, ex Fidia D., arrived, have been sold at 9s. 6d. ex ship to 9s. 8½d. ex quay, and on the spot 1,000 bags new Ngakyouk Rangoon have been sold at 9s. 6d.

SUGAR.—Complete stagnation prevails in the market, for with little demand and an absence of pressure to sell business has been of a trivial character. In auction 8,236 bags China met few offers and were all bought in, ordinary to fair brown clayed at 20s. 6d. to 23s., excepting 650 bags washed, which sold at 20s. to 20s. 6d. Privately 3,000 bags clayed Manila have been sold, price not reported.

RATTANS.—At auction 13,885 bundles (53 tons) met a moderate demand, and 9,186 bundles Straits sold at £11 7s. 6d. to £15 5s., with damaged at £10 to £14 2s. 6d., and 719 bundles long Java (damaged) at £20 to £23 15s. per ton.

SHELLS.—The periodical sales were held on the 3rd inst.—Mother-o'-Pearl: Large supplies were brought forward, the total comprising 2,023 cases 232 casks 1,461 bags, &c. (including 272 cases, 58 casks, 738 bags, Mussel and Linga). Manila, of which the supply was heavy, and only a small part sold at a decline of 10s. per cwt.:—633 cases, 6 baskets Manila were nearly all withdrawn, only about 50 cases being sold. rather mixed to fair bold at £7 to £7 17s. 6d., defective at £4 12s. 6d to £5 7s. 6d., chicken at £6 17s. 6d. 19 barrels, 18 cases bold Macassar were bought in at £10 to £10 10s. Tortoise: 61 cases East India were chiefly sold, pickings and low 5s. 6d. to 9s. 6d., ordinary to medium shell, 10s. to 13s. 6d., good medium to good Singapore, &c., 14s. to 17s. 6d., one lot fine 19s. 6d., yellow belly 3s. Green Snail Shells: The large quantity of 745 baskets offered was far in excess of the demand, which remains very languid, and barely 20 baskets sold at again easier rates, very small at 1¾d., small and medium 2⅜d., the remainder bought in, small and medium 4d. to 4½d., bold 6¼d. to 6½d. Ear Shells met more demand, and of 70 cases 66 bales 110 bags and 9 tons loose Japan silver met few offers, and only 70 cases and the loose sold at dearer rates, common defective chiefly loose £4 to £6 15s., untrimmed bold and medium defective £20 5s. to £24, bold £28 5s. to £38, extra bold £46, two lots superior cut pieces at £160 to £185 per ton.

SAGO.—In auction 1,630 bags went off slowly, and only 400 bags found buyers, but prices were unchanged; good fair small at 16s. 6d., good medium at 19s., large at 18s. 6d. to 19s.

TAPIOCA.—655 bags Singapore sold at firm rates, middling to good at 2¾d. to 2⅞d., fine white at 3d.; 80 bags grey Penang bought in at 2⅝d. Pearl.—Of 147 bags medium 92 bags sold without reserve at 18s. 6d., being 1s. lower, the rest bought in at 19s. to 20s. Flour: 89 bags Singapore sold, partly without reserve, at 1⅝d. to 1⅞d.

TIN.—Straits during the earlier part of the week met some inquiry, and realised rather higher prices, 30 to 40 tons having changed hands at £68 5s. to £69 cash, but the market has since become easier, and the closing quotations are—Straits on the spot £63, afloat £68 10s.; Banca £72 10s., Billiton £69 per ton. The supply from the Straits continues very small, only 140 tons having been received during June.

VEGETABLE TALLOW.—60 cases Singapore were bought in at 41s.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

In the early part of the week there was a firm market, but with only moderate demand, buyers appearing to have satisfied their requirements for a time. Towards the close, however, the tone has been quieter, and the offers again diminished in extent for both yarns and goods. Producers have not altered their quotations, but the tendency has been to favour buyers where business could be done.

ST. HELENA.—Passed, May 29, Star of the East, Singapore for New York.

CASUALTIES.

LONDON.—July 4, the Antje, Julius, from Penang, arrived with damage to port and starboard bulwarks, having, on April 22 last, shipped a heavy sea off the Cape.

HAVRE.—July 3, the Leonie, Richard, from Glasgow to Ilo Ilo, which put into Brest, with damage, had finished her repairs 1st July. The reloading of the cargo would be completed in a few days, and the vessel would proceed without having required either a loan or bottomry or the partial sale of cargo, as the owner would supply the necessary funds.

ROTTERDAM.—June 29, advices from St. Helena of June 2 state that half the crew of the Maasluis, at that port from Tjilatjap, had suffered on the voyage from fever, and that three men died, and others had been shipped in their place. At St. Helena eight sick men were taken to hospital; they were to go on board again on June 10, when the vessel would proceed to Holland.

GIBRALTAR.—June 28, Lord of the Isles (British steamer), Java, to Rotterdam, with general cargo, has put in here with boiler leaky. She is repairing in the harbour, and will probably proceed to-day. Amsterdam, June 29, a parcel of 22 packages Sumatra tobacco, marked Hibernia Lankat, was loaded at Sumatra in a boat destined for Penang. On the river this boat sank, and all the 22 packages were salved entirely wet. They were dried and repacked in 19 packages, which were shipped at Penang in the Agamemnon (str.), for London, and have been brought thence to this place. The parcel has now been examined, and its value found to be greatly depreciated.

Advices from St. Helena of June 11 state that the master (des Vos) of the Zes Gezusters, from Banjoewangie to this port, died at sea May 15.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The after effects of the famine in the North of China are being severely felt, and financial distress in official quarters is complained of in various parts of the Empire. That some anxiety should be felt on this subject is not unnatural, but the conclusion arrived at in some quarters that there is a general unsoundness in the finances of China requires to be supported by other evidence than that a pressure should be felt under exceptionally unfavourable circumstances, as there is no doubt of the enormous riches of China, or that if only steps were taken to develop them it would be one of the most prosperous countries in the world. In consequence of the defective intercommunication and other like causes, the temporary pressure is more severely felt than it would be elsewhere, and this no doubt is the cause of the anxiety with regard to the national finances which is spoken of. The results of the famine are, however, unquestionably of the most appalling character. A letter from a Roman Catholic missionary in Shantung speaks of 7,000 persons having died from typhus during two months in the precincts of Tsinan-foo alone, and the accounts from the interior are more affecting than ever. Until the harvest is reaped this will necessarily be the case. The labouring classes are going about seeking work, but in vain, and having sold or pawned all their property they are reduced to the utmost misery. There has also been severe suffering in Honan, the Governor of which reports that the crops showed a deficit of 50 per cent., and some 70,000 refugees congregated and were relieved in the neighbourhood of the provincial capital. Letters had been received from Missionaries travelling through Shanse and the Western parts of Honan, showing that famine prevailed to a terrible extent. From Canton also distressing news is brought of misery caused by severe flood, and of the apprehension of famine in the surrounding country. The arsenals at Foochow and Shanghai are said to be at a stand still for want of funds. The diary kept on his way home by H.E. Kwo the head Chinese Envoy, is spoken of favourably by the China papers. One of them mentions a statement—but does not say upon what it is founded, to the effect that the second Envoy here, H.E. Liu, was to be appointed to Germany. From Hong Kong there is no news of special importance. The Queen's birthday was celebrated with the customary honours. The new Company's Ordinance as amended by the Home Government has been brought before the Legislative Council.

The news from Japan concerning the insurrection is meagre and vague. Though no doubt as to the ultimate success of the Government was felt, the latest accounts were not considered by any means reassuring for the Government. It was stated that the rebels were apparently ubiquitous, and as soon as they disappeared from one place they reappeared in another. Everywhere they seemed to be met with in force, and although the Imperialists had in some cases gained victories over them, the rebels had also inflicted severe defeats upon the Government forces. Even the 10,000 troops which were garrisoning Kagoshima did not appear to be at all safe, the hills which surround the town being in possession of the rebels, and there having even been rumours that the troops might find it necessary to evacuate the town. The Yokohama Spring Races came off on the 24th May. There had been some excitement with reference to the appointment of the Municipal Director. The Consular Report on the trade of Nagasaki again shows a falling off in the imports.

From the Straits Settlements there is no news of much importance. Great complaints continue to be made with reference to the administration of the Supreme Court of Justice. Heavy rains had fallen, and the water supply, which had threatened to fall short, was once more abundant.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 23rd May, and we have advices via San Francisco thirteen days later, viz., to the 5th June. The P. and O. mail from London, April 13, arrived out on the 30th May.

The latest reports concerning the rebellion was to the effect that the disturbances were spreading. A rising had taken place in Oita, another was announced in Yamaguchi (Choshiu), and smaller outbreaks in other parts were frequent. A memorial respecting "people's rights" has been presented to the Government from the province of Tosa, and it is stated that Kataoka, one of the leaders of the party on whose behalf the memorial was issued, has demanded from the Government an answer to it within three weeks. This places the Government in an awkward dilemma. Should they comply with the prayer of the memorial, and, by establishing popular representation carry out pledges already given, but which have been systematically broken, there is but little doubt that the majority of the present Ministers would soon lose their posts; if, on the other hand, they decline to grant the wish of the memorialists, there seems every reason to fear an uprising in the province of Tosa, which might give the finishing touch to the wavering position of the Government. Just at this particular time, Kido, the Private Councillor of the Mikado, and the most respected amongst the six or seven men who wield the entire power of the Government, has succumbed to the disease under which he had been for some time suffering. He died on the 26th May, regretted by men of all parties.

The Spring-race meeting came off on May 24, and is stated to have been as fortunate in regard to the weather as its most ardent supporters could have desired, and the day was altogether an enjoyable one. The various events contested, although not productive of numerically large fields, showed us some really good racing, whilst the events were well divided amongst the various owners, and there was none of that feeling of monotony which is apt to pervade everybody when the same jacket is seen every time taking a quiet canter some lengths in advance of everyone else. The racing produced some surprises, and more than one of the "pots" boiled over. The attendance was good, and the band of the Tennessee was in attendance.

Considerable excitement has arisen with reference to the Municipal Directorship. The Herald understood that a memorial on the subject of the Municipal Directorship was being circulated for signature, pointing out the utility and necessity for the continuance of the office. That the document will be extensively signed by the community it does not question, since there are scarcely two opinions as to the undesirability of the course of action which the Government propose taking in the affair. When the Land Renters' Committee, in 1868, relinquished the municipal administration of the settlement, the Government took it over on the distinct understanding with the foreign representatives and the foreign public that a Municipal Director should be appointed; that his salary should be, including an allowance for house rent, $350.00 per month; and the only right which the Japanese reserved to themselves was that of cancelling his engagement, at any time, by giving three months' notice, which, in the case of the present incumbent, Mr. Benson, has been done. Acting on a suggestion made by the foreign Ministers at the time the office was created, candidates were invited to come forward and offer themselves for election, and to the registered members of the community of all nationalities, represented by Consuls, was given the right of voting; the result of the poll then taken being the election of Mr. Benson, who has held the office from then to now. The agreement entered into and acted on ever since is now proposed to be wholly ignored, and from motives of economy it is proposed, on payment of a slight additional remuneration, to impose the Municipal Director's duties upon other officials in the Japanese service, but upon whose selection or fitness for the functions of office the public has had no opportunity of expressing its opinion by the agency of the ballot, and who, probably, had they to submit to that ordeal, would be found to be not acceptable to represent the residents and property owners of the place. The precedent established by the election of the present holder of the office was a good one, and should be followed again; and as the place will be vacant in the course of next month, it is high time that the proper steps should be taken for refilling the office by a candidate selected by the public at large. The community look to both foreign Ministers and Consuls to exercise their influence in preventing existing agreements and rights being ignored.

From the above-named paper we take the following:—

The capital of the Kuazoku Bank, which has purchased the Horaisha building, is yen £30,000,000. The nominal director is Inori, ex-Daimio of Choshiu, but he, as well as the other ex-daimois interested, will do no actual work. The prime mover in the whole affair is Iwakura, and he has placed two shizoku, Kumagai and Hida, to attend to the practical working of the concern. At first foreigners will not be wanted by the Bank, but it is extremely likely that many will be indirectly employed, for it is contemplated that the Bank will purchase some of the railways, telegraphs, and mines, which are now under the Public Works Department. It is considered by sensible men in the capital that H.E. Iwakura has done a meritorious act in urging upon the kuazoku to adopt some rational means of investing their money, and especially by the formation of this bank.

The neglected state of the parapet of the sea-wall along the Bund is not creditable to the authorities. Months ago the stones were dislodged by the waves, and have never been replaced in position. Considering that this is one of the principal thoroughfares, and that runaway horses with carriages are occasionally to be seen in this quarter, and that the state of the parapet offers but little obstacle to their plunging into the sea, perhaps when some little accident or other of this kind happens, and the Government is cast in exemplary damages, it will serve to awaken the official mind to a due sense of its responsibilities.

Those who attend Christ Church will be much struck with the great change produced in the interior by the introduction of designs from Messrs. Tattersall and Co., church decorators, London; the whole interior presents a pleasing contrast to the bare whitewashed walls, which left nothing for the eye to rest upon. The unsightly window on the north side of the chancel is replaced by one of Gothic form; on each side of the east window is a rich curtain of blue and gold; the lectern, from which the lessons are read, is peculiarly beautiful; and the font is surmounted with a gilded lid. The scrolls containing Scripture texts are painted specially for Christ Church, the measurement having been sent to London; they are manifestly the work of a thorough artist. The four Evangelists are represented by the Apocalyptic symbols, among which we recognise the Lion of St. Mark; the Apostles are represented by twelve emblematic shields; and the Commandments are surrounded by vines and overhung by clusters of grapes. The effect of the whole cannot be described, but will well repay a visit.

On Sunday, the 27th May, between six and seven P.M., Homura-road was the theatre of a very serious affray, in which many combatants joined. An altercation between some British and Russian men-of-war's men, commencing in a grog-shop called "the British Queen," soon assumed the dimensions of a free fight in the open street, in which fists, cudgels, knives, and stones were promiscuously used. The scaffolding of a house rebuilding came very handy for furnishing the Russian combatants with poles, and they now indulged in indiscriminate attacks on all passers by. The police sergeant and a European police constable were on the spot and exerted themselves bravely to allay the disturbance, but while they succeeded in prevailing upon the British sailors to withdraw they were powerless to remove the infuriated Russians from the street. The Japanese police kept entirely aloof, and were of no use whatever. The arrival of some of their petty officers at last caused the Russians to withdraw to the hatoba, from whence they were taken off by the Haydamack's boats with the exception of one, who was sent to the hospital.

The practice of selling adulterated drugs and liquors in Japan appears to be still unrestrained. The following amusing account of its effects appears in the Japan Mail :—

We do not wish to intrude our private affairs upon our readers, but we cannot refrain from remarking on the undue proportions that our druggist's bill has lately assumed. The principal items in the account appear to be essence of ginger, peppermint, and various other simples, the use of which has been forced upon us by alarmingly frequent attacks of what old ladies call "spazzums" in our domestic circle—or rather we should say, circle of domestics. We prohibited the use of cucumbers on pain of dismissal. Daikon became the forbidden fruit. We know from long experience that all the members of our household are of sterling honour, and that every strawberry we possess is sacred. It could not be the super-acidulous product of our gooseberry bushes, for we had witnessed the frightful effects on the native countenance produced by tasting this fruit at our special invitation. But by diligent search and prolonged inquiry we at length succeeded in learning that a liberal-hearted friend in Tokio, who is a merchant of foreign goods, and dealer in curious wines, had sent to the cook a present of sundry rare compounds. At our request we were shown these delightful preparations, "warranted genuine imported liquors." The first bottle we took up contained, according to the label, "Sugar of Lemons." It looked like that delectable preparation. It tasted like a mixture of oxalic acid and soapsuds. Adorning the neck of the bottle was another label on which was written "hot Cold Sure," which we could only suppose to mean that if partaken of when hot (or at any other time) the unhappy imbiber would feel the chills of death stealing over him. Its entire power to act as thus warranted the effects we had witnessed left us little room to doubt.

TOKIO.

The Japan Mail says :—We have witnessed the successful ascent of a balloon at the grounds of the Naval College, Tokio. This is the balloon to which we referred some time since as being in process of manufacture. It has been made entirely by Japanese, and considering that it is the first attempt of the kind, is in every respect most creditable. We were informed by a Japanese gentleman that the material of which it is composed is shiori chirimen, or thick white silk crape. The shape was irregular and defective, but this may, probably, to a great extent, have proceeded from imperfect inflation. The elevation attained was only a few hundred feet, the trial ascents being made with the balloon in a "captive" condition. It is stated that it is intended for the purpose of making military surveys in the South, but we should imagine that it will be somewhat difficult to procure the means of inflation in those portions of the country in which a balloon survey is likely to prove of any value.

The Tokio Times gives the subjoined with reference to matters theatrical :—

There about ten important theatres in Tokio, the principal of which are the Shintomiza at Shimabara, the largest and best in the city, with a seating capacity for nearly 3,000 people ; the Nakamuraza at Saruwakamachi (Asakusa), holding between 2,000 and 2,500 ; the Harukiza at Harukimachi, Hongo, and the Nakazimaza at Kakigaracho—the last two mentioned accommodating between 1,000 and 2,000. These theatres are conducted by companies, who procure a licence from the municipality, which permits them to give a specified drama for a given time, usually thirty days, though this is often extended if the weather or other circumstances be adverse.

Just now the play-house at Hongo is getting patronage by presenting that never-failing attraction "Chiushingura," or "The Forty-seven Ronins." And as this is the theatrical "season," and the drama is one of the most characteristic of the national school, it is worth a reader's while to attend. If he so incline, he may see the whole play, which is performed without interruption, by giving the day to it, from six in the morning, when the action begins, to seven in the afternoon, when it concludes. But if four or five hours will satisfy him, he can gain a very fair idea of play and actors during an afternoon. Of the latter there are forty-six at present in the company, of which the most celebrated are Gonjuro, Shinjuro and Gado amongst those who take men's parts, and Monnosuke and Metora among those who personate women.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Hiogo News says :—On the anniversary of the birthday of Her Majesty Queen Victoria a ball and supper were given at H.B.M.'s Consulate by A. A. Annesley, Esq., and Mrs. Annesley, to a number of residents and the officers of the Thistle, Atlante, and Talisman. By the kind permission of Admiral Veron (who, however, was himself at Kioto) the band of the Atlante provided the dance music in a manner which was a treat which the present conditions of civilisation in Kobe do not often permit of our enjoying.

A most instructive and interesting little episode of the struggle now going on in the South will be found amongst our Nippo items. We refer to the examination of a prisoner at the Kumamoto Saibansho. The judge seems to have told a number of deliberate lies to the accused in order to watch their effect on him, and the proceeding appears to be considered quite legitimate. We commend the circumstance to those who desire to see the extra-territorialty clause abolished.

There was some little excitement recently caused just through the Sannomiya bridge by a Chinawoman who had lashed herself into a fearful state of fury—to the great entertainment of a crowd of Japanese onlookers. Inquiries made among the neighbours elicited the information that some time since this woman bought a Japanese girl who is now about thirteen years of age. For some reason, not clearly discovered, the woman had given the girl a most severe beating, in consequence of which she had run away. The display of fury was apparently caused by the Chinawoman's having failed to get back either the girl or her market value. A few years ago there was some excitement in Kobe about some alleged kidnapping by Chinese, but it turned out that most of the known cases were ones of genuine adoption. On this particular case we can offer no opinion, but though the motives of the Chinawomen may be perfectly pure, the Japanese are as a rule so indulgent to their children that she can certainly count upon little public sympathy with her troubles.

The returns of the passenger and goods traffic on the Kobe-Kioto Railway, for week ending May 20, 1877, are as follows :—

NAGASAKI.

The Consular Report on the trade of Nagasaki for the year 1876 notes that the import trade of the port, in comparing it with the previous year, again shows a falling off. The total value of imports, including those from the coast ports, amounts to $1,063,199, against $1,525,090 for 1875, or a balance of $461,891 in favour of 1875. The chief falling off is noticeable in textile fabrics, the value of which reached $440,282 in 1875, while for the year just closed they amount to only $169,489. But the imports of piece goods in 1875 fell considerably short of those of the preceding year, so that if these figures may be taken as a guide, it would not only appear that foreign articles of this description are less required than formerly, but that they are comparatively going out of use in this part of Japan.

CHINA.

KOREA.

The Tokio Times says that famine continues to afflict the people of the northern Chinese provinces and of Korea. In the latter country rice was sold for not less than seven yen a koku. A pestilence, supposed to have grown out of the improper care given to the sick and the exposure of the dead, was also devastating the land, and had penetrated the settlement at Fusan, the hospital of which was open alike to natives and Japanese. Of the former, some three hundred and fifty had been received and placed under treatment.

HANKOW.

The present mail brings details of the opening of the Hankow market, which are of interest for the purposes of comparison, although of course the more important facts are already known by telegram.

A correspondent of the Courier says :—

The tea market opened on the 18th May, when several chops were bought at prices averaging about Tls. 5 below last year's. On the other hand, the tea is of inferior quality this season.

The quality of the first arrival of teas is, as a rule, below average, and some chops are not only weak and thin, but have a sourish flavour. The prices paid are, all things considered, excessive. No heed is given to many things which are easy to understand, such as last season's losses, present stocks in England, failure of the Russian market, bad trade in the United Kingdom, and the alarming increase and yield of the fine strong Indian teas. The Hankow tea-tasters and merchants ignore all such considerations, and are buying inferior teas at high prices with all the old and unfailing recklessness of consequences. Recent letters from Moscow say that upon the unsold teas in stock there (bought at extravagant rates in Hankow last year) the average loss may be estimated as at least 40 per cent. Upon some chops which have become soft, or otherwise out of condition, the deficit will be even more severe. The London tea market seems to be in almost as bad a state as that of Moscow, as losses of 35 and 40 per cent. are unfortunately not uncommon.

To-day's (May 25th) letters from Hankow are more discouraging than ever. Prices paid average 15 to 20 per cent. more than the tea is worth in London. It is said that the teas are wretchedly poor, and Ch'a-szes of experience say that they have not seen such a poor crop for fifteen years.

The Daily News correspondent says:—On the 18th May many chops of Ningchow and Cheong-sou-kai Teas were put on the market and eagerly bought up at Tls. 44 to 36 per picul for former district, and Tls. 29½ to 26 for the latter. Afterwards, buying became general, and about 90 to 95 chops were settled. Buying was going on by candle-light, in order to secure the Teas. The crop as a whole is rather inferior, but free from old leaf. The prices paid show Ningchow 20 to 25 per cent. cheaper than last year. Freight for Londoun Castle and Glencagles £5 10s. per ton, with quick despatch. Exchange 6 m./s. on London 5s. 8⅛d. to 5s. 8¾d. From Kinkiang about 28 chops have been settled, representing about 10,307 half-chests; prices ranging from Tls. 31 to 40. Musters of 50 chops, about 60,000 half-chests, are shown on the market, but the quality is deficient and quantity large.

Another correspondent writes on the 19th:—The market was opened to-day for Hankow teas. The quality is below the average, thus far. Prices paid, Ninchows, Tls. 35 to 44 against last year Tls. 40 to 55; Oopacks and Oonams, Tls. 22¾ to 30, against last year Tls. 25 to 38; Oonfaas, Tls. 30 to 31, against last year Tls. 34 to 36. Arrivals, Hankow teas 70,000 chests; Kiukiang teas 20,000 half-chests.

The clipper ship Cutty Sark was to be towed to Hankow by one of the China Merchants Company's steamers. The weather at Hankow continued exceptionally cool up to the middle of May.

HUKOW.

With reference to the question of opening the above-named port, a correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows:—

As a mere place of call Kiukiang has nothing to apprehend; because, unless facilities for landing and shipping, &c., in the shape of hulks, &c., are established, no one will think of landing or shipping goods in an open sea, as the mouth of the lake is viewed by the natives. The whole cause of apprehension hinges on the establishment of a Custom House at the port. As was said in a former contribution, the Kiangsi officials are unwilling to allow produce to leave the province until it has paid duty. Now to detain merchandise at the lake until it has cleared itself of duties at the Kiukiang Customs would, in a great measure, render nugatory any advantage that might be gained by shipping at the lake; and by opening a Custom House there the merchants apprehend that in course of time it might eventually lead to the transfer of much of the shipping business to that port; because, if a Custom office were opened there, hulks, &c., and other facilities would follow in the wake, unsuited as the place is admitted to be. The provincial officials do not wish to open a Custom House; but the agreement says, "Produce may be shipped at the lake:" and the exchequer officials say, "not until duties have been paid, or the treasury would suffer greatly." So, to protect their own interest and abide by the terms of the agreement, let us suppose a branch Custom House is opened. The situation of affairs will be more readily comprehended by giving a somewhat analogous example by way of illustration. From a relative point of view, Woosung is to Shanghai what Hukow is to Kiukiang. The commerce of Shanghai passes and repasses Woosung, just as imports and exports pass by Hukow. Hitherto it has seldom been found necessary to land or ship merchandise at Woosung, nor has the necessity arisen in the case of Hukow. Shanghai is a distributing centre; so is Kiukiang; not so much from their good geographical positions as from the fact that trade has located itself there for ages. Now, if the framers of the agreement had selected Woosung as a subsidiary port, because it appeared to be the inlet and outlet to a rich part of Kiangsu, they might have argued with much reason that great delay was entailed on goods by going the 12 odd miles up to Shanghai; and as Shanghai is but a small consumer, the bulk of its imports being sent northward of the Yangtsze, &c., it would be better to make Woosung a port of call, and allow cargo to be landed and shipped there. The provincial authorities would at once say, we must be secure of the duty on all our indigenous exports or the local revenue will suffer; but as to compel merchants to come to Shanghai to pay duty on shipments at Woosung would render any advantage gained next to nugatory, it will be well to open a Custom house there. Now, firmly rooted as business is at Shanghai, there can be little doubt that in the course of time a large part of the shipping business would be transferred to Woosung if facilities for landing and storage, &c., were afforded; and in these days of competition we should doubtless see hulks placed there by the steamer companies, in their desire to secure freights, and even pay duty and make other advances to native shippers as they do at present. It is just this that local merchants apprehend, i.e., that if a Custom-office is opened at the lake, hulks, &c., will follow. If such a proposition had been made as the opening of Woosung (always supposing that similar disadvantages existed as they do at Hukow, in the want of shelter for boats, and unflooded or other building sites), I fancy you would hear an outcry raised by the Shanghai merchants, especially as the addition of such a port of call would neither lessen the cost of produce one cash, nor increase the consumption of imports by one piece. I say, multiply points of contact by all means, when commerce is likely to be benefited; but if the result is a mere transfer or division of an old established trade, it is better to leave well alone. The merchants are perhaps crying out before they are hurt, but it would be too late to remonstrate after a custom-office is opened. I hope this will enable you to see the cause of their apprehension.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 27th May; the French mail from London, April 6th, was received on the 18th May.

Some further particulars are given in the Shanghai papers concerning the projected loans for the Chinese Government. It is stated by the Courier that the following are the conditions of the provisional loan for Hk. Tls. 2,500,000 recently concluded. Interest 10 per cent. Exchange 5s. 9½d. Loan repayable within ten years by half yearly instalments and secured by Customs bonds of the Custom Houses at any ports. The money to be ready by the 25th August to exchange for the bonds. The Daily News, however, states the terms as 8 per cent., with 5s. 8d. exchange. The Courier says that Hsu Taoutai has lost his button, and is reported to be in danger of losing his head. His credentials from the Tsung-li Yamen were, it is believed, all in order, but it seems that his method of carrying out instructions in regard to the projected loan was objectionable to the high authorities. The above-named paper observes that the financial condition of China is revealed in fitful glimpses, but all the aspects are alarming, and adds that it is certain that the whole Empire is poverty stricken, and not even a year's good harvest can restore the country to its average status. But if, unhappily, the growing crops should again fail, the result will be a terrible catastrophe, as the empire cannot endure, in its present condition, another lean year. The large and constantly accumulating stocks of foreign goods, the reduced demand and low prices show how painfully foreign traders are affected by the general distresses of China, and it is feared the hope raised by the opening of new ports will for this year at least be disappointed. It is stated that the Shansi merchants and bankers have determined on (practically) withdrawing from commerce and finance for this year. The reason given to foreigners is that trade must be bad until after October at the least, and that if a bad harvest is gathered the country generally will be well-nigh ruined for a time.

In conformity with the above it is noted that the Arsenals of Shanghai and Foochow are almost at a stand-still for want of funds, as the general poverty is now afflicting all departments of the Imperial and provincial Governments. So far all the efforts of the needy provinces to raise loans in money or in kind have failed, as no foreign banks or capitalists will make advances at any rate of interest on the imperfect and uncertain security offered. It is certain that all the provinces in China, including even this favoured Government, has empty treasuries to meet the increasing distresses of the spring.

A scheme for the reorganisation of the Yangtsze Insurance Association is to be presented shortly to the shareholders, the gist of which is to reduce the shareholders' capital from Tls. 600,000 to Tls. 420,000, and the cash dividend from 15 to 12 per cent. The scheme is said to contain other features by virtue of which the policy-holders will be able to count on favourable returns with ample security, and extra dividends be paid to shareholders at least equal to the percentage existing hitherto. The prospectus was to be ready in a week or ten days, and the project to be discussed at the next meeting of shareholders to be held the first week in July.

The Celestial Empire notices some notes taken by the Chinese Envoy on his way to this country as follows:—

We have received a copy of part of the diary kept by Kuoh Sung-tao on his voyage to England, a document which argues well for the use he is likely to make of his opportunities for observation. His reflections, though meagre, are much deeper and more intelligent than those of the late Pin-ch'un, while the account he gives of the schools and prisons of Hong Kong is in itself a most useful lesson to his countrymen. We shall return to the subject more fully on another occasion. The pamphlet is beautifully printed, and is written in good Chinese.

Dr. Yates, who has for many years held the post of Interpreter to the United States Consulate has resigned, and is succeeded by Dr. McCartie, lately a professor in the Educational Department of the Japanese Government.

The Daily News gives the following account of the reports concerning the probable shortness of the Silk crop, of which we have given telegraphic particulars from time to time:—During the past week there seems to have been extraordinary excitement amongst the Chinese connected with the Silk trade, owing to the very alarming reports which they have circulated freely amongst foreigners as to a failure of the growing crop. It is reported that some of the large hongs have telegraphed to Europe and America to buy up at the last quoted rates; and no doubt the effect of these messages has been to improve prices at home, but not so deliveries, as yet. Reports from the country are not to be very much relied on, but the following comes from a source which may prove as good as any to be obtained:—Haining, Hangchow, and Hoochun districts are giving a very bad result indeed; Nanzing and Shonling are turning out an inferior yield, whilst Hoochow, Linghoo, and Sinzu are very fair. Kahing is expected to be also fair, but it is too early to give any proper report. On the whole, the crop can scarcely be anticipated as likely to be anything but below an average, and the quality is not favourably spoken of. The high prices we quoted yesterday seem only to have been given for small quantities to be used as musters. Up to the present, foreign buyers seem to have received all these alarming rumours with equanimity. Possibly bad trade generally and no demand for silk, coupled with uncertain and uncomfortable political news, has deadened that spirit of speculation which, in former years we recollect, such reports would undoubtedly have brought about.

From the North China Herald we take the following general items :—

A daring robbery has been committed at Kahding by a band of creek pirates, said to have been upwards of thirty in number. They landed from their boats, made their way unopposed into the village, and breaking into a silversmith's shop, robbed it of property said to be worth $800, with which they got clear off. No personal violence was committed, and no other place was attacked, so the affair looks as if it had been previously planned. The property stolen comprised a large number of silver bangles of various sizes, enamelled hairpins, and other kinds of native female ornaments. Information was brought to Shanghai and inquiry at once instituted, but hitherto without result. It is believed, however, that much, if not all, of the stolen property will find its way to Soochow and other places on the creek.

A disturbance which at one time threatened to be of magnitude, and the cause of which had been rankling for some time, occurred among the shipping coolies formerly in the employ of the S.S.N. Co., but who, of course, followed the transfer of the business to the C.M.S.N. Co. It appears that since that transaction their wages have been cut to the extent of one-half on some kinds of labour and to no less than two-thirds on others — the headmen, notwithstanding, continuing to exact their squeeze, amounting to nearly 21 per cent. on the earnings of the coolies, at the rates paid by the S.S.N. Co. The wages received by the coolies were therefore literally reduced to less than a third, and in some instances a fourth, of what they were formerly paid. Discontent of course arose, and not knowing the real cause of their losses, but believing them to be occasioned by the rapacity of their headmen, a large number of the coolies rose en masse on Sunday, and "interviewed" the chief of these in a rather unpleasant manner. Information led to the intervention of the police, and under the escort of a foreign sergeant, but followed by nearly 100 of the excited coolies, the headman was taken for safety to the Central Police Station. Here, we believe, the true state of affairs was ascertained and explained, whereupon, seeing their losses were not occasioned by any action on the part of the headmen, the crowd departed in peace,—presumably aware of the inutility of "kicking against the pricks."

The Missionary Conference has concluded its sittings. It has discussed a number of subjects of interest.

The report of the Shanghai Gas Company shows a net profit on the year's working of Tls. 26,917, out of which two half-yearly dividends have been paid, amounting to Tls. 18,000.

We hear it is intended to have an Autumn Flower Show, the chief feature of which shall be Chrysanthemums.

FORMOSA.

The Daily News says that besides endeavouring to bring the officials to a better sense of duty, Ting Jih-chang has taken advantage of his visit to Formosa to propose some reforms in the existing system of taxation. The result is that "certain miscellaneous taxes which have long been levied in the neighbourhood of Taiwan, and the collection of which has been attended with many abuses, and given rise to much suffering on the part of the people," are to be abolished.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 2nd June; the P. and O. mail from London April 13 arrived out on the 20th May, and the following French mail of 20th April was received on the 29th May.

The Queen's birthday was celebrated here with the customary honours on the 24th May. Royal salutes were fired at noon by H.M.S. Victor Emmanuel, U. S. S. Ashuelot, and the battery on shore. Nearly the whole of the vessels in harbour and most of the leading hongs facing the Praya were decorated with flags, and the bells of St. John's Cathedral Church, as well as those of the Roman Catholic Church, were rung. A parade or review of the troops in garrison was held in the afternoon, when the 28th Regiment, under command of Major Emerson, went through the very interesting ceremony, at five o'clock, of trooping the colours on the Parade Ground. A very large concourse of spectators, both native and foreign, were assembled around the enclosure to witness the spectacle, amongst whom were most of the leading residents. H.E. the Lieut. Governor arrived on the ground punctually, and was received by a general salute from the troops, the band meanwhile playing the Queen's Anthem. The manœuvres were then proceeded with, the band playing appropriate airs, and the manner in which the various evolutions were gone through was a credit alike to the troops and their officers. H.E. the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Hennessy held a reception at Government House in the evening, which was attended by a large and distinguished assembly of ladies and gentlemen. The grounds were tastefully illuminated by Chinese lanterns, and a brilliant star, in gas jets, encircling the monogram "V.R." was most effectively displayed on the northern face of the building. During the interval for refreshments, the toast of Her Majesty the Queen was enthusiastically received, in response to a call from his Excellency.

Mr. Robert Hart, Inspector General of the Foreign Department of the Chinese Maritime Customs, arrived on the 20th May in the Ling Feng. Mr. Hart, who was accompanied by Messrs. Cartwright and Ohlmer, was on a tour of inspection, and left for the new port of Pakhoi on the 22nd May.

It is notified in the Government Gazette that H. E. the Lieutenant-Governor has appointed Mr. C. F. A. Sangster to act as Deputy-Registrar of the Supreme Court and Registrar of Companies during the absence on vacation leave of Mr. F. S. Huffam; also that his Excellency has been pleased to direct that Her Majesty's Birthday shall be kept in this Colony on Thursday, the 24th May.

It is stated that the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution, at a private meeting, recommending the Colonial Government to make "chopped" dollars, weighing not less than 7.1.7, and neither cut nor pierced, a legal tender. It is not quite clear what this may mean, as the only "private" meetings of the Chamber of Commerce would be those of its committee.

The China Mail gives the following items :—

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor paid a visit on the 29th to St. Paul's College, as well as the Victoria Gaol, accompanied by the Right Rev. Bishop Burdon and the Hon. C. C. Smith. This is the second visit H. E. has paid to the latter institution since his advent here, thus showing the interest he takes in its administration. When H. E. was there, four chair-coolies happened to be sent to the Gaol in default of a fine of 25 cents each for plying for hire after twelve o'clock at night. The appearance of the men and the nature of the offence of which they were convicted—which at worst was only a too eager desire to earn an honest livelihood—excited the sympathy of his Excellency, and he ordered the men to be liberated by his paying the fines for them. This was at once done, and the amount of the fines was sent in shortly after his return to Government House.

By the assistance of Mr. J. Nash, a gentleman who has been trading in the Pacific Islands, and who was found capable of communicating with four women brought here by the French brig Dauphine, the following further particulars regarding them have been ascertained. It appears they are natives of Mariana or Hall's Island, one of the Gilbert Group, situated in about lat. 0.50 N. and long. 170 E. They were bound from this place to an island named Tarrawa, about eighteen miles distant, but owing to the strong set of the current to the westward they drifted to leeward and were endeavouring to beat back, when their canoe capsized; this occurred the day after they had left the land. Besides the four women rescued, there were in the canoe six men, three children and another woman, all of whom were drowned. The rescued women say they lay on the canoe as well as they can recollect about ten days, but they were so weak from exhaustion that they could not be positive of this. The only clothing these poor creatures have at present is an old gunny bag apiece, with holes cut for the arms and head, and they of course present a rather ludicrous appearance. We presume the Government will take some steps to have them properly clothed and housed. They are still on board the brig, and despite their troubles seem quite contented and happy so long as they can get a pipe to smoke and something to eat. A Barnum would make a rich harvest out of them in their present costume, which is of the simplest form. We understand that in all probability they will return to their native land in the little steamer Pacific, now building at Sands slip and fast approaching completion.

The Chinese in Hong Kong are taking means now to relieve the Canton sufferers from the floods. A meeting of the leading Chinese had been held under the auspices of the Hospital Committee, and about $3,000 were subscribed on the spot. Circulars are being sent round for contributions. The Canton authorities have placed two steam-vessels at the disposal of the Relief Committee at Canton for the conveyance of food to the sufferers.

No less than four large vessels are at present being discharged alongside the Wanchi Pier, which is beginning to present quite a business appearance. The rails are being taken up and relaid and the godowns are in full swing.

We have to record the death, at sea, of Captain George Murray, who was long and favourably known amongst shipmasters and others trading at this port. Captain Murray took command of the Fiery Cross at Hong Kong in 1870, having lost his previous vessel (the Caractacus) on the Paracels a few months before; and at the time of his death (28th January, 1877) he was in command of a fine large ship called the Duchess of Edinburgh.

We learn that Mr. Macdonald's Patent Slip at West Point has been purchased by Captain Sands, and that its working will be carried on conjointly with that of Captain Sands's Patent Slip and Dock situated further west. These two establishments have lately imparted quite a lively business air to the extreme western portion of the Praya, and the sale of the first-named would imply that this description of business is on the increase.

The Companies Ordinance as amended by the Home Government has been brought forward in the Legislative Council. Lord Carnarvon, in the despatch sending it back, says that in deference to Sir John Smale's long local experience, and to the position which he occupies, he requests that the Governor will cause to be inserted a proviso, at the end of the first paragraph of the 31st Section of the English Act, "that the amount in which each share is so reduced shall in no case be less than one-fourth of the amount of the original share," but beyond this amendment the original Bill is in the main approved of.

CANTON.

The river has been rising with alarming rapidity, the water having advanced so much that some parts of the old city were flooded. Rice was getting extremely dear, and it was feared a famine might follow the flood. The disaster from this cause up country was becoming very serious, and great misery prevailed. The Viceroy had despatched two Mandarins with 500 shek of rice and 2,000 taels in silver to the suffering districts to relieve the sufferers. The Committee of the Chinese Hospital have issued circulars inviting subscriptions. If the rain continues, the flood will extend even to the heart of Canton. The Chinese hoped that the bank of the river at Song Yuen Wai would not succumb to the influence of the water, otherwise no part of Canton, it is calculated, will be free from inundation, except the very high levels.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

CANTON, MAY 31, 1877.

The waters of the Canton river, which, when I last wrote to you, were overflowing their banks, have now abated. The misery, however, of many of the inhabitants of the respective counties of Tsing-uen and Fa-uen, which districts were considerably inundated, is still very great. The Viceroy, with his accustomed benevolence, is daily endeavouring to alleviate that distress by sending to the destitute ones large supplies of rice and clothing. The physicians of a large Chinese dispensary which in the year 1871 was established in this city by the local gentry, at a cost of 60,000 dollars are, in this hour of need, advertising the sale of small medicinal cakes or biscuits, one of which is sufficient, so the advertisement states, to satiate the greatest hunger for a period of twelve hours. Large supplies of this multum in parvo have been bought and sent by the Viceroy and other humane persons to the poverty-stricken districts of Tsing-uen and Fa-uen.

Yesterday news of the result of the examination recently held at Peking for the third literary degree reached Canton. The successful candidates are 110 in number, and of the company in question not less than sixteen are natives of the province of (Canton) Kwang-tuung. The Cantonese are, of course, very highly gratified with this pleasing intelligence. They have ever entertained an idea that, in point of brains and intellectual attainments, they equal if not excel the literati of the other provinces of the empire. All candidates for the third literary degree must of necessity be masters of arts, and the examination must take place at Peking. Yesterday afternoon, at three o'clock, five malefactors, who had been convicted of piracy, were decapitated on the common execution-ground of this city. Notwithstanding these frequent executions and the draconic severity of the laws of China, crime does not decrease to any great degree. Thus reports of robberies almost daily reach our ears. For example, on the night of the 15th inst. four snake boats, each containing eight armed men, entered a creek, or tributary stream of the Canton river, which flows through the district occupied by the ninety-six villages. On arriving in front of a residence which stands on the banks of the creek in question, and which is tenanted by a Chinese gentleman named Kwan, the thirty-two men debarked, knocked at the door of Kwan's house, and demanded admittance. On this request being refused, these nocturnal marauders forced their way into the dwelling, and after a most unsuccessful search for money and valuables decamped, taking with them not only two of Kwan's female servants, but also two of his unmarried daughters. No person can at present conjecture what has become of the missing ones. It is supposed, however, that they will eventually be restored to their family on the payment of a ransom. Again, some time during the night of the 25th inst. forty men entered with a burglarious intent a mansion occupied by a Chinese gentleman named Hu, and which residence is situated in the Nga-ho-tong street of this city. An alarm, however, which was quickly given disturbed these modern "Forty Thieves," and caused them, ere they could become possessed of any plunder, to beat a retreat. When in flight they were hotly pursued by several policemen, who succeeded in capturing only four of the gang. These four men are now lodged in the prison of the Pun-yu magistrate, awaiting their trial.

Throughout the past three days the Cantonese have been much engaged in celebrating an annual festival in honour of Kum-Fa, the tutelary goddess of women and children. The various temples in honour of this heathen divinity, who is to the Chinese what the Venus Genitri was to the ancient Romans, were literally crowded during the festival with women and children in all ranks and conditions of life. The offerings which were presented by the many votaries consisted chiefly of roasted pigs, boiled fowls, cakes, fruits, and flowers. This goddess is worshipped throughout the length and breadth of this vast empire, but more especially so at Canton on the score that she was a native of that city. It is said by her Chinese biographers that she was a member of the Kum family, and, owing to her piety, was a constant visitor to all the temples which were in the immediate neighbourhood of her father's house. To the various idols contained in these temples she poured out her heart in prayer, and earnestly sought at their hands the blessings of which she daily found herself to stand in need. She was opposed to marriage on principle, entertaining an idea that it was the duty of women to devote themselves to the service of the gods rather than to the things of the world. It is also said that she had the power of communing with the spirits of the departed dead. At length, becoming tired of the world, she committed suicide by drowning. For the recovery of her body from the waters an unsuccessful search was made. It eventually rose, however, to the surface of the river, and on being removed therefrom, the air all around became impregnated, it is said, with the most sweet smelling perfumes. No sooner had the interment of her body taken place than a sandal-wood statue or idol greatly resembling her rose apparently from the depth of the river in which she had drowned herself, and remained stationary on its surface. This circumstance was regarded as one of a very extraordinary nature, and the idol on being taken out of the river was most carefully preserved in order that a temple might be erected for its reception. A shrine for this purpose was accordingly built in the Sin-oo-street of the old city of Canton, and above the altar thereof the sandal-wood idol to which we have already referred was placed with becoming ceremonies. These events are said to have occurred during the reign of Ching-hwa, who, as eighth sovereign of the Ming dynasty, ascended the throne of China A.D. 1465, and died after a reign of twenty-three years.

FOOCHOW.

We take the following from the Foochow Herald:—

It is rumoured that the little s.s. Taiwan is likely to be replaced shortly by another and more powerful vessel. Also that a rival Chinese Company intend to place a second steamer on the same line. In view, however, of the existing traffic we are inclined to think that the venture would prove unprofitable to its promoters.

In former times it was, we believe, the fashion to say that tea only paid in a freshet year. It is possible that this saying originated, like many other common place remarks, in a certain well-founded experience; and inasmuch as freshets were frequent, and profits on tea an almost ever-recurring event, the accepted conclusion was not after all so very remote. In these latter days, though quite familiarised with freshets, we regard "profits" on tea as in the dim and distant future.

The launch of the twentieth vessel built at the Mamoi Arsenal took place on the 15th May, having been postponed for a couple of days with a view to securing a more favourable tide. A number of visitors—both foreign and native—were present, and the usual inaugural ceremonies were performed by the Imperial Commissioner. The vessel was named the Wei Yuan, and we are informed that she took the water without the slightest hitch. Her dimensions are:—length at water line 210 feet; breadth 31 feet; depth of hold 18¾ feet. Her tonnage (BM) is 940, and her horse power 750. She is rigged as a three-masted schooner, has a draught of 14 feet aft, and will carry seven or, possibly, only five guns. As mentioned in our last number, the Wei Yuan is of composite build, with a ram bow. We have since learnt that she came out from France in pieces, and that she was put together at Mamoi, under the supervision of Mr. Jouvet, C.E. Her design is, we also understand, of the latest; and it is the intention of the Chinese authorities to make her available for the transport service if necessary.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 9th June; the P. and O. mail from London, April 27, was received on the 27th May. The French mail of May 4 arrived out on the 3rd June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 11 was received on the 9th June. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

All is quiet in the Peninsula and in the three Settlements. There was a rumour of some disturbance being threatened in Penang, which is supposed to have led to a visit there by Captain Walshe, Acting Inspector General of Police. With this exception and a visit of the Hon. J. Douglas, C.M.G., Colonial Secretary, to Salangore, there is nothing whatever of a political nature to notice. It should, perhaps, be mentioned that the Datu Klana of Sunghie Ujong, the fast friend of British rule in the Peninsula, has been here on, apparently, a private informal visit.

It is impossible in words to express the general feelings of anger and supreme disgust prevalent throughout the community here and in Penang at the present, and now long-continued, condition of the Supreme Court. It is the fact that the dignity of the Bench has been gravely compromised, as it never was before in the eyes of Europeans and Natives alike, and, moreover, the incapacity, or neglect, or both combined, shown by the Executive in allowing the administration of justice to degenerate into a farce has created a feeling of contempt for the Government generally. Were the European community not so small and not so much absorbed in business, or did the Natives know their rights, the present state of affairs would not be tolerated or a day, and the reign of chaos in our higher law courts and elsewhere would very soon be over.

The Arab Extradition case remains still unsettled, awaiting a Judge, and the Arab trader remains in custody. H.E. the Administrator decided that he must be given up to the Dutch authorities provided a further application by counsel to the Acting Chief Justice proved unfavourable. As the Acting Chief Justice, when he recovers, can hardly reverse the terms of his prior decision in the matter, the application of counsel on the trader's behalf will of course be refused, in which case there will be an appeal to the Full Court. But as there is hardly a Court at all, it will be rather difficult to make up a Full Court, and, meantime, the Arab trader must remain in jail to muse over the blessings of English law and English rule. To be sure he is a Mohammedan and so it may not much matter. Were he a Bulgarian Christian the case might be different.

Dr. Dennys has been gazetted Assistant Protector of Chinese Emigrants. There are now three Protectors of Chinese Emigrants in the colony, Mr. Pickering, and Dr. Dennys, in Singapore, and Mr. Karl in Penang, and it is to be supposed that their interesting clients now will be protected to the satisfaction of the most rabid philanthropist in the colony. It is curious, however, that nothing has yet been heard of a Protector of Immigrants, who come here in shoals, undeterred by fear of crimps, abductors, and all the wiles and machinations of the planters of Sumatra. According to the figures in the books of the Master Attendant's Office, the number of Chinese coolies who arrived in this port from 1st January to the 31st May amounted to 11,757.

On the 29th May the annual sale of fancy articles in support of Miss Cooke's Chinese Girls' School took place in the Town-hall, and the result was fairly satisfactory.

The letter from our Port Darwin correspondent is noteworthy as showing a very different feeling there with regard to Chinese immigration from the extremely hostile one manifested in Queensland and other parts of Australia. Chinese immigrants, according to our correspondent, are eagerly welcomed there, and do exceedingly well. The Chinese coolies introduced from here a year or two ago by Captain Douglas, now Resident in Salangore, have nearly all elected to remain after the expiry of their terms of service, and by leasing the gold-fields' claims are making their £15 to £20 per month.

It has now definitely transpired that the Seychelles or Mhae Islands, a dependency of Mauritius, have been fixed upon for the future place of residence of the Perak Chiefs, and from all accounts they might have been deported to much worse quarters, the climate being fully as healthy as Perak.

Commissions for the collection of articles from this Colony and the Native States in the Peninsula for the Paris Exhibition next year have been appointed by Government, and are at work here and in Penang, and the co-operation of the Residents and Chiefs of the Native States have been requested and promised.

In the early part of the week there were some symptoms of cholera spreading, but during the last week heavy rain has fallen almost daily, and the atmosphere has been much cooler. Water is now abundant, and this cannot fail to have a beneficial effect upon the general health. It is said that the water-works may be finished in the course of another year. Our P. W. Department is exactly on a par with our Judicial Department.

The steamer Gloria stranded off Pulo Laut, an island of the Natunas group on May 30. The passengers were landed on the island, and the barge Marquis of Argyle, which was passing, offered to convey the passengers and crew to Singapore. The offer was, however, declined, the passengers being political prisoners. The purser of the steamer was brought to Singapore, and on the 13th the agent despatched the steamer Bentan to the assistance of the wrecked persons.

The Dutch expedition against the rebel Chief of Ternate has resulted in the capture of sixty prahus, and the destruction of Pyatti and two other towns.

Market Reports.

YOKOHAMA.—A fairly steady demand had existed for Yarns, bu rates were slightly weaker. Grey Shirtings had declined, and sales were only possible at low rates. Turkey Reds and Victoria Lawns had met with rather more attention, and Indigo Shirtings were fairly saleable. Black Velvets and Prints were very quiet. With the exception of some business in Blankets and Mousselines, transactions in Woollens had been on a very limited scale. There had been but a small dragging business in Metals, at a very low range of quotations, but at such prices holders had shown no general pressure to sell.

NAGASAKI.—Yarn had met with more inquiry and sales had been made at $90. Shirtings and T-Cloths had been taken pretty freely at former quotations. Turkey Reds were lower. There had been a brisk demand for Lawns and a few thousand pieces had found buyers at 92 to 95 cents. for full 42 inch. Woollens of all kinds were neglected. Nailrod Iron: Sales had been made with the greatest difficulty, at a decline of 25 cents. per picul.

CHINKIANG.—There had been a fairly active business doing in Manchester Goods, the chief enquiry being for good medium 8¼ lbs., Grey Shirtings, and fine qualities of 7 lbs. Mexican T-Cloths.

SHANGHAI.—A movement in the market for Shirtings and T-Cloths, which became apparent as last mail was closing, had since been fairly sustained, and buyers had been directing their attention to some other descriptions of Grey Cottons, but the prices given and accepted had in many instances been unremunerative, and in all they had been extremely irregular. In Fancy Cottons and Woollens scarcely anything had been done. Metals continued depressed. Nail Rod Iron was easier in value, and with heavy arrivals per Windhover and Scindia, the prospect has not improved. Lead: L.B. in small lots was quotable by sale at Tls. 5.72½ to 5.75 per picul, less 1 per cent. The advices from the Tientsin market had been somewhat more favourable, but no improvement was reported from the river ports.

FOOCHOW.—The sales had been 750 pieces 8 lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.32 to 2.35 per piece; and 250 pigs Lead at $8.75 to 9 per picul.

HONG KONG.—An extremely small business had been done during the fortnight. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Yarns: English are in very moderate demand, and prices are nominally unchanged. Piece Goods: The market has been quiet, and sales have been limited. 7 lb. Grey Shirtings are neglected but 8.4 lb. are slightly saleable at about former figures. T-Cloths move slowly, and White Shirtings are only being taken upon easier terms. All kinds of Drills are neglected, and there now is little or no enquiry for Sheetings and Jeans. In American Cottons, the only sales made privately during the past fortnight have been 440 pieces of "Massachusetts" and 160 pieces of "Appleton" 15 lb. Sheetings, at $3.50 per piece. At public auction 60 pieces "Continental" Sheetings and 345 pieces "Laconia" Drills have been sold, being damaged goods, ex ship Highlander, from Boston. These cottons were sold by the bale, and averaged $3.15 per piece for the Sheetings and $3.45 per piece for the Drills. Woollens: Settlements have been small and prices are much the same as those previously reported. Metals: Lead is in limited demand at rather lower prices. Tin is somewhat dearer. Soft Tin Plates are saleable to a slight extent, but Hard kinds are not in request. Yellow Metal can only be quitted at lower rates. Quicksilver is somewhat dearer. Coals: The arrivals have been 10,170 tons, comprising 7,820 tons of Australian and 2,353 tons of Cardiff. The sales have been 2,670 tons, made up entirely of Australian kinds, say 450 tons of Co-operative at $8.25, 1,320 tons of Duckenfield at $8.00, and 900 tons of Brisbane ex Clamis at $6.50 per ton. The market is quiet, and cargoes of Australian are now difficult of sale; Cardiff Coals however are in some demand, and quoted rates will be paid for parcels on the spot and to arrive in a short time. Ginseng: No sales have been made and holders will now have to accept rather lower rates to do business. Rice: A favourable change having taken place in the weather, and the receipts of foreign grain during the past fortnight having been large, the market has become weaker in the last few days, and a decline of 10 to 12 cents. per picul from the highest point touched has taken place.

CANTON.—Lead: But very little had been done and the quotations were nominal. L.B., $8.10 to 8.15; and W.B. and Hole Chop, $8.20 to 8.25 per picul. In Quicksilver, a slight advance may be noted, it being quoted at $60 to 61 per picul.

MANILA.—In consequence of heavy rains during the interval the market for Coloured and Fancy Goods had been much quieter. Plain Staples, especially the stouter fabrics, had been in improved demand at firmer values. As regards Yarns, No. 40's White and Nos. 30's and 40's Grey had been in good demand at an advance upon previous quotations.

SINGAPORE.—There had been hardly any change during the interval in the position of the Manchester market; the demand for most staples had been quiet, but holders pressed sales by lowering prices, and rates generally were weaker than last quoted. A limited business had been done; the principal sales advised being 14,000 pieces Grey Shirtings, 3,500 pieces Grey Supers, 59,000 pieces T-cloths, 55 bales Grey Drills, 15,500 pieces White Shirtings, 88 cases White Cambrics, 63 cases T. R. Cambrics, 70 bales Grey Yarn, 115 bales T. R. Yarn, 90 bales Coloured yarn, &c. There had been more business doing in Metals, but values had ruled low. Coals had been in demand at firm prices.

PENANG.—For Piece Goods the demand had been less active: for Grey Goods the market had been dull, and for White Goods only a moderate business had been done. Grey Shirtings: Small sales of 6 lbs. at $29, 7 lbs. at $32, and 8¼ lbs. at $35 to $43 for different qualities. No sale of 45 inch. 9 lbs. Grey Supers: Trifling sales of 5½ lbs. at $35½ to $38. Grey Madapollams: A sale of 2¼ lbs. at $12¾. Grey T.-Cloths: Sales of 6 lbs. at $23½ to $25, and 7 lbs. at $28 to $29. A sale of 7 lbs. Mexicans at $33½. Grey Yarns: Very dull. Sales of No. 40 at $102 to $100. White Shirtings: In moderate demand. Transactions in medium and fine qualities at $59½ to $80—Low has sold at $41; a sale of 45 inch at $68. Metals: No sales. Coals: A cargo of Cardiff quitted at $9.20 cash ex ship.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—After departure of the s.s. City of Peking, on the 23rd May, prices gradually weakened, and heavy arrivals, amounting to some 7,000 piculs, coming in between the 28th and 31st May, a marked decline was established. High grades were in small supply, the bulk of tea to hand representing good medium sorts. Total settlements amounted to 12,500 piculs. Supplies were arriving freely, and the general quality of parcels offering was satisfactory. The sailing vessel Bothwell Castle had been laid on for San Francisco and Overland, taking freight for New York and Eastern States only, at 2¾ cents per lb. gross. The s.s. Teviot was also on the berth for New York, via Amoy and Suez Canal, at £4 per ton of 40 cubic feet. Quotations:—medium, $18 to 19; good medium, $20 to 22; fine, $24 to 27; finest, $28 to 32; choice, $35 to 38; choicest, $40 and upwards.

NAGASAKI.—In anticipation of the early arrival of new leaf, prices had declined $1.00 to $1.50 per picul. Settlements, chiefly common to medium, were 1,370 bales at $6.00 to $12.00 per picul, and 2,055 bales at $2.50 to $6.00 per picul. Stocks amounted to 4,200 bales. Quotations: Common to medium, $3.00 to $6.00; medium to fine $7.00 to $11.00. Export from 1st May, 1876, to 1st May, 1877, 3,392,723 lbs.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Evans, Pugh, and Co.'s Report says:—Musters of new crop were rather later in arriving this year, none being shown till the 17th May, when seven small chops of Ningchow were put on the market, followed the day after by samples of 96 chops representing Teas from nearly all the districts. The market was opened that day by the settlement of a chop of finest Ningchow at Tls. 44 per picul = 2s. 5¾d. per lb. bought for the Russian market. A few other chops of Ningchow were taken, making settlements that day 5,500 ½-chests. Business soon became general, and settlements during first three days of the season amount to 57,000 chests, against 49,000 chests in same time last year. Opening prices were for Chon-sow-kais Tls. 26½ to 29, Yang-low-tongs Tls. 26 to 30½, Sung-yongs Tls. 31½ to 36, Ping-kongs Tls. 23 to 24, and Oanfas Tls. 38½ to 33 per picul. Buying for Russia has not been on so extensive a scale as during recent years, but there has been keen competition for some of the finest Teas. The highest price so far paid has been for Ee-Lan chop, Tls. 48 per picul = 2s. 8d. per lb., against Tls. 58 per picul = 3s. 2d. per lb. in 1876. It is too early to express an opinion on the quality of the crop generally, but we think it will prove to be an unsatisfactory one. The teas certainly possess strength, but are wanting in richness and fine quality. Oanfas are comparatively better than other kinds. Ningchows show a decided falling off, and have evidently been carelessly prepared, owing, it is said, to the unremunerative prices paid in the country for the leaf. Stock is estimated at 102,000 chests, against 25,000 chests last season, and arrivals 145,000 chests, against 88,000 chests. Quotations have ranged as follows:—For Ningchows, Tls. 35 to 48 per picul, against Tls. 45 to 59.50 last season; Finest Oanfas, Tls. 28 to 33, against Tls. 29 to 38.50 last season; Finest Oopacks, Tls. 31.50 to 36, against Tls. 31 to 40 last season; Other Oopacks, Tls. 23 to 27, against Tls. 22.25 to 30 last season; Oonahms, Tls. 23 to 38, against Tls. 23 to 30 last season.

SHANGHAI.—Black: No musters had been offered here. Green: The market for new leaf was reported to have opened in the Teenkai district, but at what range of prices was not known. Pingsueys were said to be rather higher in price than last season.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s Letter says:—The general opening of the market took place on 21st May, and settlements have since continued on a small scale. First purchases of Paklings were made on 12th, and total settlements to date (26th May) amount to 52,824 boxes and 948 half-chests, against 43,492 boxes and 1,250 half-chests last season. It is confidently asserted that the first crop will be 30 per cent. short of last season; the entire quantity expected is under 100,000 boxes, last year 140,000 boxes arrived on this market. As regards the general quality of Teas to hand, it is evident that the leaf has been left too long on the plants, but, without being able to report a good crop, as far as seen, there is no doubt that it is superior to last season, Teas being fresher in the cup and of a cleaner appearance. A marked improvement in the quantity of dust has taken place, Teas generally not containing within 15 per cent. of what they have done during the past few seasons. Paklings are not of such good appearance as they were last year, but are stronger in cup, and of fair average quality. Saryunes and Yung Hows are decidedly superior. Suey Kuts are also better, but a favourable report cannot be given on the Teas that have been shown from the Fock Oan districts however, the quantity arrived is small. No up country teas have as yet come to hand, but before the next issue of this Report there will doubtless have been arrivals. Prices for the various kinds have been as follows:—Paklings, Tls. 26½ to 33½ = 1s. 6¾d. to 1s. 10½d., a reduction on last year's rates of Tls. 3; Suey Kuts, Tls. 22 to 23½ = 1s. 4¼d. to 1s. 5d., a reduction on last year's rates of Tls. 2; Saryunes, Tls. 19 to 23 = 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 4¾d., a reduction on last year's rates of Tls. 3; Yung Hows, &c., Tls. 20½ to 25 = 1s. 3¾d. to 1s. 5¾d., a reduction on last year's rates of Tls. 2; Fock Oan, Tls. 31 to 34 = 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10¾d., a reduction on last year's rates of Tls. 3. One chop of Oolong has changed hands at Tls. 24. Quotations are:—Congou, 229 chests choice, 1s. 10¾d.; 4,735 chests fine to finest, 1s. 8¾d. to 1s. 10¼d.; 8,475 chests good medium to fine, 1s. 5¾d. to 1s. 8d.; 22,560 chests fair to medium, 1s. 1¾d. to 1s. 5d. Oolong, 233 half-chests fair, 1s. 5d. Scented Orange Pekoe, 400 boxes choice, 2s. 4¾d. The export to Great Britain and the Continent amounts to 1,094,000 lbs., against nil at same period last year.

AMOY AND FORMOSA.—Messrs. Olyphants' Circular says:—With regard to Formosa Ooloongs, letters have been received from Tamsui to the 28th May, reporting a fair amount of business doing in the unfired leaf at rather easier rates. The total export to Amoy at date was 1,313,414 lbs. against 794,277 lbs., at same time last year. Settlements in native-packed Tamsuis at this port during the past week amount to 5,216 half-chests, ranging from good cargo to extra choice at a decline of $1 to $2 per picul on all grades up to finest, and an advance of fully $2 to $3 per picul on the choice kinds. The unsold stock is now about 13,000 half-chests. Amoy Ooloong: Musters of nearly forty chops were placed on the market a day or two since, and are in our opinion preferable to the first arrivals of last season, most of the teas being better fired and stronger in water. Settlements have been reported of 337 half-chests for London market at $28½ short, and 391 half-chests grading good cargo up, at the supposed price of $24 short, these figures being much on a par with the opening prices of last season. Congou: Musters of two chops from the Wha Hong district have been placed on show, and appear to be much inferior to last year's teas from same place.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—A fairly active business has again been transacted in our market, at prices showing little or no change on those current a fortnight ago. Congous:—Transactions both here and at Macao have been on a moderate scale, and a portion of the settlements made at both ports is reported to be for the Australian market; there is no change in quotations to notice. Scented Teas: The demand for Capers has continued, and the amount settled again reaches a large figure. Medium teas have commanded most attention, and have found purchasers at fully former rates. A few parcels of common tea have been taken at very full prices, the quality of the settlements being much inferior to the teas of last season of the same class, while the tael prices are much about the same. Finest teas have latterly ruled slightly in favour of buyers. We quote common to good common Tls. 16½ to 19, fair to medium Tls. 20 to 24, good medium to fine Tls. 26 to 29, and finest Tls. 30 to 34. Pekoes have also been in demand, and a fair business has resulted; both "long leaf" kinds and "new makes" have been taken at previous full rates; for the former, prices have ruled from Tls. 23 to 30, and for the latter, from Tls. 18½ to 21. Scenting-flower has been very scarce throughout the fortnight, owing to the injury sustained by the plants during the heavy floods lately experienced in this neighbourhood; no abundant supply of flower can be expected for nearly a month. A few purchases have been made, chiefly for the Colonial market. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 4,360 boxes at Tls. 20 to 33 per picul; Scented Caper, 39,000 boxes at Tls. 16½ to 34; Scented Orange Pekoe, 15,000 boxes at Tls. 18½ to 30; Gunpowder, 1,100 boxes at Tls. 15 to 27.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The activity previously existing had given way to extreme depression, and only a small business had been done, though holders had pressed sales at a fall of fully $50 per picul on Hank sorts. The best sorts of Kakeda were firmly held at former rates, and had been dealt in to a small extent. From all accounts the new crop was progressing favourably. The settlement from 1st July, 1876, to date had amounted to 20,925 bales, against 13,300 bales in corresponding period last season. The stock was 1,000 bales, against 80 bales at same date last year.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—The country having been quite cleared of silk for transportation to Shanghai, we are now at the end of season 1876-77 with the large unsold stock of 8,000 bales, the greater portion of which is of a most unsaleable description, and is very unlikely ever to be shipped on foreign account. Within the past fortnight, however, the whole of it has been withdrawn from offer consequent on the expected shorter yield for export in 1877-78 than was originally anticipated. New Crop: Sudden changes in the temperature have caused an alarming mortality amongst the worms, and in place of an unusually large yield, all reports from the interior tend to prove that a considerable amount of damage has undoubtedly taken place. We cannot expect to determine with any certainty how much silk will eventually arrive, but the general opinion amongst the native brokers seems to be that we must calculate upon receiving nearly 60,000 bales for export during the approaching season. The few purchases made up-country as yet have been on a basis of Tls. 445 per picul here for Mountain chop No. 1, and although the actual amount of business doing is exceedingly limited, the market is said to be strong with a prospect of higher rates when buying has commenced in other districts. A muster book or two has been already shown, and there will probably be 300 to 400 bales of the new silk placed on this market before the departure of next mail.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says.—Silkmen acknowledge to having made contracts to the extent of about 400 bales Tsatlee, whilst the belief is that they reach nearly 700 bales. Purchasing commenced shortly after the issue of our last circular, but it was not until the 24th instant that buying became general, and operators showed signs of wishing to procure silk; the market closes quiet, and lower prices are expected to rule when dealers have secured enough silk for fulfilling their contracts. Shipments of New Silk by the outgoing mail steamer will probably amount to 250 bales and upwards. Prices paid show much irregularity; $335 per picul was mentioned for the first contract for No. 4 classification, and by degrees the rate was forced up to $370 per picul, but at this latter figure the principal business was done among natives; to day $365 would be accepted, for delivery for next mail steamer. The quality of the crop is somewhat disappointing, the colour being generally more dingy than usual, but in other respects it may be considered of fair average. The second yield is expected on the market in a fortnight to three weeks hence. Long-reels have been dealt in to some extent, Parsees having shipped about 25 piculs to Bombay by last English mail at $385 per picul, and it is said that 70 piculs more have been settled at $375 to $385, for shipment by this opportunity. Re-reels: There are no settlements to report, but, in harmony with prices for Tsatlees, the nominal quotations given below show an advance of $25 to $30 per picul on those current ten days ago. The available thread is hardly serviceable for the better grades. Waste Silk: 200 bales, No. 2, have been settled at $60 to $65.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—The current quotations were, Camphor, $17 to $18 Isinglass, $22 to $23; Rice, $2 to $2.05; Wax, $10 to $10.50; Tobacco, $6.25 to $9.50.

NAGASAKI.—Messrs. Holme, Ringer and Co.'s Circular says:—Tobacco: In the absence of stocks there is nothing to report. Vegetable Wax: About 100 boxes have changed hands at an advance of $1 per picul. Stocks amount to 300 boxes. Camphor: Has attracted more attention, and prices have risen $3 per picul, resulting in an increased supply, which has been readily taken at $16.50 per picul; sales, 570 tubs; stock, nil. Rice: Confidence having been still further restored, and the disturbances being now confined to the Satsuma province, the grain has declined to nearly its former value, present quotation being $2.10 per picul. Coal: Remains without any material alteration. Settlements—Karatz 1,800 tons at $25.00 to $27.00 per 100 piculs; Imabuku 1,560 tons at $20.00 to $21.00; Amakusa (Anthracite) 12,000 piculs at $27.00 to $29.00 per 100 piculs. Stocks, Karatz 1,000 tons, Imabuku 600 tons.

SHANGHAI.—Messrs. Birt and Co.'s Circular says:—Waste Silk: The only shipments during the month have been six bales to London and two muster bales to Bombay, and our market remains bare of stock. Cotton: There has been no export of cotton to Europe during the last month, locally the business hs been on a pretty large basis, the export to Japan amounting to about 6,000 piculs, to Chefoo and Tientsin 6,000, to Amoy and Swatow 4,000, and 30,400 to Hankow. Prices remain firm as last quoted. Wool: The export of China Sheep's Wool during the last month amounted to 2,637 piculs, including a few hundred piculs of New Spring Clip Woosie Wool of exceedingly good quality.

HONG KONG.—Formosa Camphor was firm at $19, and some small lots of Japan cargo had realised $22 to 22.50 per picul. The stock of all kinds was only about 300 piculs. Gamboge continued scarce, and good quality was quoted $55 per picul. Vermilion ruled at $33 per case. At Macao little or no change had taken place of late in Drugs. Aniseed Oil was quiet at $188 to 196 per picul; stock 320 piculs. Cassia Oil was held for $97.50 to 98 per picul, buyers refusing to pay these figures. Inferior Aniseed Stars were commanding $25 per picul, and were being bought by Chinese for shipment to the Northern markets.

CANTON.—The only sale during the fortnight had been 300 piculs, Cassia at $10.50 to 10.75 per picul. Nothing had been done in other articles of exports, quotations for which were nominal.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar and Hemp are slightly weaker, but Coffee is firmer. Sugar: Latest telegraphic advices appear to be rather less favourable for the article, and our market has become slightly weaker in consequence. Sales of superior have been made to extent of about 40,000 piculs at prices ranging from $6.25 to 6.50 per picul, but the demand has now abated and lower prices are offered. We have not heard of any sales of extra as much lower prices are being offered than would be accepted Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to 25,000 piculs, all of which has been taken at from $3.50 to 3.75 per picul. At Ilo Ilo and Cebu prices had advanced and were still tending upwards. Hemp: Notwithstanding the dull advices that have come out from England, our market, so far, has not been materially affected, though there is now less eagerness shown to buy. We quote current to good quality at $6.37½ to 6.50 per picul (£26 16s. 2d. to £27 5s. 7d.), but stored parcels are still being held for higher rates. Coffee: A few sales were made at the beginning of the fortnight at $19.50 per picul (£76 4s.), but now as high as $20.50 per picul (£79 19s.) is demanded. Cigars: It appears that the desire of the present authorities is to supply the demand for the interior in preference to that for export, and, if this is all the change that is intended, it seems likely that shipments will very shortly be resumed. Indigo: Sales are reported to have been made of about 200 cases at a secret price, supposed to be about $35 per quintal. M. O. P. Shells: There have been no arrivals for some time past, and we do not hear of any inquiries. Sapanwood. We quote good current at $1.50 per picul (£6 13s. 2d.), and packed at $1.75 per picul (£7 12s.)

SINGAPORE.—There had not been any material change in the Produce market, a quiet demand had prevailed for most staples, and a moderate business had occurred; tendency of prices had been easier. The market for Gambier opened weaker, the price falling from $4.37½ to $4.30; a small business was done at the lower quotation, and then the price hardened, a fair amount of business being done at $4.35 to $4.37½, and the last transactions were at $4.37½ per picul. Cube Gambier had been in good inquiry, and firmer. Black Pepper had been offered more freely, the demand had remained quiet and quotations were weaker. Supplies of White Pepper had been coming forward slowly, prices had been easier, stocks of good quality were held by dealers for higher rates. The Tin market had been quiet, prices have further receded, 95 tons had been bought at $19.50 to $19.40 per picul.

PENANG.—Tin had been quiet, and only a moderate business had been done. Black Pepper had been in better inquiry, and large purchases had been made. Sugar of European manufacture had been in demand, but the article was very scarce. Tin: Demand had been entirely for China and India, and purchases amounted to 2,500 piculs. Price opened at $19.20, and gradually declining, closed at $18.75—at which there were buyers and no sellers. Stock 4,600 piculs. Black Pepper: Transactions had been principally for India and China. Inquiry for Europe had been small. Purchases amounted to about 7,000 piculs Atchin at $7.20 to $7.2½ and West Coast at $7.27½. White Pepper: No purchases. Nominal $14. Sugar: Purchases of No. 2 European manufacture at $5.10. No. 1 wanted, but no sellers—manufacturers fully under contract. Chinese had manufactured a small quantity for ready delivery, purchased at $4—dealers were firm and refused to enter into contracts.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

Messrs. Frederick Huth and Co., in their Market Report, dated July 13, make the following remarks :—

Since our last report of the 6th inst. we have had some more arrivals of new teas, including the Glenearn, from Foochow. Importers have been anxious to realise, and large quantities have in rapid succession been put forward by public sales without reserve. Prices are about 2d. to 3d. per lb. lower than at the opening of the market; the lowest price for black leaf is 11½d. per lb., and the highest 2s. 8d. per lb.; a few fine chops have also been sold at from 2s. 3d. to 2s. 6d. per lb. Should our accounts from China prove true, we shall have this year the largest import of tea and the lowest range of prices ever known. Our present prices are still too high, especially when the poor quality of the new crop is taken into account; the intrinsic value of Congou, now realising about 1s. to 1s. 2d., would be more truly represented by 8d. to 9d. per lb., and it looks very much as if prices would soon sink to that level, if not lower still.

On the above exaggerated and erroneous statements The Times prints the following:—

Complaints are general in Mincing-lane that the business of importing tea, which, bad enough already, should be further depressed by the publication of speculative conjectures as to the future. We allude to an extract from a tea circular of the 13th inst. which appeared in The Times, viz., "Should our accounts from China prove true, we shall have this year the largest import of tea and the lowest range of prices ever known." The low range of prices is very probable, judging from the course of the market during the past ten days, but the telegrams which we have before us lead to quite a different conclusion as to the total import for the season. One dated Shanghai, the 8th inst. reports—"Exporters buying sparingly. Teamen are losing by the second crop, which is likely to be short. Export 41,000,000 lb."

Last year the shipments on that day were 41,600,000 lbs. to this country and about 5,000,000 lbs. to Russia, making an aggregate of about 46,000,000 lbs., the market at Shanghai being active and prices advancing. From Foochow also the buying is reported to have received a check. It is too early to form any idea as to the future, and speculative conjectures such as the above quoted are apt to do much harm.—Your obedient servants, MINCING-LANE.

The P. and O. steamer Zambesi arrived at Southampton yesterday from China with 160,216 lbs. of tea, 30 bales silk, 6 cases silk piece goods, 18 bales ponjee silk, 10,676 bags sugar, and 981 packages Sundries for London; also 54,940 lbs. Tea for New York.

The Messageries Maritimes steamer Meikong, which was lost while on her homeward voyage, had on board 193,449 lbs. Tea and 143 bales Silk for London, 6,900 lbs. Tea and 53 bales Silk for the Continent, also 16 cases Silk Piece Goods, and 734 packages Sundries for London.

The English Government has given permission for British officers holding civil appointments under the Khedive of Egypt to retain their posts. Mr. Smylie, a chief engineer in the Royal Navy, who had obtained leave to enter the service of an engineering firm at Constantinople, has been discovered to be in the pay of the Turkish Government, and an intimation has been sent to him that he must either resign that employment or be struck off the list of the Royal Navy.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S SCHOOLS AT SOUTHAMPTON.—The complete acquisition by the Southampton School Board of what was formerly the P. and O. Schools, and which have lately been known as the Eastern District Board Schools, has for some time past been frustrated owing to the action of Captain Bain, one of the shareholders of the company, who resisted the transfer or surrender of the lease, which was formerly granted to Mr. Anderson, and subsequently held by him in trust on behalf of the company, with whom he contracted both for himself and his executors to dispose of the property as the company should from time to time direct. The company had directed the executor to convey or surrender the lease, so that the School Board might become the absolute possessors of the schools, and Captain Bain refused. In consequence of this the intervention of the Court of Chancery had to be invoked, and an action was promoted by the Company against Captain Bain, which first came before Mr. Commissioner Hill, and was afterwards transferred to Mr. Justice Fry in the Chancery division of the High Court of Justice, by whom judgment has been given in favour of the company, Captain Bain being condemned in the costs of the suit.

THE CHINA CHALLENGE CUP.—The contest for the China Cup at Wimbledon on Saturday terminated in a victory for the 1st Norfolk, who have scored 391 marks. The winners take the Cup and £25; the second in point of number, the 2nd Cheshire, scored 366, and take £15; the third, the 3rd Lancashire, scored 365, and take £10.

THE P. and O. Company have decided to run through steamers, commencing with the Gwalior, due 23rd inst., from China to London, via the Suez Canal, calling at Southampton to land passengers and mails.

THE CHOP DOLLAR QUESTION.

THE memorial which has been sent in by the bankers and merchants of Hong Kong to his Excellency the Governor of the Colony, in reply to a petition addressed to him by certain Chinese traders, sets forth in very plain and unexaggerated language the difficulties which have been brought about by the barbarous habit of the Chinese of "chopping" dollars. The large majority of our readers are already only too well acquainted with what this system is; but it may be well to premise for those who have not been in China that it consists in a custom which has from the earliest days of our trade with China existed among the natives at Hong Kong, Canton, and the southern ports, of striking with a small die the name of the "hong" or house of business receiving the dollar on the surface of the coin. This operation being repeated by every hong, has the effect before long of completely defacing the coin, and thus deteriorating it in value as a circulating medium. To compensate for this the bankers and merchants have long been in the habit of receiving these chopped dollars at a discount—the only way, in fact, in which they could be dealt with, except a refusal to take them at all; and recently, as noted in our news columns, certain Chinese dealers have protested against this, and have sent in a petition to the Government on the subject, in reply to which the bankers and merchants' memorial above noticed has been drawn up. There can be only one view which anybody judging upon grounds of common sense can take of this question, and that is that it is clearly the part of the local Government of Hong Kong to discourage the practice of the Chinese, and to do its utmost to put an end to the use of chopped dollars at all. Most certainly if this be impossible it can in no way be considered the part of the Government to aid one section of the community in passing defaced coin to the great inconvenience of all in trade. As the memorialists point out, bankers, merchants, and others who are able to keep a large staff of shroffs are able to protect themselves, but professional men, naval and military and civil servants are seriously incommoded by the mutilated currency which is tendered to them. The memorialists go on very pertinently to observe that if legislation is deemed necessary, it should tend rather to raise than to lower the character of the local currency, and that no laws should be passed to enforce the acceptance of coins entirely unsuited to a civilised community. The justness of this view will be more fully recognised when it is borne in mind that the Chinese themselves, who ask that the vicious system of chop dollars should receive Government countenance and support, are the fons et origo of the whole difficulty. What the object of chopping dollars originally was, we believe, no one can precisely say. The idea that it could afford any protection against spurious coin is almost too simple to have been believed in by so shrewd a people as the Chinese; but if it was, the plan is now quite needless, as the coins themselves are so well known that the Chinese shroffs are thoroughly able to protect themselves on receiving them. Certainly, it would be highly desirable, if possible, to prevent their circulation altogether; but if on account of their being brought from Foochow and other places it is impossible to carry out so strong a measure, it is clear that any attempt on the part of the Legislature to regulate the manner in which they are to be received by the trading community would be a vexatious and ill-advised interference with trade. It is, on the contrary, to be hoped that some steps may be devised for ousting the chop dollar altogether. That the chopping is perfectly needless is proved by the fact that it is only in Hong Kong and the South that chop dollars are found. In Shanghai and the Northern ports "clean Mexicans" are alone accepted in commercial and business transactions.

THE LEKIN DUES.

IT is to be hoped that the telegram which has been received, to the effect that the German Minister at Peking has obtained from the Chinese Government a definite promise to discontinue the levy of Lekin, may be taken as an indication that this question is upon a fair way to settlement. The reopening of negotiations on the subject, to which we briefly animadverted in our last, is the logical conclusion of the unfortunately ambiguous position in which this matter was placed in the Convention agreed to by Sir THOMAS WADE. Although the regulation to the effect that Lekin should not be levied by the Chinese in the foreign settlements was no doubt designed only to put a stop to a special difficulty, which had long been felt there, and was not, as we understand the matter, intended to affect the question generally, it is still impossible to ignore that this provision appears by implication to admit the right of the Chinese to levy Lekin duties upon foreign goods, notwithstanding that the half-tariff due has been paid as a commutation of the transit dues in full. This principle, if pushed a step further, would have the effect of enabling the Chinese officially to levy internal taxes to an indefinite amount upon foreign trade with the sanction of the Treaty; and in point of fact would render the provisions as to the internal dues nugatory, as, whatever might be given up as transit-dues could be more than counterbalanced by extra Lekin. No doubt it has hitherto proved practically an impossibility to prevent the levy of this tax in the interior; but this is hardly a reason for recognising it, and the effect of doing so would unquestionably be to increase the activity of the local officials in placing squeezes upon foreign trade. If it is, as we are afraid must be admitted, impossible to prevent the levy of Lekin in one form or another upon our goods, and it is therefore deemed advisable to recognise the tax, this should be done as a concession (as it undoubtedly is) on our part, and in return for some counter-consideration to be yielded by the Chinese. Probably the best form in which this counter-concession could be made would be that the Chinese Government should undertake within a specified time to place the whole matter of internal traffic upon a definite basis, as has been promised from the time of the Nanking Treaty to the present day, but has never yet been carried out. As to the absence of right on the part of the Chinese to levy any tax upon foreign goods which have paid duty in the Settlements themselves, there can hardly be a real difference of opinion, as it is obviously absurd and unreasonable that they should levy at one and the same place an amount specifically agreed upon by treaty, and also a further amount arbitrarily fixed by themselves. In agreeing not to do this in the Chefoo Convention they virtually gave up nothing, and it was certainly not wise to give an implied consent to a dangerous principle in return for their doing this.

THE TRADE OF HAINAN.

WE notice from the Hong Kong papers to hand by recent mails that several vessels have been chartered for Hainan, and are glad to chronicle this evidence of the satisfactory progress of trade at that port. As has been the case with respect to many other places which it has been from time to time proposed to open to foreign commerce, the trade of Hainan was stated as likely to prove disappointing. The deputy of the Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong, who was sent about a year back specially to report upon the subject, spoke very unfavourably of the trading prospects of Kiungchow, and even went so far as to say that the opening of that port appeared to be an error, and that any development of the trade there was highly problematical. He estimated the consumption of imports at a merely nominal figure, while the exports were considered of too miscellaneous and unimportant a character to offer any prospect of trade worthy of much consideration. The returns of the Customs for the last quarter of 1876, however, show that the prospects are certainly somewhat better than was anticipated. Twelve steamers had visited the port during that period, and it now appears that this movement is increasing. It is of course premature to speak in any very decided terms on the subject, as further statistics than are now obtainable are necessary in order to do so; but it is clear that the estimates which have been made of the capabilities of Kiungchow have been considerably under the mark; and that there is a better prospect than has been hitherto imagined of a satisfactory trade becoming developed. The general statements obtainable on the spot with respect to the trading capabilities of any given place in China are unfortunately ordinarily to be little relied upon. The sources from which the information is obtained must for the most part be native, and it often happens that the Chinese speak in discouraging terms of the trading capabilities of the places at which they are respectively resident, with the express object of preventing foreigners from coming to them. We shall look with interest for further accounts of the trade at Hainan; and trust that the indications which are now noticeable will prove the forerunners of future success.

THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER "MEIKONG."

ALTHOUGH pending the result of the official inquiry into the above-named catastrophe we deem it right to confine our remarks to a very small compass, we cannot, in face of some statements which have been generally made, and which are certain to obtain further publicity, pass over the matter altogether in silence, even at its present stage. As in all similar cases, two points present themselves for consideration—first, the nature of the accident itself, and, secondly, the conduct of the captain and officers after it had occurred. With respect to the first point, opinion is unanimous as to the extreme likelihood of accidents occurring at Cape Guardafui, on account of the possibility of mistaking the headlands; and it is, therefore, but fair to consider that the presumption at present is in favour of this having been an unavoidable accident, and not one of a nature to reflect blame upon the captain. This point will, of course, be duly considered in the official investigation, and we shall look with much interest for the decision arrived at. With respect to the second point, opinion appears to be very much divided, some considering that Captain FOACHE behaved in a very heroic manner, and others, like the correspondent whose letter we publish, thinking that he was lacking in energy in maintaining discipline and in taking steps to get the baggage out of the vessel—the latter matter being especially animadverted upon. It is, however, to be borne in mind that every consideration ought to be shown in criticising the conduct of anyone called upon to act upon an emergency and under critical circumstances; and that, in such a case, a mere question of whether a man might have done a little better or a little worse ought not to have any weight, provided it be shown that he used his judgment fairly and reasonably, and was not lacking in the efforts which are expected of him for the general safety. Upon the whole, we understand from competent authority that could be done was done, though to landsmen unacquainted with the real difficulties, various plans, which would have been in reality impracticable, naturally suggested themselves.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Chinese Envoys still continue to visit the various public institutions of interest. On the 3rd inst. they went to the Greenwich Observatory, and were taken over the building, the various instruments, &c., being explained to them. They were shown the calculations made in connection with the Transit of Venus, which extend to twelve millions of figures, and have been kept up by over a dozen people since the last occurrence of that event. They will probably be completed in about a year. After seeing the Observatory they were present at the annual dinner of the chairman and directors of the Oriental Bank. The chair was occupied by Mr. Arbuthnot, on whose right was H.E. Kwo, and the vice-chair by Sir W. Baines, who had the Second Minister on his right. Sir Thomas Wade was on the left of the chairman, and Sir Rutherford Alcock on that of the vice-chairman, and Sir Henry Barclay was among those present. The Chairman proposed the health of the Envoys, expressing his satisfaction at two high Chinese officials being amongst us. The Envoys have visited the Dukes of Devonshire and Sutherland and Mrs. Loftus Otway, and were present at one of the State Concerts at Buckingham Palace. They have also paid a visit to the School of Mines in Jermyn-street, over which they were shown by Professor Warrington Smyth. The Envoys on Friday last paid a visit to Guy's Hospital. His Excellency was conducted through the museum and various wards by Dr. Steele (superintendent), Dr. Pavy (physician), and Mr. Lushington (treasurer), and expressed themselves highly gratified with the visit.

At their recent visit to Ipswich the reception which was given to them by the people generally could not fail to have impressed them. One incident is particularly worthy of note, that of a grey-headed old man man running after the carriage in order to shake hands with H. E. Kwo. The little children also showed noticeable enthusiasm, cheering them and giving other demonstrations of pleasure. This conduct certainly contrasted markedly with that which has been too often experienced by foreigners in China, as for instance by the Hon. W. H. Seward, who on his visit to Woochang was mobbed and had stones thrown at him. The contrast cannot fail to strike the Ministers and to be productive of beneficial effects.

THE LOSS OF THE M.M. STEAMER "MEIKONG."

The following account of the wreck of the above-named steamer, which was forwarded by a correspondent at Alexandria may be taken as a substantially correct statement of the occurrence — with the exception of the important point that it was during the night and on the south side of the Cape that the Glenartney was first seen, and not on the following day—and tallies in the main with that given in the letter which we subjoin from one of the passengers. We are informed upon undoubted authority that the statement that the Glenartney would have struck on the same reef but for the lights from the steamer Meikong is a pure fiction; she was in no danger previous to making up for the rescue of the Meikong:—

You have already had news of the wreck of the French steamer Meikong, but a fuller account will be interesting. The Meikong, Captain Fouache, is one of the finest of the many fine steamers comprising the fleet of the Messageries Maritimes Steam Navigation Company. She was homeward bound from China to Marseilles with a valuable cargo, and eighty passengers, first and second-class. After leaving Galle on the 9th June, making an excellent run for Cape Guardafui, land was sighted as expected at eleven P.M. on the 17th June. Thinking this land to be Cape Guardafui, the captain shaped his course for Aden, and left the bridge in charge of the usual officers of the watch. This land, however, proved to be a promontory, some miles to the south of the Cape, and the course set took the steamer in an hour right on to the shore four miles to the south of Guardafui. The south-west monsoon having set in, and a heavy sea running, the ship was at once heeled over, fortunately towards the land. It was seen at a glance that nothing could be done for her, and every effort was made to save the passengers. Surprised in the dead of night, they had to leave their berths at a moment's notice, with only such clothing as they had on or could snatch in an instant. Nine ladies and eleven children were first cared for; then forty-five male passengers; then the officers and crew, Captain Fouache being the last man to leave the ship. With the exception of two sailors, who were washed away and never seen again, all these 170 persons were landed alive and without a casualty. Before reaching the shore every boat laden with people was capsized, some boats turning over and coming up again two or three times, but by the brave and unceasing exertions of the officers and sailors many persons were literally caught on the waves and dragged to land. The ladies, as I have said, with the children were in the first boat. It being impossible to save anything from the ship, not even the mails, except three bags for Marseilles and a package of registered letters, there remained nothing to do but to walk over the high land of Cape Guardafui, signal for assistance, and reach the northern or sheltered side of the Cape. This march of ten miles was commenced on the 18th June in a burning sun, with scanty and unsuitable clothing—everything many had in the world being left on board the Meikong. The fatigue and suffering of this short journey can scarcely be imagined. Two men—one quite aged, Mr. Arathorn, of Madras, and the purser—could not accomplish the distance. They died from exhaustion and sunstroke; and strong men informed me that had the journey been five miles longer no one could have survived it. Arrived on the north side of Cape Guardafui, this band of sufferers experienced the unspeakable and almost unlooked-for boon of succour the very same day. The Glenartney, an English steamer from China, laden with tea, passing close to the Cape, saw the signals of distress, and soon discovered the position of those wrecked.

Digitized by Google

Although engaged in a race with the Tartae, over which the Glenartney had an advantage of forty-eight hours, the Captain did not hesitate a moment, but at once sent his boats on shore, and making several passages himself between the ship and the land, and aided as only sailors can work on such occasions, by officers and all hands, they succeeded in bringing every soul on board. Although the Glenartney had no accommodation whatever for passengers, she made these sufferers very comfortable, and they will never cease to think and speak with gratitude of the conduct of the captain, his officers, and crew. The 360 miles from Cape Guardafui to Aden being quickly accomplished, the passengers landed until arrangements could be made for sending them to Europe, and the Glenartney continued her course up the Red Sea, everyone wishing her "God speed." On the 21st June six officers and four passengers of the Meikong left Aden in a steamer called the Roma. The captain, chief officer, and seventy passengers waited until the 23rd June, and then all embarked on board the Peninsular and Oriental Company's mail steamer Zambesi, from Bombay. The Zambesi arrived at Suez at 8 A.M. Sunday, July 1, the Roma at 4 P.M. A consular inquiry into the loss of the ship was held at Aden, but the result is not yet known. Speaking to any nautical man about this wreck, he would say, "Oh, yes, I perfectly understand how it could have occurred, the same thing has nearly (and in some cases actually) happened to me." There are at this moment several wrecks visible between Cape Guardafui and Rusafuer. No year ever passes by without adding to the number, and such being the case the question naturally occurs, how is it there is no lighthouse at such a dangerous point?

A correspondent, one of the passengers on board, sends the following:—

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Having been one of the unfortunate passengers on board the M.M. steamer Meikong, and deeming that your readers will be glad to receive a full account of the wreck, I forward the following notes of what I know of the occurrence:—

At about twelve midnight, on June 17, when the larger portion of those on board had gone below, the ship struck. I was asleep at the time, and was awakened by three tremendous bumps on the rocks, and, rushing on deck, I found that the ship was heeling over on one side, and the waves washing over her. As may be imagined, there was the greatest confusion on board—the ladies screaming in their cabins, and everyone appalled by the unexpected catastrophe. Three boats were launched at that time, and some of the passengers got on board these boats with the crews, consisting of the French sailors. They all got on shore, with the exception of two sailors, who were drowned. One of the boats managed to connect a line between the shore and the ship, and the captain said it would be quite possible to land all the passengers, but he would recommend them to wait until the morning. This we had to do, and our position was by no means a pleasant one, as the sea was washing over the ship all the time, and we were in fear that she might at any moment have foundered. The captain seemed to hesitate what course to adopt; and at about four o'clock the next morning, 18th June, one of the passengers suggested to him that if the Glenartney, which had been following us, were signalled, probably she would render assistance, and upon this he fired three guns, and sent up two rockets, and at daylight the Glenartney signalled that she would stand by us, but could not come in, as the sea was very rough, and some slight accident had happened to her engines.

At about half-past five the disembarakation began, and all the passengers were eventually brought on shore by means of the boats, each one of which, however, capsized as it neared the land, the French sailors helping those who needed it through the surf. When I got ashore three or four natives, Somalis, were looking on, and by the time we had all landed they were gathered by hundreds. The statement made in one of the daily papers to the effect that they robbed the ladies is, however, I believe, incorrect. Up to the time of the passengers being landed the sailors behaved well—in fact, it was only through their exertions that we were able to land; but here they stopped altogether. No attempt of any kind was made to get the baggage, and had I been aware this would be the case, I, in common with many other passengers, could have saved my valuables, which I put into a portmanteau and left in my cabin. As a proof that it was possible to get at it, I may mention that a fellow-passenger induced a French sailor for a reward to go on board and get his deed-box. The last boat that came contained the sailors' kits and parrots; but no attention was paid to the passengers. After they had got on shore there was no longer any discipline among the sailors, who drank all the claret that had been brought, and in some cases refused it to the passengers.

It being decided to make across the desert, a distance of about ten miles to where the Glenartney lay, I left with several others, among whom was the unfortunate Mr. Arrathorn, who never arrived at the other side. I did my best to dissuade him from making the attempt, counselling him to wait and come with the ladies and other passengers, for whom it was expected camels could be procured, but he determined to come. After we had gone some distance he began to weary, and another passenger and myself assisted him along to about half way across, when he was taken charge of by some others and fell behind. I am told that every effort was made to aid him, but he fell down exhausted, and died quite suddenly. I am sorry to add that the commissaire of the vessel died in a similar manner.

On arriving at the other side of the desert we found that the captain of the Glenartney had sent a boat there ashore provided with water, &c., and had himself set off over the desert to meet the other passengers. The camels which it was hoped could be procured never turned up, so that the whole party had to make their way across on foot. We got on board the Glenartney by seven o'clock, and started for Aden, where we had to spend a week in a very uncomfortable manner. We were taken on by the Zambesi to Suez, whence the M.M. steamer Said brought us to Marseilles. An address was presented to the captain of the Meikong, and the following letter was handed to Captain Gulland, of the Glenartney:—

COPY OF LETTER TO CAPTAIN GULLAND.

Captain W. A. Gulland, s.s. Glenartney.

Dear Sir,—We, the English passengers by the M.M.S. Meikong, before leaving the Glenartney, desire to express our warmest appreciation of your own and your chief officers humane and gallant conduct in rescuing us at the imminent risk of your lives after the wreck of the Meikong on the 18th inst. We would especially allude to the great peril incurred by you, both in crossing and re-crossing ten miles of desert, exposed to the blaze of a tropical sun, from the effects of which the Commissaire of the Meikong and one of our fellow-passengers died on the way.

To your generous assistance we undoubtedly owe the preservation of our lives, and words are therefore powerless to convey our heartfelt gratitude.

We have also to thank you warmly for the very great kindness you have shown us while we have been under your care, and for the thoughtfulness and consideration you have unremittingly displayed.

On our arrival in England we shall ask you and your officers and crew (who nobly seconded your efforts on our behalf) to accept a memento of a time of dire distress, which has ended through your instrumentality in an almost miraculous escape.

In taking leave of you now we most heartily wish continued success to the steamer Glenartney and its worthy commanding officers and crew, and remain,—Gratefully and sincerely yours.

(Signed by twenty-two passengers.)

I cannot but state further, with regard to the loss of the baggage, that two days after the wreck the French troopship Finisterre passed the wreck and sent men on board, when the sailors brought up some things from the cabins; and I am at a loss, therefore, to understand why an offer to send a gunboat off to assist in getting the baggage, which was made by the Resident at Aden to the Agent of the M.M. Company there should have been refused.—Yours faithfully,

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JULY 10.

A telegram from Berlin announces that the Chinese Government, at the request of Germany, have declared their willingness to open negotiations with the German and other interested Governments for the purpose of concerting the gradual abolition of the inland tolls and duties.

The events on the theatre of war during the last week seem more and more to establish that those which were of opinion that the Russo-Turkish war would be carried on in the same quick and energetic manner as the war of 1870-71 will not find their hopes realised. To all appearance the war will be a protracted one, and the friends of peace, especially the mercantile world, are eagerly looking for anything that looks like an intervention from one side or the other. Notwithstanding the promising harvest and the favourable reports about the growing crops from all sides, business is as slow as ever, and very few signs of improvement are visible. All transactions made are only for immediate consumption, and as long as the peace of Europe is not really secured, business, wanting of confidence, can and will never recover.

Emperor William is no longer at Ems, but has gone on Sunday to Koblenz, and has joined there with the Empress. This illustrious pair is said to go to-morrow, the 11th July, to the Isle of Mainau, in the Bodensee (Grand Duchesse of Baden), whither the Emperor will take a trip to Gastein, the famous bathing place in Austria. During the last days of the Emperor's sojourn at Ems he has seen there the Prussian Minister of Interior, Count Eulenburg, and the head-officer of the Berlin police, Herr von Madai. Also Sadullah Bey, the new Ambassador of the Turkish Empire, has been received in audience, and thus Turkey is again represented at the Imperial Court, the former Plenipotentiary, Edhem Pasha, having been elected as Minister by the Padishah.

Count Carolyi, the Austro-Hungarian Minister, who has also been at Ems, has taken cognisance of the details of the Emperor's intended visit on his way to Gastein to the Austrian Sovereign; this interview will take place in Salzburg.

Prince Bismark left his estate at Friederichsruhe near Hamburg on the 6th of July, and went to Varzin on the 7th of this month, but the German Chancellor had in the meanwhile got time enough to confer with Lord Odo Russell, the British Ambassador at Berlin. The topics of this conversation have not been made known, but as I wrote the other day, it probably will be the further politics in the Eastern question, the more so as it is of importance for Germany that the other European Powers are holding aloof from the struggle between Russia and Turkey.

Under date of the 7th July an Imperial decree has been promulgated concerning the prohibition of export of horses. This decree has been anticipated already some time ago, but because it should be extended over all Germany and not over Prussia alone, the Governments of the different estates of our country had to be advertised, and the plenipotentiaries of these Governments, the so-named Bundesrath, had to take it in consideration. In the first place this prohibitive decree is directed against Russia and its want of horses in the present war.

Below I give some interesting statistics concerning the import of German coal to Hamburg. During the year 1876 2,884,800 cwt. of Westfalian fuel have been sent to our town for consumption and transit, but for the first six months of the current year this movement reached 1,971,400 cwt. If you bear in mind that the last six months of the year, according to previous experience, will bring rather more considerable amounts than during the first half-year, an increase of about 33 per cent. may be relied upon against the last year. As a circumstance of importance may also be mentioned that besides our transatlantic steamer companies several other steamship establishments in the European traffic, which are hailing from Hamburg, have decided to use German fuel only.

Of the stranded steamship Denderah, the report has come in that the said vessel ran upon a sunken reef, situated in the Sarmiento Channel, and hitherto unknown; hopes are entertained to save the vessel, and an agent of the underwriters of Hamburg has left for the spot to arrange the salvage.

Last Tuesday at Heidelberg the celebrated jurist and historiographer H. M. Zoepfl has died, seventy years old; the well known author Mr. Hacklaender has left for ever on last Friday. General Grant, the former President of the United States, has arrived at Cologne, accompanied by his family.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our markets are suffering by the pressure of politics, speculation being checked by it, and transactions are only of a consumptive character. Money remained very abundant during the past week.

COFFEE.—First-hand owners remain very firm, and deny any sales than at their full quotations, the more as during the next weeks the usual extensive demand has to set in. Buyers are not yet inclined to follow the high values, and business has therefore been of little importance. Quotation for Java quality is m.1.05 to 1.50. The total import of Coffee to Hamburg reached during the first six months of 1876, 8,117 barrels and 735,289 bags, equal to 91,001,000 lbs.; 1877, 10,924 bags and 713,154 bags, equal to 90,004,000 lbs. Stock, June 1876, 36,000,000 lbs.; stock, June 1877, 40,000,000 lbs.

SUGAR.—Important transactions of first-hand parcels are not to be reported. Quotations are:—Manila brown, clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.24 to 25; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 31; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia, white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; do. brown, m.24½ to 31; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.32 to 35½; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.27 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.23 to 32 per 50 kilo.

RICE.—Of raw quality the following cargoes arrived:—15,000 bags per Europa, and 9,880 bags per Undine, from Rangoon, 10,488 per Josephine, from Japan; these three cargoes are bought by a mill to be cleaned.

TEA is unchanged and quiet; from first hand parcels 1,341/8 boxes Congou, and 100/8 boxes Haysan have changed owners.

COTTON.—The tendency during the past week has been a flat one, and all transactions were of American provenience of no importance.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality, m.5.60 to 6.20. Mace, prime quality, m.4.70 to 4.90 per kilo. Ginger quiet, Bengal m.27 to 27½; Cochin, m.63 to 85. Cloves neglected, Zanzibar quality m.135 to 136. Pepper in good demand, and higher in value, Singapore m.38 to 38¼; Penang m.35 to 35½; White m.66 to 76.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.35 to 20.29 per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

No occurrence of any importance is to report from the past week, and the feature was the monthly settlement. A considerable part of the money resulting from the dividend and other payments has found its way to our share market for investment, and rather a small part has been used for speculative purposes; therefore the transactions in speculative papers have been of limited extent, and values are nearly the same than this day se'nnight.

The great activity which was visible in the Russian ports of the Baltic after their re-opening has entirely subsided, freights as well there as in the Eastern ports of Prussia are as low as ever, and this fact at least does not indicate any signs of fears of a participation in the present war by England. At Hamburg, the arrivals and departures during the past week were satisfactory, and a good many vessels from transatlantic ports made their appearance. Amongst them we can name the Deutschland Kuehn, from Rangoon; Thorwaldsen, Hansen, from Akyab; Atlantic, Stege, from Batavia; T. B. Ramien, Ramien, from Bassein; and Undine, List, from Rangoon; of departures for the Far East none are to be reported. At Bremen did arrive: Canopus, Meyer, and Britannia, Linz, both from Rangoon; and Paul Rickmers, Stolt, from Bassein. In vessels on the berth no alteration has taken place. As a remarkable feature of the present summer must be remembered the decided taking off in the coal trade; the coal harbour very often is totally empty, and where generally ten to twelve steam colliers were visible, at present often only one or two are slowly discharging their cargoes.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JULY 11.

One of the most beautiful Exhibitions I ever saw in our country was opened here yesterday. It bears an international character, and indeed many contributions have been sent in from Germany, Austria, Switzerland, &c. The collection is not a very large one, but all that is exposed agrees with the system "art applied to industry." Most excellent furniture is to be seen, likewise beautiful earthenware from Saxony; diamonds and pearls, safes and other iron works; pianos, carriages, and ice-sledges, &c. The President, who opened the Exhibition, hoped that it would be a stimulant to our industries to regain the reputation which we enjoyed three centuries ago in this branch. I hope that your countrymen, when passing this town, will not forget to visit our Crystal Palace. Another Exhibition was opened some days ago in Leenwarden. It is a provincial, historical one, and very rich. The objects that were sent in remember to the "good old time," when the treasures were got. It is a collection of curiosities, which will make the mouth of every Englishman water.

In politics dulness prevails. In the several Departments the functionaries are busy with making up the Budgets, besides several important measures are in spe. It is said that a volte face will follow, which is announced by the appointment of Mr. Levyssohn Norman as a member of the Council of India. So much seems certain, that the next sitting will be a noisy one; the question is the to be or not to be of the actual Cabinet. The Ministry would, however, be inclined to make concessions to the Liberal party. It is even asserted that in the Sugar conventions such alterations are made that our Whigs may be content; it is also further said that the Lower-Class School Bill is altered in a most Liberal way, so that it is the intention of the Premier to oblige the Chambers to continue to co-operate with the Cabinet. It looks as if our Ministers subscribe the words of Macmahon, "J'y suis et j'y reste."

H.M. the King will remain at Zurich until the beginning of the month of August; he will start then for the Pyrenees, where he will stay for about four weeks. Afterwards he returns to the Hague.

H.M. the Emperor and the Empress arrived at the Hague.

News is very scanty. On the Bourse the greatest dulness prevails; no transactions have taken place.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market was most calm, but prices were well maintained. The only lot that changed hands was 1,021 bs. Maccassar ex Gedeh.

RAW SUGAR.—A trifling business was done at July value. A lot of 488 mats at f.39½, No. 14¼, was sold.

TOBACCO.—Some lots Sumatra were sold by private tender. The trade looks dull, though the tendence is a very good one. Prices, however, went a trifling lower. The arrivals were satisfactory. The stock includes 29,055 bs. Java, 5,394 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila, and 3,000 bs. East India.

COTTON much duller. There was no demand for export, neither for speculation.

SPICES.—Of Nutmegs and Mace a lot of 203 casks and 559 chests, and 65 casks and 151 chests, were sold by private tender by the Netherlands India Trading Bank at most satisfactory prices. Some parcels were sold since with an advance. Cloves dull, without transactions.

RICE.—Cleaned Java met with a good demand, whilst more attention was given to the Japan sorts at the lower prices.

CAMPHOR met with a good demand at c.53; nothing can, however, be bought now at this price.

TORTOISE SHELLS.—About 190 kilo. changed hands at prices that did not transpire.

HIDES without transactions.

TIN.—The business was most trifling. Banca was sold at f.42¼. Billiton at f.41 to f.41¼. It was, however, very difficult of sale. The Trading Company will offer, on the 31st July in public sale 23,000 slabs Banca.

JAVA INDIGO looks much calmer. About 90 chests changed hands. The stock includes 2,950 chests, which will be very soon brought into the market.

Literature, Science, &c.

The Diseases of China. By JOHN DUDGEON, M.D. Glasgow: Dunn and Wright, Buchanan-street.—We cordially recommend this little work to the careful perusal of our readers in China. Dr. Dudgeon is, thoroughly qualified to speak on the subject treated; and the book is not only interesting, as showing the ideas of the Chinese, as to health, clothing, &c., and the nature of the diseases most prevalent in China, but it contains hints which will be invaluable to Europeans (especially new arrivals), as to the means of preserving health in that country. Dr. Dudgeon considers that over-eating and drinking are the chief causes of illness among foreigners, and endorses the witty remark of the Irishman, who said that people in China "eat and they drink, and drink and they die, and then they write home to their friends and say it is the climate." This work is not the first which has appeared on this subject. Dr. Wilson, in 1843, gave one of a similar character, relating to our navy, in the places where he was stationed, particularly Hong Kong and Chusan; Dr. Gordon did the same for the army of occupation at Tientsin; and Dr. Henderson more recently published the Shanghai Hygiene, while the various hospital and Customs reports have brought a great deal of medical knowledge to light. Dr. Dudgeon has brought these together, coupled with many valuable observations of his own; and as the work is written in a popular style we doubt not it will be in request in China.

The China Review for March and April contains, among other matter, an excellent article from the pen of the Rev. John Chalmers, upon Chinese Natural Theology. He gives various quotations from the classics illustrative of Chinese religious ideas, and states that, as a Missionary, he has ever rejoiced in whatever he found in the Chinese classics, which could, from a Chinese standpoint, be regarded as sound theology. "If," he says, "there were really nothing of this kind to be found among the Chinese, we might well despair of success in propagating among them the Christian faith." Mr. W. F. Mayers contributes a paper to the present number on the "King-Kiao," or Nestorian religion.

Le Japon de nos Jours. By GEORGE BOUSQUET. Paris: Hachette and Co.—The author of the above volume went out to Japan in 1872 as legal adviser of the Japanese Government, and seized the opportunity of obtaining much information, both concerning the Japanese and also with regard to foreigners residing in Japan. Many of the papers which go to make up the present volume will be recollected by our readers as having appeared in the Revue des deux Mondes. They are excellently written, and the tout ensemble as presented in the work just published form a valuable addition to the literature connected with the Far East.

The Revue de France for this month contains an elaborate article, from the pen of Mr. Justin Améro, on the Chinese in America. After reviewing the main facts connected with the subject the author says that the Chinese owe their success simply to their economical habits; and he adds, whatever the result of their being in that country, it is well to bear in mind that in coming to it they are only availing themselves of the rights which are accorded to them by treaty.

Our Israelitish Origin. By the late JOHN WILSON. London: Nisbet and Co., Berners-street.—A fifth edition of this work, in which the author sets forth his views as to the prophecies concerning the House of Israel, and holds that many Christian nations have not only come into the place of ancient Israel, but are the seed of Abraham according to the flesh, has just been issued, and will be read with special interest in connection with recent events.

The Bulletin de La Société de Geographie for May contains a valuable paper on the Upper Donnai (Cambodia), by Dr. Harmand, the well-known traveller.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In the first number of a periodical entitled "The Gospel in China" I find the following remarks:—

"As in contrast with Romish missions there is something positively startling in the immense territory which has been opened up by the agency of Protestant missions, and in which there is now, comparatively, both travelling and teaching freedom to all comers. Romish missions, however long they have existed in China, have neither had nor are they having any such influence. Their promoters dwell in darkness; their whole system is hedged round with secrecy; they utterly fail to place the truth in a position that will make it play with any living and life-giving power on the conditions of surrounding society; they create no healthy breath of mental freedom in their neighbourhood; and their chief influence, as in any wise anticipating the open preaching of the Gospel, has been to create a malignant atmosphere of suspicion and terror"—

Which in my opinion savour too much of intolerance to be passed over in silence. Although I have not studied the subject of Mission Labour in China, I think I may safely say that the writer of the remarks quoted does the Roman Catholic missionaries—not to mention the Sisters of Charity—a grave injustice, and I invite the attention of former China residents to the question, especially such as have spent some years in the northern part of the Empire.—I may add that I am no Papist, and that I have no interest in the matter beyond a desire to elicit the truth.—I am, &c.,

THE LEKIN TAXES.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—As the question of the Lekin taxes has been reopened at Peking, it is to be hoped that if these dues are to be recognised something in return will be obtained, and that we may at least have a guarantee that they shall not continue to be of an indefinite character. This has been our chief difficulty with regard to them. They are constantly being varied, and we are thus, notwithstanding that duties are fixed by the Treaty tariff, utterly unable to form any estimate of the amount of taxation to which foreign trade is subjected. As matters at present are it may at any given time be increased, and the traffic at any given place greatly interfered with, if not altogether stopped.—I am, &c.,

THE CASE OF DE BUSSCHE V. ALT.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice that in commenting upon the case of De Bussche v. Alt you warn your readers against one matter to which it calls attention, namely, the necessity of care in relying upon customs which may not be recognised as mercantile customs by the Courts. Will you permit me to direct attention to another very important point in the case, namely, the change in procedure as introduced by the recent Judicature Act, of which the case gives evidence? But for the fusion of law and equity thus effected the defendants having dealt with Gilman and Co. as their principals could not have been sued by De Bussche, and it would consequently have probably been impossible to bring the action. The equitable principles now introduced were, however, sufficient to overcome the estoppel which would otherwise have existed, and Gilmans were thus treated only as a link between the plaintiff and the defendant. The importance of the bearing which this new mode of procedure must have upon many similar cases is apparent.—I am, &c.,

Monetary and Commercial.

The demoralisation of the tone of the Tea market which we noticed last week appears the more severe upon further information. Sales have been made without reserve, regardless of price, and in some instances the auction rates have been as much as 3d. per pound below the prices obtained for the same classes of tea by private contract. It is said that this state of affairs has been induced by some responsible firms having felt themselves compelled to set their faces against the system of sales without reserve which has so long been going on, by "bettering the instruction" and playing the same game upon a larger scale. That there has been sufficient cause to induce them to adopt this course will not be denied; but still a reprisal of this kind is to be regretted in the general interests of trade. The Mincing-lane Circulars justly deprecate the present state of affairs, one of the brokers in speaking of the losses of 3d. to 4d. a pound sarcastically observing that "probably the merchants were well satisfied, as their only object appears to be to ruin one another." During the week the public sales have been on a smaller scale. The lowest price for very good Common Congou was 11d., and the highest price for best quality of finest 2s. 5d. If the Hankow Teas are bad in quality, the Foochow appear worse. The highest quotation for Kaisow has been 1s. 10d., and, as illustrative of the completely demoralised tone of the market, it is noticeable that the counterpart of the chop was pressed off the next day at public sale at 1s. 7½d. Moning Congous have been firmer, in consequence of the very common character of the bulk of the Foochow Teas now arriving. The outturn of the latter is actually worse than anticipated, and there is little doubt that good China Teas will be in scarce supply and dearer, and this will probably react upon Indian Teas.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,555,002 lb., which was 433,905 more than was cleared during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,257,427 lb. went for home consumption, 651,050 lb. for exportation, 4,100 lbs. for ships' stores, and 642,425 went coastwise to various outports, 151,253 having been for immediate exportation. The tea duty paid in London last week amounted to £56,435 13s. 6d., which was £314 9s. less than was received from the same source of revenue during the corresponding week of last year.

The Silk Market during the past week has shown some slight improvement, and the tone has been firmer; but the demand having been about 6d. under sellers' prices, business has been restricted. The deliveries still continue upon a poor scale. The latest telegrams from Shanghai report only 750 bales as settled against 15,000 on the 15th July last year. It must therefore be noted that we can have nothing to speak of in the way of arrivals until the end of September, even if buyers in Shanghai begin to settle freely now. The present unsatisfactory state of the market evidently results from a reaction on the speculation of last autumn, the results of which seem to have greatly damped the spirits of the trade.

The P. and O. steamer Indus takes out a large amount of specie to China, chiefly shipped by the Hong Kong Bank. It is probable that further heavy shipments to both India and China will follow, and the value of Bar Silver and Dollars will further increase.

Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons, J. S. Morgan and Co., Seligman Brothers, and Morton, Rose, and Co., invite subscriptions for $700,000,000 United States Government Four per Cent. Funded Loan. The price of issue is £102 15s. for every 500-dollar bond, and the payments extend until December 17 next. The bonds are issued under an Act of Congress authorising the refunding of the National Debt, and are redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after July 1, 1907, in coin. Full particulars of the Loan will be found in our advertisement columns.

In the Produce Markets business has again been extremely inanimate. Coffee has been firm and steady, the supply being restricted. Sugar continues extremely dull. Rice is in active demand, and floating cargoes have been extensively sold at advanced prices. Black Pepper is also active and higher, White being quiet but firm. Cocoa Nut Oil, Gambier, Gum Benjamin, and Isinglass likewise show an improvement. Spices, Sago, and Tapioca have been steady. Tin is dull at a further decline, Straits being quoted £67 10s., and Banca, £72 10s. per ton.

Messrs. Bosman and Kup, managing directors of the Eastern Agency (Limited), have issued a report to the shareholders for the general meeting, to be held at the Company's offices on the 16th inst. With a view to further extension of the business, to which the directors have good reason to look forward with confidence, a resolution has been passed at a recent extraordinary general meeting to increase the capital to £100,000, and the directors propose to proceed to allotment of new shares as inducement and opportunity offer. The gross earnings booked for the year amount to £8,928 11s. 1d.; after deducting £579 8s. 8d. for charges, and £1,181 6s. for 5 per cent. interest due in the first instance on capital account, there remains for equal division between shareholders and directors £7,167 16s. 5d. To the moiety pertaining to the former, viz. :—£3,583 18s. 3d. is to be added £70 7s. 4d. carried forward from last account, making a total of £3,654 5s. 7d., and it is proposed to appropriate the same as follows :—£2,595 as a bonus of 10 per cent. on 141 shares with £25,950 paid up, claiming dividend (making a total of 15 per cent. per annum); £1,000 to be placed to a reserve fund; £21 auditor's fee; £38 5s. 7d. to be carried forward to new account; total, £3,654 5s. 7d.

The Eastern Telegraph Company invite subscriptions for £200,000 in Five per Cent. Debentures, repayable in ten years. The allotment will be at par.

The subjoined changes in mercantile firms have been notified : — Messrs. Hume, Webster, and Co., have taken into partnership Mr. Charles Noel Hoare, and in future the style of the firm will be Hume, Webster, Hoare, and Co. Messrs. Barber Brothers and Co., of Cowper's-court, have dissolved by mutual consent, and the business will continue to be carried on by Mr. George Gompertz Barber, in conjunction with Mr. William Farquhar Huggins, the surviving partner in the firm of Huggins and Co., of Threadneedle-street, stock-brokers, whose business will be amalgamated under the firm of Barber Brothers and Huggins. Mr. F. B. Samuel and Mr. E. A. Stansbury have commenced business as Indigo and Colonial brokers, at 9, Mincing-lane. Messrs. G. F. Davis and Sons, of 34, Leadenhall-street, have retired from business, which will in future be carried on by Mr. W. T. Irving under the style of W. T. Irving and Co. Mr. Robert Hitchcock, surviving partner of Hocking, Hitchcock, and Ridley, Warwick-buildings, 33, Paternoster-row, has taken into partnership Mr. George Biggs and Mr. Thomas Willett, and the business will be carried on under the style of "Hitchcock, Biggs, and Willett." Messrs. Brandon and Co., of 9, Mincing-lane, have admitted as partner Mr. D. G. Edwardes, the style of the firm remaining unaltered. Messrs. S. K. Reynolds and J. Sellers have commenced business as East India and Colonial brokers, under the style of Reynolds and Sellers, at 2, Fen-court. Mr. Alfred Chenery has taken Mr. S. J. Edgar into partnership, and the style of the firm in future will be A. Chenery and Edgar, at 92, Gracechurch-street.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 11th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £189,000; Bombay, £100,000; and Madras, £1,000. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras for bills at 1s. 8¾d. will receive about 10 per cent.; all above in full. On Bombay, at that price for bills, about 50 per cent. The allotment includes 2½ lacs not placed on the 4th inst. A rather increased demand for remittances is shown in these figures.

The P. and O. Company's steamer Indus was despatched from Southampton Thursday with the heavy portion of next outward mail. She has on board the sum of £625,130 in specie, the whole of which is silver, including : for Shanghai, £394,010; Penang, £82,370; and Hong Kong, £55,700.

The arrivals of Bar Silver have been limited, but a very extensive business has been done for delivery at 53⅞d. and 54d. per oz. standard, the last named quotation being the price of this day. For Mexican Dollars the market has been quiet and inactive, but there is no alteration from the recent quotation of 54½d. per oz.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns have been issued for the month of June, and show that the total value of British and Irish produce exported was £15,305,659, against £15,848,260 in the same month of last year, showing a decrease of 3⅜ per cent., while the total compared with 1875 shows a decrease of 16½ per cent. The total for the six months ending June was £95,234,130, against £99,210,059 for the corresponding six months of last year, showing a decrease of 4 per cent.; compared with 1875 the decrease for that period was 13 per cent. As regards the imports, the total for the month was valued at £29,810,370, against £28,326,880 in June last year, showing an increase of 5 per cent.; while compared with 1875 there is a decrease of 3¾ per cent. The total for the six months ending June was £195,448,403, against £185,110,196 last year, showing an increase of about 6 per cent., while compared with 1875 the increase amounted to 6¼ per cent.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The market has somewhat recovered from the extraordinary proceedings on the part of importers on the first arrivals of the new season's tea, and now that the trade find a little breathing time to wade through the enormous number of samples, and discover so little fine and finest quality, these grades command special attention, and rule at comparatively high prices; but for grades below these standards the outturn is most disastrous, this is heightened by the rivalry of a few importers who sacrifice their property at public auction without reserve.

The quality of the crop both from Hankow and Foochow is certainly disappointing, especially as all accounts from China advised lower prices than season 1876-7, whereas, "quality considered," the range is most certainly over that of previous seasons. Already several parcels ex Glenearn, from Foochow, arrived on the 11th, have passed the hammer, barely giving time for buyers to make up their minds.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market remains very quiet, business in old season's Teas being very small. In new Teas all the finer grades continue to meet with attention, being comparatively scarce; for common to medium kinds it has been difficult to effect sales privately, as numerous public sales of these grades have taken place, and all without reserve. Prices show no further decline since the sales of this day week, except in grades under 1s. 2d. per lb., which are about 1d. per lb. lower. The Glenearn, with the first cargo of Foochow Teas, arrived on the 11th inst., and a large portion of the samples were shown, but the quality generally was disappointing, and the amount of business done was small. Prices ranged from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. for fair to good Saryunes, and a few sales good to fine Kaisow and Ching Wo kinds were made from 1s. 5d. to 2s. per lb. Pak Lin kinds sold from 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per lb. for fair to good kinds.

Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: In old season's nothing of interest has passed. The new Teas have sold as above. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair new season's have sold from 11¾d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., medium to good from 1s. 2¼d. to 1s. 5d., fine 1s. 6d. to 1s. 10d., finest 1s. 11d. to 2s. 8d. per lb.; the only change in prices being in the lower grades, which have declined about 1d. per lb. New-make kinds show no material alteration; the demand is, however, limited. There have been no further arrivals of new season's Oolongs. In Souchongs but little has been done. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: A moderate business has been done at about previous prices. Orange Pekoes show no change. Foo Chow kinds: The first arrival of new season's, per Glenearn, has met with good competition, and full prices have been obtained. Green Teas.—Business has been small, without material alteration in prices. The public sales have comprised only 17,401 packages, nearly the whole of which have been new season's Congous sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

SILK.

The market shows a little better tone as compared with last week, but there has not been much activity, owing to an unwillingness of holders to meet buyers at present rates. Prices asked are about 6d. higher than last mail's rates. Red Peacocks are quoted at 17s. 6d.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour and Co.'s Lyons Circular, dated 6th inst., says:—Under the influence of an anticipated good result of the French and Italian crops, coupled with political uneasiness, our market during the early part of June remained lifeless, and the few sales effected in raw silk showed a decline of f.4 to f.5. The stoppage of several houses too much engaged in speculation, contributed also to depress the market. Taking advantage of this unsatisfactory state of things, buyers of silk goods resumed their purchases. Important sales of ready made goods took place, but at prices leaving heavy losses even on present low rates of raw materials. Orders in colours were also placed, but manufacturers only too anxious to occupy their looms, accepted offers leaving no margin, and even losses in some instances. Towards the middle of the month sultry weather suddenly caused considerable damage to the European crop, and a rise of 10 to 15 per cent. on cocoons was thereby induced. In France, where a full crop had been previously expected, the result is now considered about one-third under that of 1875. In Italy the outturn is still a matter of controversy, but the most liberal estimates do not make it over one-half of a good average crop. This certainty of a short supply in Europe, and of a cost for new Silk much over market values, would in ordinary times have caused great activity and an important rise. Unfortunately, manufacturers, although having lightened their stocks both in Silk and manufactured goods, felt too much discouraged by heavy losses sustained; their purchases were, therefore, limited to some throwns for immediate wants, and only a trifling improvement was obtained upon lowest quotations. Stocks are, indeed, heavy, and holders generally too anxious to sell. On China raws alone, for which stocks are comparatively limited, a freer business has been done for account of throwsters with an advance of a couple of francs.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son's New York Circular of the 23rd ult. says:—During the month last past the raw silk market experienced a material improvement, both as to business done and prices. The better feeling with which the last month closed developed into active business, and an advance in prices of $1.00 to $1.25 per pound on Chinas and Cantons. Considerable more business was done at the advance than at the previous low rates. For the past fortnight there has been less doing, but prices have been well maintained, as stocks and arrivals are light, and present prices leave no margin for the importer. As to crops for the new season, the European crop promises from one half to two thirds of an ordinary crop; the China crop is stated at 50,000 bales, equal to two thirds of last year's crop; the Canton and Japan crops will also be less than last year. Of course, the war in Europe affects the market adversely, more so than would seem to be warranted when we look back at the effect of the Franco-German war. In October, 1870, when France was overrun by a foreign army, the silk crop was good and the stock in the London Docks was 30,000 bales; the prices here for re-reeled Tsatlees were 8.62 to 8.37, gold; and the prices of re-reeled Cantons were 6.50 to 5.50, gold. Now, with the seat of war far away from the centre of the silk industry, with a stock in the London Docks of 35,000 bales, with short crops in prospect, the prices of re-reeled Tsatlees are 6.25 to 5.50, gold, and the prices of re-reeled Cantons are 5.25 to 5.00, gold.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

On the 12th inst., with rather more general inquiry, the tone of the market became steadier; the transactions, however, were but slightly increased. On the 14th there was a confirmation of the hardening tendency, the steady maintenance of prices in Liverpool making producers confident in holding for their quotations, which prevents a good deal of business, as there are still offers in the market to a considerable extent which, moderate concessions would allow of buyers carrying through.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

CHINESE ROGUERY IN THE SUGAR TRADE.—Attention has already been called to the fact that sugar from China delivered in Greenock is mixed with foreign substances, especially such as add decidedly to the weight of the packages. In further proof of this we may state that the barque Gesine Brons, of Emden, discharging a cargo from Amoy, has had the labour of bringing to this country more cargo than freight will be paid on. A quantity of broken tiles, stones, &c., were discovered along with the sugar in the bags landed on the quay. One of the stones weighed about seven pounds. As the discovery of these "make-weights" is only accidental, and while the sampler is doing his work, it may be supposed that very much will come to be separated at the refinery. The cargo of the Gesine Brons is consigned to Messrs. J. Walker and Co.

THE P. and O. Company's steamship Bokhara, Captain H. Wyatt, from Calcutta, via the Suez Canal, arrived at Southampton on the 9th inst., bringing the heavy India, China, and Australian mails, 146 passengers, 15,712 packages of cargo, and the following large consignments of specie:—£876,713 from Australia, $317,425 from China, three boxes of gold bars (value not given) from Bombay, £5,137 from Alexandria, £132 from Malta, and £3,850 from Gibraltar, the value of the whole amounting to nearly a million sterling.

ON the 26th ultimo an iron sailing ship was launched from the yard of Messrs. Richardson, Duck, and Co., South Stockton, of the following dimensions, viz.:—Length over all, 243 feet; length between perpendiculars, 225 feet; breadth extreme, 37 feet 10 inches; depth in hold, 22 feet 9 inches; tonnage O.M. 1,537 tons; tonnage gross N.M. 1,427 tons; built to the order of Messrs. Rankin, Gilmour, and Co., of Liverpool, and is intended for the India and China trade, and named the St. Mildred.

IT is officially announced at Lloyd's that the Aurora, of Amsterdam, sailed from Batavia for Holland on the 26th October last, and was spoken on the 12th November, but has not since been heard of.

A MEETING has been held by the Partick authorities, and steps taken with the view of relieving distress among the families of the locked out non-society men from Clyde yards.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The Courier's Correspondent, writing under date of May 25th, says:—

It is reported that the man Yun, who last winter poisoned the food of the refugees with alum, in order to profit by the diminished consumption, and who has been in prison ever since, has now been sent to Pao-ting Fu to be punished. This, of course the last we shall hear of it, and the moral effect of his disgrace will be quite dissipated by time and distance. It is conjectured that he is to have a short term of banishment. The unusual spring rains seem at last to be over, and they have accomplished very great good indeed. In the interior of Shantung the roads have been very nearly as impassable as at the rainy season. Wherever the ground has been planted at all the crops appear excellent.

H.B.M.S. Lapwing has gone outside the bar for the usual target practice.

Mr. Iheda, Japanese Consul, has been obliged to return to Japan in consequence of ill-health. New and commodious consular buildings have just been erected, and everything indicates that that Government has come to China to stay. An extension of the bund to the southern limits of the British settlement is in progress, and the foreshore of the old bund has been planted this year with willow-trees, which are charged with the task of acting as a prophylactic against every variety of miasma.

In the city numerous cases of incendiary fires have occurred, but they have not been traced to any general cause. The hot spring weather has begun, nearly a month beyond the usual time.

CHEFOO.

Much regret has been caused by the death of Dr. Carmichael, one of the oldest residents. A correspondent writes on this subject as follows:—This morning (May 25) the citizens of Chefoo were bowed in grief as they assembled to take the last farewell of the remains of the late Dr. J. R. Carmichael. It seems almost impossible that the Doctor, in the prime of life, and until only a few days since one of the most active and useful in our midst, shall be with us no longer. For some time, in addition to his foreign practice, the Doctor has spent hours of each day in the Fever Hospital, doing his utmost to alleviate suffering and save the lives of the friendless and helpless Chinese who have fled here from the famine districts. Nothing seemed to give him more joy than the fact that he had the daily evidence of being successful both in relieving pain and in saving life. He could not have been more faithful in trying to save the most distinguished of men than he was in aiding these poor and unknown people. There was not a particle of self-interest underlying this hospital work. He did it from the love he had to do good. He knew the danger to which he was exposed, and often spoke of it; but he did it cheerfully, and continued until he fell a martyr in his zeal to save others. Ten days ago he was stricken down with fever; yesterday, his spirit departed. But he has not ceased to live; he has left a bright example of an active and useful life. He had endeared himself to many hearts which are now sad at the thought of having lost a true friend. In the most quiet manner possible he was unwearied in his efforts to aid, so far as possible, all that needed help.

NEWCHWANG.

The following letter, addressed to the Chamber of Commerce, has been published :—

The following items of information may be of interest :—The Taoutai is endeavouring to persuade the southern and local Chinese trading at this port to agree to the imposition of a tax of 1 per cent. on all goods imported or exported by them, in lieu of the existing impost of 3½ per cent. on imports only. He threatens coercion if persuasion fails. His reason is, he has orders from Moukden to provide funds for the maintenance in this province of a permanent force for the repression of brigandage, to consist of 3,000 infantry and 2,000 cavalry; the annual expense of which is estimated at Tls. 480,000. This may for a very short time throw some more trade into foreign hands. The Customs at this port have notified merchants that they are unable to make arrangements to enable vessels to complete their loading outside the bar. In future, therefore, vessels drawing more than 17 feet would do wisely to avoid this port, or arrange when chartering to complete loading, if necessary, at Chefoo.

HANKOW.

Hankow letters of May 30 announce the Tea market quiet; total settlements to date 20,000,000 lbs.; stock 10,000,000 lbs. and about 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 lbs. expected; so that in all probability the first crop will be about 38,000,000 or 40,000,000 lbs.

The Daily News correspondent says :—

A large business continues to be done daily in tea; the fifty Chaaszes who have arrived seem to be in a feverish state of excitement to buy up all the first-crop teas as quickly as possible, on the ground that there is no finest tea on offer, and the total supplies of that description will be very small; the teas are 20 to 25 per cent. cheaper than last year; they may improve on the passage; the Foochow market may not open soon, &c., &c. The Chinese teamen are said to have made a very good profit—from Tls. 3 to Tls. 10 per picul, so far, for what they have sold. As a matter of fact, the Loudoun Castle and Gleneagles, with 5½ million pounds of this season's tea, will probably arrive in London about the 1st July; and no doubt a very fair quantity out of their cargoes will be offered at public auction "without reserve," and knock down the market 2d. or 3d. before any important public sales can be made. The dearly-bought experience of last year seems to be entirely forgotten, and people are again hurrying to buy in a few weeks a whole crop which takes months to sell. Yet the first crop is said to be abundant, and if prices continue to be remunerative there will be no short supply of second-crop.

WUHU.

The Daily News correspondent writes :—

In order, presumably, to give the new port a semblance of doing business, ocean-going steamers from Hankow have to stop at Wuhu, to show their Customs' clearance; and if they pass during the night, as they must go on the opposite side of the river, this may probably involve a delay of two or three hours—not much, perhaps, out of a voyage to England, but still annoying to ships eager to be off.

The Wuhu Customs, however, is bound to red-tape practices. Witness the following illustration! One of the river steamers lately took up a cask of soda water and a box of medicine for the community. The tide-waiter was asked to take them on shore, but as they were upon the ship's manifest his instructions would not allow him to do this, it being necessary in such cases for an officer of the ship to go on shore, enter the vessel and clear her; and as in this case the steamer happened to be late, with a ship in tow, this could not be done. So the cargo had to be taken on, and the Commissioner and the community had to wait till it could be returned from Kiukiang! If the things had been sent up under care of the captain, and not put upon the manifest, the careful tide-waiter could have landed them in his boat.

CHINKIANG.

Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 30th May :—During the period which has elapsed since the date of our last report no change worthy of note has taken place in the position of this market for Manchester goods, but a fair business has been conducted from day to day in those classes of Grey Cloth to which the attention of our dealers has been for some time past almost entirely confined, i.e., good medium 8¼-lb. Grey Shirtings and fine 7-lb. Mexican T-Cloths, taking these at prices which are about the equivalent of rates ruling at Shanghai.—Although current business is thus fairly satisfactory, future prospects are quite the reverse, for the surrounding country is literally black in places with young locusts which have already done considerable damage to the spring crops, although they are so nearly ripe; and unless these pests migrate when they attain their full growth, it seems probable that there will be a total failure of the autumn crops in this district. Malwa Opium.—The demand during the past week has been rather slack even for best drug. Quotations, however, remain unaltered, and we still give Tls. 436 to 438 as the ruling rate for finest quality new.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 3rd June; the P. and O. mail from London, April 13, was received on the 26th May.

The most important news which has come forward in the Shanghai papers is a statement in the Shunpao (a native journal) to the effect that Mr. Morrison's recent visit to Soochow was made with a view to see the officials about surveying a line of railway, and that the course is likely to be past Kading and Taitsan. It further understands that the material of the present Woosung Railway is likely to be transported to Formosa, and that a more substantial road will be laid in its place. Expatiating upon the convenience and expedition of railway travel, it goes on to remark that all these advantages will be available between Shanghai and Soochow in "a year or more," when the line to Soochow is completed.

The annual meeting of the Shanghai Gas Company has been held. During the year an increased consumption of gas was reported, and the net profits had amounted to Tls. 26,917, of which Tls. 18,000 had been devoted to dividends. It was expected to clear off the gas-holders' loan during the current year. By irregularities at the works, during the absence of Mr. Yeo, the Company had sustained a loss of Tls. 1,530 in the coal account and Tls. 152 in the coke account, through deficiencies in the quantities delivered, and to meet these losses the next half-yearly dividend is proposed to be 5 instead of 6 per cent. Messrs. J. G. Purdon, F. B. Forbes, and F. G. White were elected directors for the ensuing year. Some discussion took place as to the propriety or otherwise of the directors having dismissed a man from their service on a charge of defalcation, and having refrained from prosecuting him. It was argued that either they had gone too far or not far enough, and they were urged to take some further action one way or the other in the matter.

From the North China Herald we take the following :—

A word-tariff has been introduced on the Great Northern telegraph line, between Shanghai and Hong Kong and Nagasaki The rate from here to either port will be 40 cents a word, and 30 cents between Shanghai and Amoy. This change in the scale of charges suggests a comparison of the relative advantages of the old and new rates, particularly in cases of messages of five or six words. A share-broker who wants to telegraph in five words to buy Yangtszes can do so for $2 instead of $3. which he had to pay formerly. But a merchant who wants to send a message of ten or twenty words will be charged 33 to 60 per cent. more.

This is a continuation of the false policy which dictated the great rise in rates between this and Europe, which both companies inaugurated some time ago, and does not seem justified in the case of the Great Northern, to judge from the last report of the year's operations. The change to a word-rate is a concession which would have proved remunerative to the company as well as advantageous to the public, if the old rates had been adhered to. The increase in the number of short messages would have more than compensated for the first loss on their coast. Comparing, again, the rates charged with those prevailing at home the rate, say from London to Rome, which is about the same distance as from Shanghai to Hong Kong, is 7s. 6d. for twenty words, or rather less than $2 against $8; or, if it be objected that this is chiefly by land line, and comparison with a cable route be preferred—3s. a word is, we believe, the present charge from London to New York; that is, roughly, 75 cents for 3,000 miles against 40 cents for 800. The difference seems greater than the greater expenses incidental to the East would necessitate.

The French Municipal Council have resolved on several Public Works—the construction of two new wings to the Municipal Hotel, repairs to the bunding of the creeks in the Settlement, and notably the reconstruction of the River Bund in granite, concrete, and brick, from the Yang-king-pang to the Rue du Consulat. A proposal by Mr. Henderson to sell the property on which the East Police-station is built is accepted. A complaint has been made by the head of one of the coolie guilds on the French Concession, that it is experiencing opposition from a guild on the northern side. The Council do not believe it is well founded, and believe it arises rather from dissensions among the guilds on the French Settlement. If so, it lies with the complainants to assert their rights before the proper tribunal. The tax on brothels is reduced, as it has been on this side, to $1.

It is satisfactory to learn from the Municipal Minutes that there is at last a prospect of completing the widening of Nanking-road in the section between the Kiangse and Honan-roads, by acquiring the ground in front of the old North China Herald office. Tls. 10,000 of the 1872 loan are to be paid off on the 1st November next; the debentures to be repaid will be drawn by ballot.—A report has been drawn up by the Acting Surveyor and Mr. Lester, regarding the means of egress from theatres.—The outline of a project for making a floating-bath in the Soochow Creek, between the Boat-house and the Bridge, has been laid before the Council, but with insufficient details.—Consideration of the Water Works scheme is also deferred, for further plans.—The most important subject, however, which the Board had under consideration, was the reply of the Chamber of Commerce to their letter regarding the deterioration of the Hwangpoo. We are glad to find that the Chamber purpose bringing the subject again before the Foreign Ministers at Peking, and also calling to it the attention of the British Government, with a view to its being pressed upon the notice of the Chinese Ambassador in London.

Two or three hundred bales of new silk have come down, and about 100 bales are likely to go forward by the mail, to be paid for according to report, at whatever may be the opening rate. There was a rumour that the market had been opened by the purchase of No. 1 Mountain chop at Tls. 455, which is equal to 20s. 10d., but it was not generally believed. On the 2nd June last year the same chop sold at 14s. 11d. The second crop is said to be getting on favourably. High prices are demanded in the country. The crop is now estimated at 60,000 bales.

The effect of the depreciation of silver is not confined to India Council drafts, and rates of exchange between China and London. In the Peking Gazette of the 14th May the Governor of Kirin reports that "much suffering has lately been entailed upon the soldiery in that province by the depreciation in the value of the silver, and the rise in the cost of the necessaries of life." He begs accordingly that a squeeze of Tls. 32 per thousand, which has been hitherto customary, may be stopped.

It is officially notified that the arrangement concluded in 1862, with reference to the payment of tonnage dues alternately at each of the three river ports (Hankow, Kiukiang and Chinkiang), by British steamers trading regularly upon the Yangtsze—is to be extended in its application to the ports of Wuhu and Ichang.

The fifth anniversary of the Shanghai Temperance Society was celebrated on the 24th ult., by a tea meeting, followed by one of the usual fortnightly literary and musical entertainments. The large hall was completely filled on the occasion, and by the generous liberality of several ladies of the community, both connected and unconnected with the Society, an abundant and varied supply of good things was served. Mrs. Glover and Mrs. Forbes presided at the head and foot of their table, and it is needless to say that this graceful recognition of the merits of a really valuable institution was much appreciated. After tea the programme, which included business as well as pleasure, was proceeded with. The Rev. W. Muirhead was elected Vice-President of the Society, in the room of the Rev. James Thomas, who has gone home.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald gives the following news :—

Mr. Sinclair, H.B.M.'s Consul, who has been in Europe on leave of absence since April, 1875, returned to this port on the 26th May, per steamship Douglas.

We hear that Doctors Osgood and Whitney, of the Baptist Medical Mission, were assaulted and robbed by natives on their way to Shan Wu quite recently. Dr. Osgood has since returned and given information to the authorities, but Dr. Whitney will remain at Shan Wu.

The Mamoi Arsenal officials have just put together a powerful steam dredge, which arrived in pieces from France a short time ago. This is, we believe, intended for service in the vicinity of the Arsenal, and if it meets the expectations of the authorities, a marked improvement in the depth of the channel abreast of the Arsenal should be visible ere long.

As tea shipping is once more in full swing the local marine insurance companies would do well, we think, to follow the example of the home offices, and by reducing the rate on tea shipped by certain well-known steamer lines attract business. A correspondent points out that whereas in former years shippers were obliged to make early application in order to avoid having their teas "shut out," they are now compelled to tout for business.

A fire took place on the evening of the 25th May, in the main street of Nantai, between the store of Messrs. Hoklee and Co. and Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s hong. The first alarm was given shortly before 11 P.M., and but little time was lost in bringing all the available foreign engines to the spot. Owing to the proximity of the river there was abundance of water with which to work the engines, and as there was but little wind at the time, the flames were completely mastered about midnight. Between thirty and forty houses were burnt.

The premises formerly occupied by the Great Northern Telegraph Company were broken into on the evening of the 26th May, and clothing and other articles, the property of Chinese Telegraph students, stolen therefrom. The thieves are supposed to belong to the same gang that recently plundered Messrs. Dunnill and Brockett's store; and we understand that the native authorities are in possession of certain information that may lead to the recovery of at least a portion of that stolen property. We also learn that the residence of Captain Saunders at Pagoda Anchorage was entered by thieves a few nights ago.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 9th June; the P. and O. mail from London, April 27, arrived out on the 3rd June.

The Colony does not appear to be very well contented with the indications which it had had of the policy likely to be pursued by H.E. Mr. Pope Hennessy, the new Governor. On the 6th inst., he was formally sworn in as Governor and Commander-in-Chief before the Legislative Council, and though he made no declaration of policy then, it seems that his ideas as to the course to be adopted have become known through various channels; and have according to the Daily Press been causing much disquietude. That paper says that it appears only too evident that Mr. Hennessey is about to attempt to repeat the policy he sought to carry out in other colonies, namely, the conciliation of the natives. He has always espoused the cause of the natives against the foreigners, obviously from perfectly disinterested motives and acting on a belief that they were not fairly treated. And it must be confessed that in some instances the inferior and subject races have been rather hardly dealt with, either from the fears, the jealousy, or the contempt of the whites. But this championship of the natives may be carried too far. In different colonies different circumstances prevail. In Hong Kong there is no oppressed, down-trodden race to be protected. Not only are the Chinese thoroughly capable of taking care of themselves, but they have uniformly been treated with marked consideration by the Government. It is stated that the Governor wishes to abolish both flogging and the night pass system, and it is objected, not without reason, that doing so would be the withdrawal of the greatest safeguard the Colony enjoys against burglary and midnight violence, that it would impart a feeling of general insecurity in the minds of the residents, especially those whose experience dates far back, and would afford encouragement to the criminal classes of Canton to migrate to Hong Kong, and so involve the increase of the Police Force, already considerably larger than that of any other Colony of the same size.

A motion has been brought in the Admiralty Court for the sale of the ship Rosina. The captain stated that his wages as master of the Rosina for the voyage commenced on the 3rd December, 1874, when he left New York. In 1872 witness went from New York with a general cargo to New Orleans. The vessel was, in April, 1875, chartered to go to Newcastle, N.S.W., for coal to Singapore. Witness received the charter-money for that in Singapore the same month. At Singapore he lay a long time trying to get a charter for home, and failing that went to Sourabaya, Java, in ballast. From Sourabaya he chartered the vessel to Melbourne. He left Java in July, 1875, and on arrival in Melbourne received the charter, about £1,000, less part which had been drawn in Java. After paying all expenses a balance of £47 was due to the owner. From Melbourne he went in ballast to Puget's Sound. He was chartered in Melbourne to take a cargo of timber from Puget's Sound to Melbourne. For this he received not more than £600. He arrived in Melbourne on October 12, 1876. The whole of the £600 was spent on the ship. He had a very stormy voyage, and it was necessary to repair the ship. Having no money, and no letters of introduction, he went to a broker with whom he had previously dealt to get the money. The broker gave him an introduction to Mr. Prell, who promised to let him have the money, about £1,000, at 6 per cent., and there was no agreement about a bottomry. He was simply to draw a draft on the owners. No bond was signed at that time, and he told the broker he would not have a bottomry. This was on the 14th or 15th October. On the 27th October the vessel was put into dock. The agent of the Boston Board of Underwriters had her surveyed, and what he recommended was done. Witness did not see Mr. Prell after the first time. The bottomry bond was signed by witness four day before going to sea. He also signed a bill of exchange on the owner, at sight. Witness advised the owner about the 6 per cent., and expected the bill would have been accepted. After the vessel was repaired witness tried to charter her, but the broker told him that if he went to any other port than Hong Kong he would have to pay 10 per cent. more on the money. This was before the bottomry bond was presented or witness knew anything about it. From Melbourne he went to Newcastle, N.S.W., and brought a cargo of coal to Hong Kong, at 18s. 6d. per ton. The freight was arrested by the marshal. The Court ordered the sale of the vessel, reserving judgment on the question of the claim of the captain for his wages, on the ground that he had remitted to the owners more than sufficient to cover it.

The Hong Kong Christian Aisociation have held their annual meeting, when the Rev. E. Davis was elected President for the year.

A prisoner who was sentenced to be flogged at the last criminal sessions was not brought forward to receive his punishment on the day appointed, it being understood that the reason was, his Excellency the Governor having the whole subject of flogging under his consideration.

The system of competitive examinations for Government appointments has been introduced, the first examination of the kind being for a clerkship in the Registrar-General's-office. The plan appears to be generally approved of, and is considered likely to be beneficial to the colony.

St. Joseph's Catholic Chapel was opened on the 3rd June, without, however, any ceremony of consecration.

Sir David Wedderburn, and his brother Mr. W. Wedderburn, who have been making the grand tour, arrived at Hong Kong on the 3rd June, have been staying as guests at Government House.

Local improvements are being carried on with vigour. A new wall and steps at the commencement of Castle-road have at last been completed by the necessary addition of a suitable railing, and the cricket ground has also been re-railed. The Chinese staff at the Royal Naval Hospital have been exercised at fire extincteur drill, the results being very satisfactory.

CANTON.

The correspondent of the Daily Press, writing under date of June 6, says :—

A little incident showing the manner in which junks from Hong Kong are subjected to the operation of squeezing has just come to my knowledge. The Wing Shun Lee junk, from Hong Kong to Canton, stopped, as is usual, at the Cheung Chow lekin station in order to pay the dues. The junk was searched, and a few balls of opium were found. Upon this the officer of the station detained the boat and accused the master of smuggling the opium. Leung Afook—such is the name of the master—protested that the opium was the property of passengers and that he knew nothing about it. The Customs officer, however, persisted in his charge and demanded Tls. 240 from the unfortunate junk master. "Tread on a worm and he will turn," says the proverb, and the enormity of the squeeze in this case was more than could be endured. The master has accordingly petitioned the Viceroy of Canton on the subject, and an investigation has been ordered. We may therefore possibly have an opportunity of ascertaining what protection the Chinese can obtain from their own authorities against these squeezes by petty officials, but more probably the investigation will never be heard of again. The Viceroy, however, has given notice that although smuggled goods are to be confiscated, there is no rule for detaining the junks carrying them.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

CANTON, JUNE 7, 1877.

In my former communications to you, respecting the floods by which the districts of Tsing-uen and Fa-uen have been recently inundated, I neglected to mention a very singular circumstance. Many of the women, when they discovered that death by drowning was inevitable, deposited their infant sons in boxes with the hope that they might be borne over the surface of the waters to places of safety. To the person of each babe an address was attached, and a certain sum of money to be expended in procuring sustenance for it, was also lodged in the box. Several male children have been saved from the fury of the waters by the adoption of this extraordinary plan. Surely this fact proves two things. Firstly, it affords evidence that Chinese parents love their male offspring, and secondly, it proves, beyond all reasonable doubt, their earnest belief in the great Confucian doctrine of ancestral worship. Chinese parents and grandparents, &c., evidently regard it as an unspeakable privilege to be worshipped, when they have done with this life, by their male descendants.

One of the principal native bankers—a gentleman named Chan, and for many years the chief manager or director of the Ee-fat bank of this city—has, very recently, committed suicide by taking opium. It appears that he has, for some time past, been most unsuccessful in his various investments and speculations. This painful fact becoming generally known, a run upon the Ee-fat bank was the natural result. A Chinese lady named Pang-Taai-Koo, who is evidently a woman of great energy of mind and decisions of character, was a depositor in the bank in question of a very considerable sum of money ; and on finding that she could not recover it in consequence of the insolvent state of the bank, she abused Chan to such a degree in the presence of his clerks and others, that he hastily entered a private room, and then and there deliberately took his own life.

On the night of the 1st inst., the foreigners who reside at Shamien were suddenly aroused from their slumbers by the loud beating of tom-toms and gongs, and by vehement cries of Fire ! fire ! On rising from their beds they discovered that a fire was raging in Old China-street, and which, I regret to say, was not extinguished until twenty shops or houses had been destroyed. In one of these tenements– a store in which Chinese paper and stationery were sold–a youth of sixteen years of age was burned to death. Shortly after the conflagration had begun several thieves appeared on the scene, and feloniously appropriated to themselves articles of various kinds. Four of these villains were caught, and safely lodged in the prison of the Namkoi magistrate. Many fire brigades turned out on this occasion, and rendered very efficient services. The most distinguished of these brigades, however, was one composed of British and other foreign residents at Canton, under the able command of Mr. Herbert Dent, of Messrs. Birley and Co.'s firm.

A very extraordinary instance of parental authority on the part of a Chinese mother came under notice on the 1st inst. A widow, who resides near to the Fuuk-po Temple, which is situated in the Honam suburb of this city, deliberately put to death her profligate son. It appears that the youth in question, who was nineteen years of age, was not only a disobedient son, but also a confirmed gambler. His mother, therefore, to whom he was in consequence a source of very great sorrow, resolved to put him to death. This resolution on her part she submitted to the notice of her brother, who was, of course, the maternal uncle of the youth. Both agreeing that the lad was an irreclaimable vagabond, and as such a disgrace to the family, his death was there and then premeditated. Accordingly they invited the unsuspecting object of their unnatural hatred to a dinner, and plied him with wine to such an excess that he fell from his chair most helplessly drunk. When in this state of inebriation he was bound hand and foot and submerged in the waters of the Macao branch or passage of the Canton river. So soon as life was extinct his remains were placed in a coffin, and conveyed to the Fwung-Wong-kong Cemetery for interment. The mandarins would, I apprehend, if this extraordinary case were made known to them, make some inquiries respecting it. It is an undeniable fact that Chinese parents, as was the case with Jewish parents of old, have an almost absolute power and authority over their children, and that disobedience to their commands is regarded throughout the length and breadth of the empire as a most heinous offence. But they are, nevertheless, bound, so we believe, to consult the officers of justice before they can proceed to such dreadful extremes.

But let us now close our remarks on this subject by stating that on the 4th inst. a woman named Kwok-Shi, who resides in the Chau-tau-san-kai street of this city, showed her authority over her female slave, a little girl, either by flogging or kicking her to such a degree as to cause her death. It appears that this little slave-girl had gone out on an errand for her mistress, and on returning at an hour considerably beyond the time appointed, she received a chastisement which has terminated fatally. Thus far no steps have been taken by the authorities in regard to this sad case of brutality.

On the 5th inst. Ayew, who was for many years a much respected tea-merchant at this port, died in the fifty-ninth year of his age. He was at one time compradore to the firm of Messrs. Adam, Scott and Co., of Canton, and was well known to many foreign residents in the south of China.

AMOY.

Mr. Tong King Seng, chief manager of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, is now in Amoy looking after the interests of the Company. He proposes to at once place a line of steamers between Hong Kong and Foochow, and will shortly visit Formosa with the view of starting a line of steamers between this and the Formosan ports.

It is asserted by responsible parties that his Excellency Ting Futai has not been appointed Governor-General of the northern provinces as stated, but will return to Formosa to carry out his schemes for the development of that beautiful island ; that he has already sent some telegraph men in advance to construct a line from Taiwanfoo to Keelung, and that they are now at work. It is also said that he has telegraphed to the oil department at Pennsylvania, U.S., for an expert oil miner to work the oil springs in Owland and Kim-pao-lee. Something is being done beside towards the working of the sulphur mines.

TAKOW.

An occasional correspondent of a Hong Kong paper says:—

H.E. Ting Futai has left Formosa for Foochow, and it is doubtful whether his Excellency will ever return again. Bad luck for Formosa ! Now that the worthy and energetic old Futai has left things are certain to be as bad as before, and you need not be surprised to hear from this most startling news. His Excellency's presence in the island was a great hardship to all his subordinate officers, as squeezes of any description were impossible during that time, but now begins the golden harvest. The most ingenious stratagems are resorted to to fill the so long empty coffers of the mandarins, and it is painful to see how a few of the foreigners in the Chinese service willingly lend a helping hand to Chinese officials to facilitate the game, at the expense of foreigners and foreign trade.

It appears that a Customs employè here, for some cause or other, applied to the local mandarins for a warrant of arrest against the compradore of a foreign merchant, which was promptly granted, the compradore being a very wealthy man, and having wealthy relations, thus promising to the wily mandarins innumerable squeezes. The mandarins being, however, somewhat afraid to execute the warrant, had recourse to the Commissioner of Customs, who placed at the disposal of the mandarins, the Customs Harbour Master, and examiner, and a number of Customs' gigmen, who in a body, during the absence and without the knowledge of the foreign merchant concerned—forced their way into the premises of the said merchant, pulled the unsuspecting compradore out of his bed, and carried him to H.B.M. Consulate. H.B.M. representative declined to have anything to do with the compradore, but allowed Chinese policemen to drag him from the Consulate with the intention of taking him to the next district town (about seven miles away), when, thanks to the spirited action of another foreigner, who wanted to save his friend the humiliation of seeing his compradore dragged through the island like the lowest criminal, the man was liberated; of course, the mandarins had no charge against the compradore ere this, but the fact of a foreigner having liberated him gave them the pretext for a most cruel persecution of the poor Chinaman. It is said that the Acting British Consul in this port without hesitation countersigned the warrant for the apprehension of the foreigner's compradore, though it had been procured by a foreigner against a foreigner's servant without the previous knowledge of the Consul. Now, if it be true that a British Consul is bound by treaty to countersign a warrant issued by a mandarin for the apprehension of a foreigner's servant, irrespective of the reason of such injurious proceedings, it is time that something should be done to deprive the mandarins of such a powerful weapon, and to strengthen the hands of the foreign Consuls to protect trade more effectually. I hear the compradore is yet unable to return to the business-premises (fearing another arrest). In the meantime his employer's business is going to the dogs.

A great deal of fighting is at present going on in the south of the Island, and since the troops there are numerous and all well armed with breechloaders, I am afraid it will now go hard with the poor aborigines. It seems the aborigines in the south of the Island are the most difficult people to deal with (though it did not take the Japanese long to bring them to submission).

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

—o—

MANILA.

The subjoined items of intelligence are translated by the Straits Times from Manila newspapers:—

Twelve copies of a draft plan of railways, to be constructed in the island of Luzon, drawn up by Don E. L. Navarrom, in compliance with a Royal order, had been forwarded to the Spanish Minister for the Colonies.

Intelligence had been received from Spain that the preliminary inquiries as to the laying of the submarine telegraphic cable to connect the Philippines with Europe had been effected.

By last accounts, owing to scarcity, rice had risen in price at Manila, it being quoted there at 15 cuartos per cavan. Several consignments were expected shortly.

Sooloo is progressing favourably. The head chiefs, many of them, continue obstinately to stick out for their barbarous petty despotism. A more serious turn of thought occupies many minds; an influx of Chinese is not unlikely to flock to Sooloo, as they have done to many promising points for their ardent chase after the dollar. Now is the time to provide against that trouble and annoyance caused by them in other quarters. Singapore they appear to be taking, if not by storm, at least by escalade. The Batavia authorities might give us some very useful hints on this subject. A poll tax and a demand for good sound security would be likely perhaps to confine immigrations of Chinese to useful, or industrious individuals, and to exclude the roughs and robbers from China, who land in thousands in other quarters of the world. Not one of them should be allowed to land or stay in the place who cannot prove that he is a Northern, or a bona fide trader, and can produce some respectable security to that effect. Rascality should be sent back or away by the vessel which brought it, and this plan being strictly enforced might soon act as a preventive or deterrent in keeping away vagrant professional pilferers, and reprobate adventurers. The utmost strictness should be observed in imposing such enactments, otherwise the low Chinese are very smart in slipping through the meshes of almost any laws. If they become too numerous in Sooloo they might ultimately plot and combine with the natives in the neighbouring islands or country, as they did formerly with the natives in Java, causing immense loss of life and property, and hence that strict supervision under which they are now held at Batavia. In reflecting on the future, this point is worthy of some serious thought certainly. They afforded a severe lesson formerly at Sarawak likewise. The laws and regulations regarding the Chinese element of the population at Manila may be strict and suitable for that place generally; but as Sooloo is declared a free port and immigration specially encouraged, the situation becomes so peculiar and so different from that in any other portion of the Philippines as to have called forth the foregoing remarks; and it may probably be judged expedient by the authorities to make special rules and regulations, regarding the influx of Chinese before they become too numerous to be easily dealt with, or even dealt with at all. An improved code might be adopted with advantage in the Sooloo Archipelago for strict regulations against any influx of Chinese adventurers of the truly ruffian or criminal class.

SAIGON.

The Courier de Saigon of the 20th May contains an Ordinance of ten chapters, authorising the erection of Saigon into a Municipality with a Mayor, two Assistants, and twelve Municipal Councillors. Of the twelve Councillors eight must be French born or naturalised subjects, two, natives of the country, and two, foreigners, one Asiatic, and non-Asiatic. The non-French members of the Council are nominated by the Governor in Council, and the rest of the Council are elected by vote of the ratepayers. The ordinary meetings of the Council will be held four times a year, at the beginning of February, May, August, and November, and each meeting will last ten days, but extraordinary meetings may be convoked by the Governor, at the request of the Mayor, should the interests of the community require it. The meetings of the Council are not public, but every ratepayer may obtain copies of the proceedings. The Mayor and his assistants are nominated by the Governor from among the Municipal Councillors elected by the ratepayers. The duties and powers of the Mayor and the Council are minutely detailed in two chapters of the Ordinance. Another chapter is devoted to the revenue and expenditure of the Municipality, and the manner of imposing and levying taxes. Chapter eight defines the legal position and liabilities of the Municipality and how it may sue and be sued in courts of law. Chapter nine relates to the accounts of the Municipality, and chapter ten lays down the law regarding the qualifications of electors and the revision of the electoral lists.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Advertiser has the following:—

There is no section of the east where railways are more needed than in Siam. The country should be opened up and developed in order that the natural fertility of its soil may be made to yield a remunerative return for labour employed and capital expended in its cultivation. The value of the most important cereals consumed by mankind is estimated not so much by their quantity as by their nearness to a point of shipment and cheapness of transportation. Railways alone can furnish both where water communication is inadequate or unreliable. It would be difficult to find a country possessed of more natural facilities for cheap and rapid railway construction than Siam. Here labour can be had at merely nominal rates, timber for ties and bridges for almost nothing, and iron rails, engines, cars, &c., can be obtained in England and America at lower prices than ever known before.

The construction of a railway northward towards the great rice-producing region and near the valuable timber forests would increase the trade of Bangkok fully fifty per cent. and add immensely to its commercial importance. No time should be lost in prosecuting this highly important work.

A young Government official has just ordered from a prominent firm here nine little steamers to make our river lively. Now even a little steamer of some prince or nobleman as naturally calls to our landing, to give its owner an opportunity to survey our book department and make purchases, as a boat of many oars of the olden time. It is easier to keep a little steamer than a great number of boatmen.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 17th June; the French mail from London, May 18, was received on the 16th June. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

A Government Gazette Extraordinary contains the Queen's Proclamation of Neutrality in the war between Russia and Turkey. There is nothing calling for particular notice in the Proclamation, which is in the usual form, the question of illegal enlistment, shipbuilding and expedition in the interests of either of the belligerents being specially dwelt upon and forbidden; but attached to the Proclamation is a despatch or memorandum by Lord Derby, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, laying down rules as to the use to be allowed to the belligerents of Her Majesty's ports, harbours, and coasts throughout all her dominions.

Intelligence has been received by Messrs. Hinnekindt and Co., agents to the Olano Larrinaga line of steamers, of the stranding of a mail steamer of that line, the Gloria, bound from Manila to Spain and Liverpool, calling at Singapore. The Gloria left Manila on the 25th May, with about 300 passengers for Spain, and a full cargo. When off Pulo Laut, a small island on the north of the Natunas Group, on the 30th May, she struck on an unknown reef, but, though it is probable the vessel may be lost, the passengers were landed safely on the island. The vessel was discovered to be in distress in the afternoon of the 3rd June by Captain McKeon, of the British barque Marquis of Argyle, who, being signalled by a boat from the Gloria, put back immediately to her assistance, and, about three A.M., on the 4th June, anchored about a mile and a half off the Gloria. Though Captain McKeon expressed his willingness to take the whole of the passengers and crew on board his vessel and convey them to Singapore, his offer was declined, on the ground that most of the passengers were political prisoners, and they are detained on the island. The Marquis of Argyle, which arrived here this morning, brought on only the purser and engineer. The agents have, we understand, chartered a steamer to be despatched to the assistance of the stranded vessel.

We learn that some Chinese have been arrested by the police under circumstances which go to show the necessity of occasional investigations as to the treatment extended to newly-arrived immigrants. Some seventy men have, it appears, been confined for twelve days in a house near Hill-street, owing to their inability to pay what their gaolers claim as passage-money—a sum which the immigrants declare to be exactly five times the amount they were told they would be charged in China. They further allege that they have been beaten and half-starved. Information was given to the Chinese Protector's department, but the Immigration Ordinance not being in force, the matter was referred to the police, by whom the coolies were taken in charge. We may mention that two of the men have died since their release—both small-pox and dysentery having attacked the coolies. Without undertaking to say how far their allegations of ill-usage are true, we must certainly express an opinion that something should be done to keep an eye on fresh arrivals.

While the Australian Colonies are providing for all eventualities, and our Governor has gone to give them the benefit of his advice, it may not be out of place to inquire whether any one is taking thought for the defences of Singapore and the Straits Settlements generally. Have any steps been taken to obtain a supply of torpedoes and trained men to manage them? War with Russia is, if we may judge from the report of the debate in the House of Commons on Mr. Gladstone's resolutions, exceedingly improbable, but more unlikely events are happening every day, and events move fast now-a-days, and should Russia prove overwhelmingly successful, and, as is her wont, glaringly falsify her professions and repeated declarations, there will be war to a certainty, and suddenly, in spite of Mr. Gladstone and his faction. The Russian squadron have left San Francisco under sealed orders, and it would not be at all surprising if they turned up some fine morning entering Singapore roadstead. In that case H.M.S. Growler would be in rather an uncomfortable position, even if reinforced by the Charybdis, and Singapore would be entirely at the mercy of the Russians. Fort Canning's popguns can manage to fire a decent salute, but that is all they are good for, and H.M.'s gallant 74th could not do much against iron-clads. The Russians would hardly let slip the opportunity of levying a "squeeze" that would rather astonish the Colonial Treasurer and our merchants and bankers. In that case it may be some consolation to them to know beforehand that, according to an Australian paper, Lord Carnarvon has promised to refund any such squeezes on Colonies.

The Java Bank has fixed at 13 3-10 per cent. its dividend for the financial year closing with March last. In the report of that institution it is once more pointed out with stress that the money market in Java can only be considered secure from arbitrary disturbance when the artificial and unnatural system of conveying the larger portion of the produce of the country to Holland to be sold there is departed from. Owing to this system Netherlands India, for its requirements as to a circulating medium, is dependent on the conduct of the Netherlands Government, and on its watchfulness in the timely and sufficient sending out of specie. This difficulty is increased by the law making gold a legal tender here as well as silver. Indeed, should there be no opportunity for making use of N.I. silver in the Netherlands at its full current price, it will depend solely on the Netherlands Government, and on the quantity of gold it sends out, whether or not people in Java will have gold enough for foreign countries, and will be able to keep silver at its legal value.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Evans, Pugh and Co.'s Tea Report says:—In our last issue, dated 21st May, we reported opening of the market. During the week's interval which has since elapsed, a large business has been going on, amounting to 125,000 chests of Hankow district Teas, and 58,000 half-chests of Ningchows, making total settlements to date 167,000 chests of the former, and 78,000 half-chests of the latter, against 130,000 chests and 80,000 half-chests during corresponding number of days last season. Four steamers with cargoes amounting in all to 9,622,000 lbs. have been despatched to London. Prices have been steady, and we do not consider there has been any quotable fluctuation during the week. Ly-ling Teas have been taken at from Tls. 16 to 17½, against Tls. 23½ to 24½ per picul, but quality of these Teas is unusually bad. It is now apparent how little really fine Tea the crop yields, all the choicest chops being deficient in fineness of quality, but we consider the medium to fine kinds are good strong useful Teas, superior as to strength compared with last year. Quotations are:—For Ningchows, Tls. 28 to 46.50 per picul, against Tls. 25 to 59.56 per picul, last season; finest Oopacks, 30 to 36 per picul, against Tls. 30 to 43; other Oopacks, 16.50 to 29 per picul, against Tls. 21 to 30; Oanfas, 20.50 to 37 per picul, against Tls. 28 to 39.75; Oonahms, 16 to 25.50 per picul, against Tls. 15.75 to 30. Settlements to date are—167,009 chests, against 229,797 chests in 1876. Stock is estimated at 33,348 chests, against 32,721 chests in 1876. Settlements of Ninchows not included in above figures amount to 78,293 half-chests, against 121,055 half-chests last year. The steamers Braemar Castle, Glenlyon, Radnorshire, Stad Amsterdam, and Hankow, are loading for London at £3 15s. to £4. Rate by P. and O. Company's is £4 15s. and by Holt's line £4 5s. The sailing vessels Cutty Sark and John R. Worcester are on the berth at £4 per ton.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—During the week under review steady settlements have taken place, both for England and the Colonies. Exchange and Tael prices have remained much as last quoted. Further arrivals from the country confirm in every respect the opinion expressed in the last issue of this report, namely, that the general quality of the Teas from most districts is superior to that of last season. Fock Oans, however, are an exception, they are not so good either in leaf or cup, and have consequently been neglected, inducing business, as the market closes at a considerable reduction on opening rates. The up-country Teas, which have been arriving freely during the past few days, have met with considerable attention, their quality being decidedly superior to that of last season. It is impossible to speak positively as to the total yield of Paklings, but it is becoming pretty clear that it will be considerably short of last year, some 40,000 boxes or 30 per cent. is the estimate. Congou: Settlements have shown much irregularity, but the only change worthy of notice is a drop in Fock Oan kinds of some Tls. 2 per picul. Souchongs: None have as yet arrived. Oolongs have been taken at high rates for such inferior description, being deficient in every quality calculated to attract London buyers. Flowery Pekoes: Only one chop has been shown. Scented Teas have been eagerly bought on arrival at extreme rates. The scenting is very deficient, and it is impossible to say what the quality of subsequent arrivals may be, but the leaf is superior to last season. The Export to Great Britain and the Continent amounts to 3,319,587 lbs., against nil at same period last season. To the United States 59,299 lbs., against nil. It must be borne in mind that excess in above figures is entirely owing to the early opening of the season. The export this season promises to go forward much slower than it did last. Freights: To London, £3 10s. to £4; to Australia, steamer, £4.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—New Silk had come down in bulk and about 300 bales of Tsatlees were offering, mostly from Ling-ho, Shon-ling and Hoochow districts. Musters of the Gold Lion, Clouded Dragon and Mountain Chops had been shown, and compared very favourably with last season's reeling, a considerable improvement in size, cleanliness and evenness being apparent, and the quality was also satisfactory. No transactions are reported; holders of new Silk were not inclined to face a loss of 10 to 15 per cent. on their first purchases, and Foreign buyers had not been encouraged by the tenor of late telegrams to open the market at 2s. 6d. to 3s. over London values. It is reported that a small parcel of new Silk was going forward on Chinese account. The estimate of the season's yield was very generally agreed at 60,000 bales. The second crop was going on favourably.

RAPID VOYAGE ROUND THE WORLD.—Dr. F. S. De Hass, American Consul at Jerusalem, has sent to the Omaha (Nebraska) Republican a letter showing what short work he has just made of a tour round the world. He says:—"Not counting the time I lay over at different points, as these breaks in the journey could all have been avoided, I made the entire circuit of the globe in exactly sixty-eight days, and but for heavy weather on the Pacific would have made it in sixty-two days. The journey from Alexandria, Egypt, via Brindisi and Paris to London, and thence to New York and San Francisco, was accomplished in twenty days, and we were just the same number of days going from San Francisco to Yokohama. Crossing over from here to Canton took six days. A sail of ten days over the China Sea and through the Straits of Malacca, touching at several points we have not time to notice, brought us to Ceylon. Thence we sailed directly to Suez, which took twelve days, and thence, in a few hours, by rail to Alexandria, our starting point, making the entire distance of 25,000 miles—16,000 by water and 9,000 on land—in sixty-eight days, without any accident or detention of any kind."

THE Envoy from Kashgar and suite, with Captain Molloy, the British Resident at Kashgar, left Charing-cross on their return by the Continental Mail train Thursday.

THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER "MEIKONG."

THE CAPTAIN'S REPORT.

Having left Point de Galle on June 10, nothing particular occurred until Sunday, the 17th. I had hoped to see Raz Afoun during the day with good observations. To be sure of seeing land I steered for that Cape, when, on taking observations at 3.30, I found that I was in 49 deg. 31 long. (Paris mer.) estimated, the observations giving 49.46. I supposed I was passing at 30 miles from the Cape. To see it before night I must have luffed 30 deg., and stood without sail, and broadside S.S.W. to the strong breeze and heavy sea of the monsoon. There would be a moon until midnight, and by watching I was sure to see land. In reality, at about 11 o'clock, I believed that I saw Guardafui 15 deg. to starboard. I hauled to starboard so as to pass at about four or five miles' distance, and, believing I was sure of my position, reefed the foresail and foretopsail. Having the foreland in view abeam, I wore round to the north, and when it was again on the beam I ordered the officer of the watch to haul to port to 62 deg. W., making a full turn of the wheel to come round wide. It was then 11.45 or 11.50, and I had left the bridge to write out orders for the night, and was scarcely seated when I heard the engine-room bell. I thought it was a ship, and then I saw the sea breaking, and rushed to the bridge. The ship had grounded without any shock. The engines were reversed at full speed; but the wind from the south-west became violent; by the stranding alone the sea broke over the ship, which fell athwart. The shocks became of extreme violence, and the vessel was rent below the boilers. Shortly afterwards the chief engineer came to tell me that a boiler must have been rift, that the engine-room was full of steam, and that it was impossible to remain below. The ship was from that moment lost. I gave orders for the men to open the valves and come up. I then endeavoured to ascertain our position. I saw that the land line was covered with a thick white mist, that I was half a mile from Cape Guardafui, and that what I had supposed to be that Cape was the mountains in the interior. From the bridge the land appeared to be so near that the broadside of the steamer, lying on the starboard beam, formed a breakwater, and I thought that, notwithstanding the bumping of the ship, it would be easy to land the passengers and crew. I gave orders to launch the larboard boats to take off the passengers, and told Lieut. Abbal to take the whaleboat and rig a traveller rope between the vessel and the shore, which was done. But the currents were so strong between the steamer and the land that two boats had disappeared, one had been overturned in the breakers, drowning two men, while the other, commanded by Lieutenant Bouis, had been carried round the stern of the vessel and been lost sight of. All night I believed it had foundered. Yet the whaleboat had reached land with the launch, carrying one load of passengers. The night had become very dark, and about half an hour later I saw the whaleboat return full of water. It turned keel upwards, and we had great difficulty in saving the crew of it. Next day, however, it was this boat that saved three-fourths of those on board. In fine, of four boats only one served for what was required, yet returned capsized. I was then informed that the ground swell was very violent on shore, and that a landing during the night was impossible. I listened to the advice, and made all the passengers go down to the saloon. I went to them myself to exhort them to courage, and gave orders to the brave but unfortunate steward, M. Henry, to collect as much provisions as possible, which was well done. The line of communication between the vessel and the land served me to send a hawser on shore, and I utilised the time which remained before daylight to launch the longboat and the youyou. Lieutenant Abbal, from land, then saw the lights of a steamer passing near, and I showed some Bengal lights. Was able to discharge some rockets, notwithstanding the sea, which broke over the vessel, and fired two guns. The steamer, which was the Glenartney, answered our signals. At last day broke, and I commenced the landing, with remarkable success. I may say that, with the exception of the whaleboat, which was able to make some consecutive trips without capsizing, not one of the boats arrived safe, and yet no serious accident occurred either to women, children, or the aged, who were rescued, wetted through, from the waterlogged or overturned boats without any lives being lost. At daylight I had seen the boat commanded by Lieutenant Bouis striving to reach us, without success. This was another hope of safety. I ordered him to go to the Glenartney to ask for assistance from Captain Gulland, and to request him to go and anchor to leeward of the Cape, we being to windward of it. That brave officer returned on board at about eleven A.M. quite exhausted, and informed me that he had communicated with the Glenartney, which was going to anchor, as I had requested. The landing continued, and between noon and one o'clock the steamer was evacuated. The courage displayed by twelve or fifteen men during that morning was unexampled. I was the last to leave the vessel; sure that no one remained on board. The storeroom was then filled with water, which reached to the lower deck. The mail-room was also full. By degrees, as the passengers were landed in good order and by classes, the number of Somanlis who had come on board had increased, and they were becoming bolder. It was the same on shore, where they were all armed. I had saved some rifles, but had no cartridges. I had also landed some provisions, which were wetted, but very little fresh water, as my intention on going on land was to establish a camp for the night, to save as much luggage as possible, and to go on board the Glenartney on the morrow at daybreak, when the sun would be less fierce. On arriving I saw the lieutenant of the English steamer, who had been sent by Captain Gulland, and afterwards the captain himself. There was a journey of eight or nine miles to make through the sand to reach the shore on the other side of the Cape. We had to carry the women, children, and the disabled without chairs; also the little that had been saved. Captain Gulland consented to wait until eight o'clock the next morning. I could scarcely count for help on the blacks on board, who had rendered no assistance during the landing. The Chinese were demoralised, and were only an embarrassment. There remained the Europeans, the best of whom were exhausted. The Somanlis on shore not only refused to assist us, even for money, or to lend us their little asses or camels, but their numbers increased at every moment. They were armed, and the least dispute might have led to a conflict, which would have been fatal to the passengers. We had but little water, and above us was a torrid sun, which had struck down my unfortunate steward, M. Henry, who without respite had lowered the passengers into the boats, and whom I had sent on shore to collect the provisions as they arrived. Having reflected what was to be done, I adopted what I believe was the best means of saving those under my charge, which was to start immediately, before the wounds had time to stiffen or the limbs to become paralysed. I gave the order to start. Not to enter into details of that fearful journey across the desert, we arrived at last on board the Glenartney, my steward, M. Henry, dying on the way. It was only when on board that I learned of the death of the passenger, M. Arathoon. Having called over my muster-roll and found that all were present, I told Captain Gulland that he might start when he pleased, and at 10.30 we were under way.

We have been requested to publish the following letter from one of the passengers:—

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice that in your issue of the 16th inst. your Editorial remarks on the loss of the Messageries Maritimes s.s. Meikong conclude thus:—"Upon the whole, we understand, from competent authority, that everything that could be done was done, though to landsmen unacquainted with the real difficulties various plans which would have been in reality impracticable naturally suggested themselves."

As one of the passengers who hold that the captain, officers, and crew of the Meikong failed in their duty I trust, you will allow me to give an account of the loss of the vessel, and to state my reasons for the belief I, with full consciousness of its gravity, unhesitatingly express:—

We left Galle on Sunday, June 10, at about 4.30 P.M., and experienced for the first four days much calmer weather than we expected, in consequence of the captain taking a southerly course to escape the full force of the Monsoon. On Sunday, the 17th we had a stiff breeze all day, and were under full sail and steam expecting to make Cape Gardafui that evening. It was a fine moonlight night. Most of the passengers had turned in when we were awakened by three severe shocks, which brought all from their cabins eager to know what had happened. Two of the passengers were on deck, and at once knew the cause, having observed the close proximity of land fully eight minutes before the vessel struck. Immediately confusion and terror spread throughout the ship. The saloon was filled with ladies and children, whose shrieks and cries added to the general dismay. On reaching the deck we found that the steamer was heeling over towards the land which appeared to be not more than one hundred yards from the starboard side, and which the commander informed us was the mainland of Africa. Before us we could see a prominent headland, whilst on our starboard, we being now broadside on to the shore, we could discern a low-lying beach with the surf breaking angrily upon it.

All this while waves broke continuously over the ship, pouring over the awnings and down the hatchways and saloon skylights which were open when the accident happened. The first action of all on board seemed to be to secure life belts, some of which hung in each cabin. No orders having been heard, or instructions given, the passengers were left entirely to themselves to assist one another as best they could, and to support and encourage the ladies and children. After some delay three boats were consecutively lowered by which almost all the foreign male passengers got away. The ladies and children were not allowed to leave, in consequence of the high surf and the uncertain landing. By the second boat a rope was conveyed to shore and made fast. The third boat alone returned to the ship, full of water, the men being hauled on board by ropes, while of the second boat's crew two sailors unfortunately lost their lives in the surf which was dashing high on the rocky shore. It was at this time the captain decided to delay the disembarkation of the rest of the passengers and crew until daylight. The four hours and a-half that intervened before daybreak was a terribly anxious time for all on board. There seemed to be no order of any kind maintained. No means by casting the lead or otherwise, were taken to discover the position of the vessel upon the rocks. No signals of distress were exhibited, nor did any of the officers either assure us of our safety, or organise plans of escape, whilst all parts of the vessel were filled with groups of Chinese servants, stokers and stewards, seemingly bent on taking care of themselves, and securing their own property, while even in some instances cabins were ransacked and the property of the passengers stolen. All that was done in the before-mentioned time was to bring one of the three boats remaining on board from the port to the starboard side. From time to time seas broke violently over the vessel, bumping her on the rocks, and exciting considerable doubts among the passengers as to whether she would remain till morning.

At about 4 A.M. we were made aware by shouts from the party on shore of the lights of a steamer approaching on our port quarter, and the captain then for the first time sent up rockets and himself held blue lights over the side. Three guns were also fired, and we had the satisfaction of seeing our signals replied to. At dawn disembarkation commenced with one small boat, which by means of the rope fixed on shore was hauled backwards and forwards through the surf, and thus all were eventually landed in safety. The captain had, meanwhile, sent a boat with an officer and crew to communicate with the steamer lying in the offing, and making signals, which the Meikong did not reply to. On account of the wind and high sea running at the time this boat could not reach the steamer, the Glenartney, and would have been unable to communicate with her had not Captain Gulland lowered a boat and so reached the French crew when they were almost exhausted. This boat was unable to return to the Meikong, and was ultimately abandoned on the shore, the officer and crew finding their way back to the main body on foot.

The passengers on leaving the Meikong were prevented by the officers from taking with them the very smallest packages, such as hand-bags, shawls, clothes, &c., being repeatedly assured that the baggage would eventually be brought on shore; so that in many instances passengers went to their cabins before leaving, and safely packed everything, taking absolutely nothing with them. On reaching the shore we found ourselves intermingled with numbers of the natives (Somalis), armed with swords and spears, and in some few instances with match-locks, but to all appearance they were not disposed to be hostile. The English passengers were fully occupied as they landed in making the ladies and children as comfortable as possible under these trying circumstances—drying clothes, collecting chairs washed on shore, and rigging up sails as a protection from the burning sun, also in keeping at a distance the inquisitive natives.

There being no officer on shore to take direction of affairs until the Commissaire arrived (bringing with him a few bags of biscuits drenched with sea water, and also a few bottles of wine) nothing was known as to what was to be done. At length an officer and a sailor, in a very exhausted state appeared in our midst, bringing the welcome news that their ship, the Glenartney, was lying in a small bay about ten miles off on the other side of Cape Gardafui, waiting to take us on board, and they urgently requested that a first detachment of passengers should start, and make their way to the steamer in order to inform the captain that the remainder would shortly follow. This was done, about a dozen leaving together for the Glenartney. By 2.15 P.M. the crew were all landed—no one being left on board; but the commander, first officer, and a few others who on leaving brought with them all that was saved, viz., the diplomatic despatches, one bag of registered letters, ship's papers, instruments, arms, &c. Up to this moment the captain had not decided on the entire abandonment of the vessel, but he and the Commissaire assured several passengers that their baggage would be saved.

The captain of the Glenartney, who had in the meantime walked over from his ship, stated that he was ready to wait till the afternoon of the following day, and that he would lend a portion of his crew to assist in saving anything possible, which, however, at the last moment the captain of the Meikong declined. To prove the practicability of saving the valuable portion of the cabin luggage, it may be here observed that one gentleman, on the promise of reward to one of the crew, obtained his tin despatch boxes from his cabin, this being just previous to the captain's decision to abandon the steamer. Some time before the commander had left the vessel numbers of natives had swum to the ship, and were allowed on board. They were observed collecting and throwing into the sea the lighter luggage left in the cabins, without the slightest attempt being made to prevent their depredations. There is good reason for believing that a little firmness would have been sufficient to deter them.

Leaving this magnificent vessel, containing a very valuable cargo, with mails and passengers' baggage all abandoned, lying on a fairly even keel within one-hundred yards from the shore, and in a comparatively smooth sea to the crowds of Somalis who were now swarming over it, the remainder of the passengers, the officers and crew commenced their march across the burning desert which separated them from the bay in which the Glenartney was lying. Owing to the forethought and activity of some of the English passengers, a few of the ladies and children were carried by the chairs saved from the wreck lashed upon oars, which by bribes and promises of money they induced some of the black stokers to carry, without which aid some of the ladies must inevitably have perished. Along these ten miles of soft burning sand, under a scorching sun, with no water, food, or means of sustenance, was to be seen a long, straggling train of people, in many cases shoeless, hatless, and half-clothed, some in their night dresses, while the crew, who ought to have assisted the weak and failing, passed along carrying with them their bundles and packages, and even such trumpery as monkeys, parrots, &c. It was a most heartr-ending sight to see delicate ladies, some walking in slippers, half dead with thirst and exhaustion, struggling for their very lives to attain the end of the journey; and too much praise cannot be given to those of the passengers who, forgetful of themselves, did all in their power to render assistance on this dreadful occasion. On our arrival at the bay we found the boats of the Glenartney ready to receive and convey us as fast as possible, and thoughtfullysupplied with fresh water, which was eagerly swallowed by one and all. There we heard also the sad news of the death of one of our fellow passengers in the first detachment, of exhaustion, and also of that of the Commissaire, who was bringing up the rear, from sunstroke. At length, all having arrived safely on board we left the bay at about midnight for Aden, which we reached at 10 A.M. on the 20th, having in the meantime experienced unexampled kindness and generosity from Captain Gulland, his officers and crew, who not only supplied us with food but gave clothes to those who were most in need of them; and but for their gallant and willing help the loss of life among the passengers would undoubtedly have been very great. The passengers were requested to meet at the Messageries Maritimes office, Aden, on the 22nd, to hear the report of the captain of the Meikong read in reference to the loss of his ship and abandonment of the baggage. It contained so many statements which were not considered in accordance with facts that it was not signed by any of the English passengers, who before leaving Aden, handed in to the Political Resident a protest, which contains the foregoing particulars. There are to be added the few following facts:—H.M. troopship Tamar passed the Cape at 5 30 P.M. on the afternoon of the 18th, and seeing the French colours and the Company's flag flying half-mast (having been so left by the Commandant of the Meikong, she stood in and signalled for some time, but receiving no reply, and being short of coal, proceeded at length on her way. On the 20th June, in the afternoon, the French troopship Finisterre also passed the same place, but remained for some time, and sent a party of men on board the wreck, with strict orders to touch nothing, as it was said to do so would be an insult to the captain of the Meikong, who had abandoned his ship. They found the deck in possession of Somalis, who had taken up their quarters there, and were feeding on the sheep and other live stock of the Meikong. The party of sailors easily drove them off and examined the ship, one man bringing with him a photograph album out of the saloon belonging to one of the first-class passengers; it is now in the owner's possession, and is quite dry and uninjured. From the foregoing, I wish to draw attention to the several points of complaint which we make. By whose mistake or negligence this ship was on a moonlight night run on shore at full speed, between Cape Guardafui, rising 900 feet from the sea, or a headland about four miles south of it, fully 300 feet high, it is for the French authorities to discover. As I have said above, the proximity of the shore was noticed some minutes before the vessel struck by passengers on board. Why were no signals of distress exhibited until the Glenartney was sighted by the party on shore? Why was no lead thrown to discover our position on the rocks? Had there been deep water either at stem or stern we might have slid from where we struck and been engulphed at any moment. How was it no attempt was made to prepare to save anything during the hours we awaited daylight, with twelve officers, including engineers, and a crew of over 150 men, with nearly five hours at their disposal, and already possessing a rope communication with shore? It is almost incredible to believe that nothing was done and nothing whatever saved. But on the other hand, passengers were prevented taking with them trifling packages, being assured that their cabin luggage would follow them. There is little more to add concerning this miserable calamity. That the officers were content to see ladies, the young and feeble, toiling over the burning desert, sinking for want of what a little forethought and care would so easily have supplied, is perfectly astounding. So satisfied were the English passengers of the possibility of saving the greater part of the baggage and valuables that they prevailed on the Political Resident at Aden to offer H.M.S. Vestal, then lying at anchor for the protection of the wreck. This was declined by the agent of the Messageries Maritimes as unnecessary, whereas before we left Aden Europeans and Arabs had already left to buy up what fell into the hands of the Somalis.

I also distinctly state that Captain Gulland himself told me that he asked the captain of the Meikong if he did not intend to make an effort to save the baggage, as, if necessary, he was ready to wait until the following afternoon to assist in getting it off. To this the French captain replied that the passengers' baggage was of little value, and he did not consider it of sufficient importance to repay any efforts that might be made.

I may mention that Mr. Arrathoon, the passenger who died crossing the desert, stated that he had left £6,000 worth of pearls in his cabin. "If I had known that valuable property was in the passengers' cabins," said Captain Gulland to me, "I should myself, if necessary, have gone on board the 'Meikong,' and saved it."

I allow these facts, to which I and others can testify, to speak for themselves, and I may say that the substance of the foregoing statement was subscribed to, as to the best of their belief strictly true, by almost all the English passengers on board.

I am, yours faithfully,
G. W. THOMSON.

Newstead, Forest Hill, S.E., July 20, 1877.

MR. RATHBONE has given notice to ask the Postmaster-General whether, as in the case of other subsidised lines, notice will be given to the Peninsular and Oriental and the Royal Mail Steamship companies to terminate the present contracts as soon as they legally can be terminated; and whether assurance can be given that ample notice and opportunity will be given to enable all in a position to tender for the services now performed by those companies to do so.

THE DEATH OF THE EMIR OF KASHGAR.

(THE TIMES.)

If we may trust the report that Yakoob Khan is dead, a striking figure has disappeared from Asiatic strife. To say that he was the greatest man in Central Asia would be to say little, for the rulers and leaders who fitfully appear on that troubled scene have to Western eyes almost as little individuality as so many kites and crows. But the Emir of Kashgar stood out from that throng of mediocrities. He had printed a distinct idea of his individuality even in Europe. He would infallibly have left a great name if he had lived somewhat earlier. His force of will, his unscrupulous ambition, and his powers as a soldier might have made him a Timour if Tartary had still been able to send forth conquering hordes. Nay, if the Russian conquests had been delayed for a single generation, he might have changed the face of Central Asia as the founder of one great Mahommedan State embracing the whole of Turkestan. But his energy was kept within the bounds of Kashgar by the pressure of a European State. The true greatness of the man was seen in the fact that, while working on so remote a field, he made his power felt at Calcutta and St. Petersburg.

Yakoob Khan owed nothing to birth. He was one of those soldiers of fortune who nowhere so frequently reach supreme power as in the troubled societies of the East. A native of Khokand, he first distinguished himself during the resistance of that Khanate to the advancing Russians. So long ago as 1853 he had been intrusted with the defence of the Fort Ak-Masjid, on the Syr Daria, and his foes admit that he fought heroically. He was unsuccessful, and for a time little was heard of him. But in 1863 he seized a chance of distinction offered by the troubled state of Kashgar. That Khanate, which lies nearest to China, had been conquered by the Chinese. Their rule had been disturbed by a mutiny of the Tungan soldiers in their service, and the country was thrown into a state of anarchy by the savagery of the struggle. The confusion was rendered worse by marauding bands of Kirghiz, who took the town of Kashgar after a long siege, and instantly made it the scene of pillage and frightful massacre. At that stage of anarchy another invader appeared in the person of Khoja Buzurg Khan, who belonged to the family which had formerly ruled Kashgar, and which the Chinese had exiled. Buzurg Khan naturally thought that the general disorder gave him a good opportunity of regaining his rights, and he took with him Yakoob Beg as his chief fighting man. Although the two adventurers brought a very small force, they were soon joined by a crowd of people, and the military talents of Yakoob gradually bore down all opposition. How desperate was the fighting may be seen from a well-known story of what happened at the siege of the fortress of Kashgar. For more than a year it was obstinately defended by the Chinese; but at last most of the chief officers found that they must come to terms with Yakoob. The Governor was of so different a mind as to be determined that he, and they, and his own family should all perish on the moment of surrender. But, instead of making his purpose known, he summoned his officers to his Council Chamber, and with them his sons and daughters. Underneath the floor he had meanwhile placed a barrel of gunpowder. As the assembly was discussing what should be done next, he sat coolly smoking until he heard the war cry of the Mohammedan besiegers as they scaled the walls, and then, dropping the ashes of his pipe on to a train of gunpowder, he blew himself and everybody else into the air. Such warfare, if barbarous, enabled the conqueror to be thorough, and Yakoob brought the whole country under the nominal rule of Buzurg Khan. But then followed an event which has become a commonplace in Oriental warfare. Buzurg was as indolent as Yakoob was energetic, and the lieutenant set aside the master. It is almost surprising that the chapter of deposition was bloodless, for the successful aspirant was never troubled by scruples. But Buzurg was allowed to go into exile, and he may still be alive. Yakoob Khan, as he now called himself, then showed that he had at least the right to rule which comes from force of character and grasp of intellect. He made his country the most peaceful part of Central Asia. If he ruled it with a rod of iron, he at least kept it free from such revolutions as disturbed the neighbouring Khanates. All the old factions felt the grasp of a master, and they did not dare to intrigue. His fame soon spread far beyond the confines of Kashgar; and seeing what he had done for the waning fortunes of Mohammedanism, the Emir of Bokhara gave him the title of the Attalik Ghazi, or leader of the champions of the faith. The Turks seem to have hoped that he might become a great Mussulman power, and thus check the advance of Russia. Abdul Aziz allowed him to take the peculiarly honoured title of Amir-el-Mumenein, or Commander of the Faithful, and Yakoob agreed to recognise the spiritual sovereignty of Constantinople by putting the superscription of the Sultan on his coins. He was alive to the interests of trade as well as of religion, and he entered into a treaty of commerce with the Viceroy of India.

But most of his energy was spent in the drilling and the equipping of his army. It is stated that he manufactured rifles after Russian models, and, at all events, he made his troops the most formidable body of native soldiers in Central Asia. He had good need to make ceaseless efforts to strengthen his defences, for he was hemmed on all sides save the south by enemies of overwhelming power. He saw Russia advancing year by year as if at the impulse of fatalism. He saw one native State after another falling to pieces before her armies. He lived in constant fear that his turn would come next, and the Russians took little trouble to make his mind easy. They blamed him for stirring up mischief in the neighbouring Khanates. They knew that if their sovereignty in Turkestan should be assailed by a religious war, he would be at the head of it; and there can be little doubt that, sooner or later, they would have crossed his frontiers. Anticipating invasion, he had built a fort in a mountain pass leading from his country to Russian territory, and he was eager to obtain assurance of support from this country. Some champions of "British interests" were ready to give it, but the Indian Government wisely believed that the best defence of British interests was to be found in the greatest chain of mountains in the world. As the passes from Kashgar to India are nearly 20,000 feet high, they will not be available for the purposes of invasion until artillery can be transported by balloons. Yakoob Khan found a still more dangerous enemy than Russia, and that was China. Some years ago the Chinese began to make preparations for reconquering Kashgar. Little interest, however, was excited by their military movements, as it seemed highly improbable that, after marching hundreds of miles, they could defeat the trained troops of Yakoob Khan. Yet they have been successful so far as the war has gone. A few months ago they seem to have defeated the Emir himself, and forced him to retreat towards some fortified positions which he had laboriously prepared. He is said to have died in the midst of the campaign. Had he lived, he might ultimately have made a successful defence, but the prospects of Kashgar are not bright now that it has lost the guidance of his intellect and will. The old elements of disunion will inevitably appear. He himself must have seen the danger to be very great before he would have nominated as his successor one of his lieutenants, Hakim Khan Tura, instead of any of his own sons. Another evidence of peril may probably be found in the fact that Hakim has declined the dangerous gift, and that it has thus fallen to the Attalik Ghazi's eldest son. Should the Chinese conquer Kashgar the event would be welcome to the Anglo-Indians, as they believe that a great and comparatively stable State like China would be a better barrier against the wave of Russian invasion than an isolated Native Government like that of Kashgar. For a time such may be the result; but, in any case a commanding political figure has isappeared from Central Asia in Yakoob Khan.

A CHURCH OF SCOTLAND MISSION TO CHINA.

Our readers will remember that some months back a proposal was set on foot to establish a Church of Scotland Mission to China. It originated with a member of the Scottish Church, who, impressed by the thought that the recent opening of the new Treaty Ports would be a most favourable opportunity for the spread of the Gospel in that great empire, offered to give £1,000, could his idea be carried out. The only step which the Foreign Mission Committee felt justified in taking was to ascertain how the Church was disposed, and whether such a Mission would secure general sympathy and hearty support. A paper was accordingly prepared, and sent to many of the leading ministers, office-bearers, and members of the Church, besides being printed in the Missionary Record. The reception which the proposal met has been a mixed one. Without any personal call or solicitation, about sixty subscriptions have been offered, amounting to about £750 (besides the donation which accompanied the original proposal). Some of these were of large amount, and others from persons in humble rank, including one, at least, from "A Servant." Many of the letters expressed warm sympathy with the object, one or two declaring that the proposers of the Mission had conferred a positive boon on the Church by opening up a new path of usefulness. Such things were encouraging, although the amount subscribed and the number of those contributing did not seem to show that anything like a general or cordial support had been given by the Church at large. In the circumstances, the Committee reported the whole matter to the late General Assembly, and requested instructions for their future guidance. The subject has been further considered, and it has been proposed to establish the Mission at one of the new ports on the Yangtsze, but the particular port which will be chosen has not yet been decided upon. It is expected that a Mission so situated will have the means of communication with the interior in all directions. The idea at present is to send out an ordained Minister and a Medical Missionary, while arrangements will also be made for the distribution of the Scriptures and of religious publications.

HONG KONG AND LABUAN.

The subjoined extracts, which are taken from a work published by Earl Grey in 1860, will be perused with interest by our readers in China, as showing the views which were taken in the early times with respect to the above colonies. It will be seen that the question of expenditure was from the earliest times one which engaged the attention of Government in reference to Hong Kong; and it is satisfactory that the finances of the Colony are now upon such a footing that there need be no apprehension on this score:—

The chief subject we had to consider with respect to this Island was that of the very heavy expense which it occasioned to the country. If the exceedingly large amount of that expense, and the limited use of which the trade has proved to our commerce, could have been foreseen, it may well be doubted whether it would have been thought worth while that it should be taken possession of. This had, however, been done long prior to the formation of your administration; and it only remained for us to endeavour to reduce the expense of the establishment, which had been formed on a scale suited to the supposed importance of Hong Kong, at a time when it was confidently anticipated that it would become the great emporium of the Chinese trade. In 1846 it was already obvious that this would not be the case, and that the greater part of the Commerce with China would be carried on in the ports of that country to which our merchants are admitted. The reduction of the establishment of a Colony, which has originally been formed on too large and costly a scale, must always, for obvious reasons, be a work of much difficulty; but I trust that, without the slightest injustice, or even harshness to any individual, and with no sacrifice except that of our own patronage, we succeeded in effecting a satisfactory reduction of the large expenditure of the country at Hong Kong. By a despatch from the Governor, Sir Samuel Bonham, which was printed with the Miscellaneous Estimates laid before Parliament in the year 1851, it is shown that the vote required for the service of this Colony, which had been £49,000 in 1845 and £36,900 in 1846, has since been progressively reduced to £15,500 in 1851. A considerable part of this reduction is due to the diminished expenditure on public works; but the Governor shows, in the despatch to which I refer, that, excluding the charge for public works in both years, the estimated expenditure of the Colony for 1851 was £5,068 less than that of 1848, when he assumed the government of the Colony, and his predecessor, Sir John Davies, reported in 1847 that he had previously effected permanent retrenchments, in salaries alone, to the extent of £2,800 a year. There was a further reduction in the estimate voted in the last Session, but this consists principally in a transfer of half the Governor's salary to the estimate for consular services. The military expenditure of Hong Kong has also been largely reduced; in 1847 it amounted to £115,149, in 1851 it was only £51,895. This reduction is owing partly to the completion of military works and buildings, and to the determination not to undertake others that had been projected, partly to a considerable diminution of the garrison. I have only to add, with regard to Hong Kong, that its trade and importance appear to be increasing, and that it is generally in a satisfactory condition.

LABUAN.

Another trading port which we possess in the Eastern Seas is that of Labuan. On our accession to office we found that memorials, earnestly praying that it might be occupied with a view to opening a commercial intercourse with the large and imperfectly known Island of Borneo, had been addressed to the Government from more than one quarter, and especially by the Chamber of Commerce of Manchester, and by the merchants of both London and Glasgow. We were of opinion that the reasons urged for this step were sufficient to make it proper to adopt it, and accordingly arrangements were made for taking possession of Labuan (which had been previously ceded to the country) as a British Colony. Sir James Brooke, so well known for his philanthropic and enterprising attempts to introduce civilisation into Borneo, was appointed Governor of Labuan, and at the same time Consul in Borneo.

Hitherto the advantage derived from the formation of this settlement has not been so great as was anticipated; partly, as it appears, because piracy still prevails on the coast of Borneo, enough to check the native trade, partly because the coal which exists in the Island, and which afforded one of the principal reasons for taking possession of it, has not yet been worked to the extent which was expected; the company, to which a portion of the coal-field was let, not having hitherto carried on its operations with sufficient energy to supply even the present demand. This last obstacle to the progress of the Colony will probably be removed, either by the transfer of the business of the Company into different hands, or by other persons obtaining a lease of another portion of the coal-field. From the rapidly increasing demand for coals for steam-navigation in the Eastern seas I had hoped that before we left office an application for another part of the coal-field, which is still in the hands of the Crown, might have been made; but none had then been received; it is not, however, probable that so favourable an opening for enterprise will long be neglected. There appears to be some reason to believe that a commercial intercourse between Labuan and Borneo is at length beginning, which may by degrees be extended.

Naval and Military.

The Topaze, 28, screw frigate, has been commissioned by Captain C. J. Rowley to replace the Iron Duke as coastguard ship at Kingstown, the officers and crew being transferred to that ship. The Iron Duke will proceed to Birkenhead to be fitted with new boilers by Messrs. Laird, and will be refitted for service as flag-ship in China, replacing the Audacious.

The Condor, 3, composite gun vessel, has been commissioned by Commander E. F. Day for the Mediterranean. The Condor is to be fitted with torpedo gear, and to proceed, as soon as practicable, with her sister ship the Flamingo, to the Danube, there to be under the orders of the British Ambassadors at the Courts of Austria and the Porte for the purpose of protecting English interests in that river and the numerous ports thereon.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund J. Commerell, V.C., K.C.B., has been nominated as junior flag-officer of the Mediterranean fleet. Admiral Commerell will hoist his flag in the Agincourt, commissioned at Devonport by Captain Richard Wells. Mr. Henry C. W. Gibson, paymaster, R.N., will accompany the Admiral as secretary, and Lieutenant A. F. Gresley as flag-lieutenant.

Captain B. D'U. Musgrave, 13th Light Infantry, has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to Sir A. Musgrave, K.C.M.G., Governor of Jamaica. He was appointed Ensign in 1856, became Captain 1870, and served with the 87th Fusiliers throughout the Indian mutiny campaign of 1857-58.

Sir W. C. F. Robinson, K.C.M.G., has nominated Lieutenant St. J. St. G. Ord, Royal Artillery, to proceed with him to the Straits Settlements as Aide-de-camp.

The Committee to which the stability of the Inflexible has been referred by order of Parliament consists of Admiral Sir J. Hope, Mr. G. Randall, Mr. Froude, and Dr. Woolley.

The command of the 1st Life Guards is falling vacant, and is to be given to Major and Brevet Colonel J. Keith Fraser.

Intelligence has been received at the Admiralty, that Mr. Ward Hunt is very much better.

The preliminary experiments on the wreck of the Vanguard have resulted very satisfactorily. A diver, after one or two attempts, has reached the deck of the vessel, and remained a considerable time below. His report was that the vessel lay almost upright, very little canted to one side, and not at all sanded. She is what is technically called "pooled," or, in other words, whilst she has made a dock, as it were, for herself in the sand, the bank is some distance from her, and she lies on hard ground, divided from the bank outside by water. The diver also followed a rope, which had been previously caught, and found it had passed right under the vessel as far from the stern as the foremast. It would seem, therefore, that the position of the ship is most favourable for lifting by the means prepared by Captain Coppin, viz., huge steel wire ropes passed under her, and made fast to immense pontoons. Captain Coppin, finding the vessel so favourably placed, intends to begin at once to get the lifting ropes placed under her, so as to be ready for making the lift as soon as the pontoons are completed. These will be constructed on the Clyde, and each will have a lifting power of over 3,000 tons.

Her Majesty's ship Aboukir was recently, during a severe thunderstorm, struck by a tremendous flash of lightning, which first fell on the mizengaff, and sent it flying in all directions. It then passed by the peak chain into the copper conductor, and thence to the sea. Where there was a joint in the conductor it slightly blew out the ends, started the copper nails, and blackened the wood. In many parts of the topside strips of copper had at various times been nailed over holes and leaks in the decayed wood, and those on the poop formed almost a network. Several of these pieces of copper were started, and the wood scorched by the lightning which was flying about on all sides. From the shore the vessel looked as if she had caught fire, and a cloud of smoke was seen to hang about the after part of the ship for some seconds after the flash.

The Prince of Wales has presented his portrait, with autograph, to Captain Wilson and Commander Lord Charles Beresford, of the Thunderer, and to the Ward-room, Engineers' mess, and Warrant Officers' mess, of the same ship, as a memorial of the visit which his Royal Highness paid to the ship at Portsmouth previous to its joining the cruise of the Channel Squadron.

The Artillery Distinguished Service Reward, vacant by the appointment of Lieutenant-General W. H. Askwith to Colonel-Commandant, has been given to Major-General F. A. Campbell, Director-General of Artillery and Stores. General Campbell, joined the Army in 1836, and became Major-General 1876.

After long delays and much consultation by the Heavy Gun Committee, the Spithead forts are now in course of receiving their armaments. The employment of hydraulic gear has rendered it possible to mount the forts with 38-ton 12½-inch muzzle-loader guns.

With the view of adding to the efficiency of the mercantile training ships as recruiting centres for the navy and naval reserves, the Government has decided to supply all training ships for boys with guns, rifles, and single sticks, free of charge.

Detachments of time-expired non-commissioned officers and men, and invalid troops belonging to the Royal Artillery and the 28th Regiment, have arrived in the Thames, from Hong Kong, on board Holt's steamer Deucalion.

The troop-ship Tamar arrived at Malta on the 9th inst., from Hong Kong, having on board Captain T. E. Smith, four other officers, and 659 soldiers. She proceeded for England on the 13th inst.

DEATH OF THE EMIR of KASHGAR.—The Berlin correspondent of The Times reports that Yakoob Beg of Kashgar is dead. Before his death, which occurred at Kurla, after a short illness, he appointed Hakim Khan Tura his successor, expressly disinheriting his sons. Hakim Khan declining to accept the gift, Kuli Beg, the eldest son of the deceased, ascended the throne. Chinese troops are reported to be slowly advancing into Kashgar.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—The appointments have been gazetted of Cornelius Hendericksen Kortright, Esq., C.M.G., late Governor of the West Africa Settlements, to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of British Guiana, of Mr. Lewis Joel, now British Consul at Rosario, to be Consul at Brindisi, and of Mr. Luis Quintas y Seoane as Consul-General in London for the Republic of Bolivia.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

CHINA is going through another severe trial. In addition to the recent famine in the north, and the floods in the south, the crops in the Chinkiang Province are now threatened with being destroyed by locusts. A correspondent at Chinkiang writes that the surrounding country is literally black in places with young locusts, which have already done considerable damage to the spring crops, although they are so nearly ripe; and unless these pests migrate when they attain their full growth, it seems probable that there will be a total failure of the autumn crops in this district. From Canton there is little news concerning the floods in addition to what was brought by the last mail; but the disaster —as detailed by our correspondent—has evidently been of the most distressing character. Altogether, it is clear that China is at the present time going through an unprecedented ordeal, which will undoubtedly be a severe strain both to the people at large and to the Government. It is now reported that Ting Footai will not, as was before stated, be appointed to the northern Provinces, but will return to Formosa to carry out the schemes of improvement which he has inaugurated in that island. His departure thence was much regretted, as it was said that he was so much feared as to be able to put an almost entire end to squeezing and other irregularities. Much fighting is reported to be going on against the Aborigines in the South of Formosa, the Chinese still having great difficulty in holding their own against them. The Namoi authorities have obtained a powerful steam dredging-machine from France. It is said to be doing effective service in deepening the water in the vicinity of the Arsenal. It may be hoped this good precedent will be followed at Shanghai, and an end be put to the question which has so long occupied the thought of the Municipal Council with respect to the devotion of a portion of the tonnage dues to preserving the river Wongpoo. Complaints are made of steamers from Hankow having to stop needlessly at Wuhu for Customs purposes. The Hankow correspondents, as usual, wax facetious on the doings of the little army of Chaaszes who invaded them at the opening of the tea season. Very deep regret is expressed at Chefoo at the death of Dr. Carmichael.

H.E. Mr. Pope Hennessy has been sworn in as Governor of Hong Kong. Some apprehensions are expressed as to the policy he may adopt in regard to local matters. The system of competitive examination for Government appointments has been introduced, and seems to be hailed with much delight as a means of giving employment to deserving young men, and of obtaining the best talent available for the benefit of the Government. The Hong Kong Christian Association have held their annual meeting. On a motion in the Admiralty Court, the sale of the ship Rosina has been ordered.

The news from Japan brought by the present mail steamer has been anticipated via America.

WE publish in our to-day's issue the report of the captain of the Meikong, and also a letter from one of the passengers on board. While in fairness inserting the latter, we cannot but consider that the captain's statement is a straightforward and explicit statement; and explains many of the difficulties in the situation which were evidently not apparent to the passengers, the most important being the danger to the boats from the currents, and the amount of courage and care which were consequently necessary in order to effect a landing. We learn that the loss of the steamer was at once accepted by the insurance offices, and that at the request of some of the underwriters here the Indian Government despatched a gunboat from Aden to the scene, with a view to ascertaining the chances of salvage.

MR. LOWTHER, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies, has stated, in reply to Sir CHARLES DILKE, that the apportionment of the expense of the Perak Campaign has not yet been adjusted, and he was unable to state what amount would fall on the Home Government.

SILK SPECULATION.

THE unfortunate results of the Silk speculations of last August, which have had the effect of almost for a time paralysing the silk market, and have taken all buoyancy and spirit out of the trade for months past, have drawn attention to the system upon which purchases and sales are conducted, and the extraordinary facilities which are offered to irresponsible persons to enter upon venturesome transactions. The matter has been the subject of some comment among the trade themselves; and it may be hoped that a reform in the present system will be induced. Should this end be attained, the untoward times through which we are at present passing will prove not to have been an evil without at least some mitigating good. In most branches of trade it is naturally assumed, when a man purchases goods to be paid for and taken delivery of at a certain date, that he intends, when the "prompt" thus falls due, to pay for them, and to take possession of the warrants representing them. People outside the silk trade—indeed, perhaps, some who are in it, but are not acquainted with the exact nature of the transactions between the brokers and the dealers—will probably be "surprised to hear" that precisely the opposite of this rule is that upon which the trade act. One of the large brokers actually endorses a note on some of his invoices to the effect that 15 per cent. deposit is to be paid by the purchaser on the day of prompt on all bales of which delivery is not taken—thus presuming not that he will but that he will not take delivery of the goods which he has bought. Upon the purchase being effected no deposit whatever is demanded; so that it is open to a buyer to speculate for a rise without actually disbursing a single penny before prompt day. The results of this system hardly need to be pointed out. They are those which are felt and complained of in all directions at the present time—over-speculation and demoralisation of the trade. Within the last few years numbers of failures among the dealers have taken place, of which nothing has been heard by the outside world. There have been private settlements, in which the business to be transacted by the creditors in meeting assembled has consisted mainly in arranging for the distribution of the proceeds of office desks and furniture, after deducting the amounts due for rent and clerks' wages—and this extreme simplicity in the nature of the estates to be administered has led generally to the creditors "letting the thing go," and refraining from throwing good money after bad. Such losses, however, have fallen very heavily upon the trade, and the time has come when it is considered advisable that something should, if possible, be done to prevent their recurrence. The silk brokers, as most of our readers are aware, do not declare their principals to the merchants, and, in fact, accept the risk of their failure themselves, so that importers are not directly affected by this system; but all are more or less concerned in an end being put to a mode of business which gives so much power to affect the market, to irresponsible speculators. The brokers will assuredly make a mistake if they allow this to continue, and should combine once for all to put it down, especially as the remedy is of so simple a character that it could be applied almost in a day. The deposit asked for when the prompt falls due should be demanded when the sale is effected, as is ordinarily done in all other trades. No single argument of any substantial weight can be found against this, as it is obviously only those who are not solid traders who will object to paying a 10 or 15 per cent. deposit at the time when the sale is effected. Opinion on this point is very strong among a large section of the silk brokers, and it is to be hoped that the subject will be sufficiently ventilated to bring about the reform which is required. It isclearly a grave error to permit competition to go to such lengths that all considerations of ordinary prudence are lost sight of, and to allow what might be a good and a sound trade to become reduced to the level of a game of speculation, differing but little from that of the Stock Exchange.

THE APPEAL CASE OF BENNECKE, SOUCHAY AND CO. v. WHITTALL AND OTHERS.

SOME feeling of disappointment will probably be experienced by those interested in the above case on the perusal of the judgment delivered by Sir R. COLLIER, which we print in extenso in our present issue. It was expected that some points of very great importance, and which had been elaborately and learnedly argued both in the original case and upon appeal, would be decided by it; but it turns out to be based entirely upon a technicality. It was to the effect that the requirements of Section 163 of the Hong Kong Ordinance not having been complied with, the deed for the benefit of the creditors under which the trustees of HEARD and Co. claimed was only receivable in evidence under Section 165 of the same ordinance, and that the trustees had not the rights of an assignee in bankruptcy, Section 167 of the ordinance only applying to deeds registered under Section 163. The bearing of this judgment will be understood upon its being borne in mind that the object of the original suit in Hong Kong was to obtain a decree setting aside certain mortgages which had been made by HEARD and Co. to BENNECKE, SOUCHAY and Co. upon the ground that they amounted to a fraudulent preference; and in a commercial point of view the interest of the case centred upon this point. Some technical considerations, however, were also involved —among others that upon which the case has been decided, namely, whether the trustees of HEARD'S estate were entitled to impeach the mortgages as assignees in bankruptcy in accordance with a provision to that effect in the Hong Kong Local Bankruptcy Ordinance; in other words, whether the Trustees had a locus standi to bring the case at all. Upon this point the judgment of Sir R. COLLIER is against the trustees, and the decision therefore goes to the length of pronouncing the whole of the proceedings in the Hong Kong Court as inoperative, the trustees not being entitled to claim the decree which was sought by that action. Had the judgment stopped here, it would have been somewhat unsatisfactory, as it would have left the main question, namely, whether there had been any fraudulent preference in granting the mortgages to BENNECKE, SOUCHAY and Co., untouched. But it will be seen that Sir R. COLLIER in the judgment states that their Lordships by no means affirm the finding of the Court below as to fraudulent preference. It may from this be inferred that their Lordships' judgment on this point would have been also in favour of the appellants had the appeal been continued. Nor were there wanting reasons for this. A fraudulent preference consists of paying money or assigning property voluntarily and in contemplation of bankruptcy. Both these essentials must be clearly established, and in the present case one at least of them, the first, was clearly not made out. The mortgage deeds were granted in pursuance of the obligation which had been contracted before it became evident that bankruptcy was inevitable, and in fact the money had been lent on express directions to be used in a particular manner and secured in the meantime. No doubt the manner in which the late firm of AUGUSTINE HEARD and Co. drove matters to extremes and disregarded the interests of their creditors is to be much deprecated, and it is impossible not to sympathise to some extent with the creditors who find that the bulk of the assets have been mortgaged, and the possible dividends reduced to the smallest. But, on the other hand, there can be no question that Messrs. BENNECKE, SOUCHAY and Co. acted in the matter entirely bonâ fide, and it would have been very hard upon them if, through no fault of their own, they had been compelled to give up the securities which had from the first been promised to them for advances which they made while there was still a chance of the firm beng kept afloat.

THE JAPAN INSURRECTION.

THE latest telegrams which have been received from Japan, combined with the details in the mail papers, confirm the view which we some time back placed before our readers, to the effect that the extent of the difficulty with which the Government was called upon to cope had been considerably under-estimated in official quarters. There still appears to be no reason to doubt that the Government will ultimately prove strong enough to put down the rebellion completely; but it is evident that the rising is likely to be of a troublesome character for some time to come, and that the country must suffer severely from a lagging and wide-spread conflict. That affairs should have assumed this shape is much to be regretted, and it is to be hoped that the Japanese Government will make every effort to suppress the rebellion as early as possible. This end will be most likely to be attained by aiming at some decisive action, and so bringing matters to a climax. At present, affairs seem to have drifted into a very unsatisfactory state, the Rebel forces being spread in a variety of directions. Small actions against them cannot be of any advantage, and, in fact, tend rather to perpetuate ill feeling; and the aim of the Imperialists should be, if possible, to bring matters to some decisive issue. The continuance of the civil war cannot fail to be detrimental to the country in every way, and it is to be much regretted as likely to retard the career of progress on which Japan has entered; while the expenses which have to be met will fall heavily upon the Exchequer. Against this loss, the Government will fortunately be able, when the rebellion is at an end, to place considerable savings from forfeiture of amounts which they agreed to pay in annual pensions, in lieu of the Daimio's independent revenues, as well as extensive savings through the discharge of foreign employés—a step which, whatever may be considered as to its wisdom, has certainly been conducive to economy—but still the cost of the civil war must press heavily. We cannot but think, as events have turned out, that a little too much confidence has been expressed at head-quarters from the first regarding the rebellion, and that it is to be regretted that the Japanese Government did not rely more upon the force of the truth instead of endeavouring, partly by suppressing facts and partly by giving a couleur de rose aspect to others, to make it appear that the matter was much less serious than it has actually proved, or than there must have been good reason to fear long ago would be the case. The feeling of disappointment which must now be engendered cannot fail to be productive of much more injury to the prestige and credit of Japan than could possibly have been produced by a plain statement of the truth from the first.

Literature, Science, &c.

There are not many new works of importance at present noticed as forthcoming; and, as usual at this time of year, travels and guide books take a leading place. The Autobiographical Recollections of Sir John Bowring, which comprise anecdotes of all kinds of celebrities, from King Louis Philippe and Mrs. Opie to Lamartine and Thomas Hood, the poet, is looked for with interest. The magazines for the present month are supported with able contributions, and keep well up to the standard. In Fraser's Magazine will be found one of the first demurrers to the identity of the "Schliemannic Ilium" with that of Homer, by Mr. William Simpson, who professes to have visited the scene of the doctor's explorations with a predisposition to prefer the Hissarlik to the Bounarbashi site, but to have been led, by personal inspection, to the conviction that in the excavation where Dr. Schliemann considers that he has discovered the Scaean Gate, Priam's Palace, and the Great Tower of Ilium, the vestiges of walls, of poor, small, and rude masonry, if of any masonry at all, are not compatible with the Cyclopean structures we might have expected; that "the unhewn stones joined with earth," which correctly in "Troy and its Remains," describe the Gate which Schliemann identifies with the Scaean, do not tally with the masonry of the supposed palace, which is constructed of "earth with stones thrown and not built in," according to Mr. Simpson; and that the Palace and Gate cannot have been contemporaneous, as the former, says our objector, has been evidently built across the inner side of the latter.

In the Fortnightly Review, among political articles many and able, that by Emile de Laveleye on "British Interests in the Present Crisis" exacts perusal. He pays Great Britain the compliment of believing that, could she annex all Europe, she of European nations is the ablest and fittest for the task; but at the same time rejects for her the upholding of Turkey as a hopeless task, and advises with regard to it the constitution of independent Christian federated States.—In Blackwood this month among the best papers are the notes of "A Staff Officer on the Egyptian Campaign in Abyssinia;" and "English Diplomacy," by, it would seem, one of the craft, and one who does not disguise its failings, though he strongly objects to its being transformed into a paid service.—In the Cornhill Prof. A. W. Ward, of Owens College, Manchester, has a lively, interesting, and very scholarly lecture on a visit to Delphi, which illustrates our current knowledge from the classics with the results of recent personal observation. Another curious paper is on Japanese Miniature Odes, the translations of which have, many of them, a singularly English vein of thought.

The Geographical Magazine for this month contains a very valuable paper on the Himalayan system, in which it is considered in relation to the structure of the Asiatic Continent; and next as a segment of a vast girdle of mountains which rises on three sides, from the Indian Pacific and Arctic Oceans respectively, the circuit being completed on the fourth side from the plain of the Caspian. Thus the Himalayan portion of the girdle is that which ascends from India and the Indian Ocean, while from the Pacific and the rolling plains of China rise in unbroken continuity with the Himalayan portion those rugged mountains the culminating ranges of which may take a general name from the Yunling, which stretches south to the Hwang Ho River, and from the Inshan between the Hwang Ho and the Amoor.

The Bulletin de la Societé de Geographie for June contains, among other matter, an account of the Transvaal Republic, which will be read with special interest at the present time. The climate is described as very salubrious, the temperature ranging between 59 and 73 degrees Fahrenheit during the year.

In Petermann's Mittheilungen, Dr. Paul Gussfeldt begins a description of the journey which he made in 1876 with Dr. Schweinfurth from Beni Suêf on the Nile across the Arabian desert to the convents of St. Antonius and St. Paul, and promises the results of his astronomical, magnetic, and barometric observations. Dr. Carl E. Jung also begins a valuable systematic account of the geography of South Australia.

The United States' Naval Observatory has at length issued (Washington: Government Printing Office), in a handsome quarto volume profusely illustrated, the "Narrative of the North Polar Expedition of the U. S. ship Polaris. The work has been edited, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, by the late Rear-Admiral C. H. Davis, U.S.N.

The Annual Report of the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg has been published, showing an expenditure for the year 1876 of about £13,550. Of this sum about £2,700 have been laid out on the purchase of books. During the past year the number of works added to the Library has been 19,854, forming 25,415 volumes. The number of readers has been 159,508, who have consulted as many as 337,536 volumes. The increase of books, however, has latterly become so great as to demand an extension of the Library.

A valuable description of the outskirts of the little-known kingdom of Atyeh, commonly but erroneously named Atchin, in the north-west of Sumatra, towards which attention has been frequently drawn in recent years by the Dutch expeditions against it, appears in the second part of the second volume of the Journal of the Geographical Society of Amsterdam, from the pen of Herr J. C. R. Westpalm. Atyeh lies between 95° 13′ and 98° 17′ E. long of Gr., and between 2° 48′ and 5° 40′ N. lat.; but as the accompanying map indicates, the greater part of the interior country is still utterly unknown.

M. Léouzon-le-Duc has published an account of the French MSS. in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg, which were acquired after the fall of the Bastille and the sack of the Abbey of Saint-Germain-des-Prés in 1789, by a Russian agent, named Dubrowski, and by him sold to the Emperor Alexander I. in 1807. The Russians think very highly of this collection, and were so fearful of its falling into the hands of the French on their invasion of Russia in 1812, that it was packed up in boxes ready to be sent off to the extreme end of the Government of Olonetz, should anything disastrous occur at St. Petersburg. Among the documents a great many relate to the prisoners from time to time shut up in the Bastille.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—APPEAL CASE.

BENECKE, SOUCHAY, AND CO. (APPELLANTS) V. WHITTALL AND OTHERS, TRUSTEES OF THE ESTATE OF AUGUSTINE HEARD AND CO. (RESPONDENTS).

This was an appeal against a decree of the Supreme Court at Hong Kong, dated Feb. 16, 1876, and made in a suit in which the above-named appellants were defendants. The suit was instituted by the trustees of Augustine Heard and Co. (the respondents), in virtue of a deed of assignment expressed to be made and entered into by and between the members of the firm of Augustine Heard and Co. and their creditors, dated the 19th April, 1875, and under provisions of the Hong Kong Bankruptcy Ordinance of 1864, and the object of the suit was to have certain mortgages, eight in number, given to the appellants (Benecke and Co.) by Augustine Heard and Co. set aside for the benefit of the creditors under the trust deed. The decree of the Supreme Court in Hong Kong set aside the mortgages given to the appellants, and against this judgment the present appeal was instituted.

This is an action brought by trustees appointed under the provisions of a deed of the 19th of April, 1865, executed by the firm of Augustine Heard and Company, carrying on business in Hong Kong, as well as in other places. The plaintiffs sue for the purpose of setting aside certain conveyances of real property to the defendants, merchants in London, on the ground that they were given by way of fraudulent preference.

The first question raised by the defendants, appellants, is whether the plaintiffs have the right to maintain a suit on this ground; and inasmuch as this question, if disposed of in favour of the appellants, decides the case, their Lordships have thought it desirable to hear the argument upon it in the first instance.

This question depends upon the construction of an ordinance of Hong Kong in 1864 on the subject of bankruptcy, which was passed three years after the well known Bankruptcy Act in this country of 1861, and in a great measure, indeed in a great number of clauses, almost totidem verbis, follows that enactment.

The material sections of that ordinance for the present purpose are, first, section 163. This comes under the head of "Trust deeds for the benefit of creditors," and enacts as follows:—"Every deed or instrument made or entered into between a debtor and his creditors, or any of them, as trustees for the rest, or a trustee on their behalf, relating to the debts or the liabilities of the debtor, and his release therefrom, or the distribution, inspection, management, and winding up of his estate, or any of such matters, shall be as valid and effectual and binding on all the creditors of such debtor as if they were parties to and had duly executed the same, provided the following conditions be observed." Then come several conditions. The first of them is that the deed shall be a conveyance of the estate of the debtor, except a small portion; the next, that a majority in number representing three fourths in value of the creditors shall in writing assent to or approve of such deed. Then come provisions relating to the execution of the trust deed. Then follows a further provision in these terms:—"Within twenty-eight days from the day of the execution of such deed or instrument by the debtor, the same shall be produced and left at the office of the Registrar for the purpose of being registered." The next section, 164, provides for a special form and manner of registration of documents of this kind. It requires that "The date, names, and descriptions of the parties to every such deed or instrument, not including the creditors, together with a short statement of the nature and effect thereof, shall be entered by the Registrar in a book to be kept exclusively for the purposes of such registration. Such entry shall be made within forty-eight hours after the deed shall have been left at the office as aforesaid, and a copy of such entry shall be published in the Hong Kong Government Gazette as soon as reasonably can be done after, but in no case later than ten days from the time of making such entry."

It is clear that the deed in this case does not fall under the provisions of these sections, inasmuch as it was not proved to have received the requisite assent of creditors. But it was contended, and this in effect was the ruling of the Court below, that this deed being one within the provisions of Section 165 fell within those of Section 167, and therefore operated to give the plaintiffs all the rights of action which would have accrued to assignees in bankruptcy. It will be necessary to examine both these sections. Section 165 is in these terms :—"Every deed, instrument, or agreement whatsoever," and it may be observed that the term "agreement" is here inserted, which is not to be found in the previous clause, "made and executed, by which a debtor not being a bankrupt conveys, or covenants or agrees to convey, his estate and effects, except such portion thereof as aforesaid for the benefit of his creditors." It may be further observed that this clause contemplates not only a deed conveying the bankrupt's estate, but an agreement to convey it ; the clause proceeds, "or makes any arrangement or agreement with his creditors, or any person on their behalf, for the distribution, inspection, conduct, management, or winding up of his affairs or estate, or the release or discharge of such debtor from his debts or liabilities, shall, within twenty-eight days from and after the execution thereof by such debtor, or within such further time as the Court shall allow, be registered in the Court ; and in default thereof shall not be received in evidence."

This section, although it may possibly include deeds described in the former, embraces a large class of deeds of a very different character, and extends to "agreements" of several kinds. It is wide enough to comprise almost any written agreement, whether under seal or not, which the debtor may execute even without the consent of any of his creditors, appointing an inspector or trustee with the view of winding up or managing his affairs, although it does not convey the whole or any part of his estate, or effect a "cessio bonorum." Section 166 is to this effect :—"Every such deed, on being so registered as aforesaid, shall have a memorandum thereof written on the face of such deed, stating the day and the hour of the day at which the same was brought into the office of the registrar for registration." Their Lordships do not think it necessary to determine whether this last clause refers to the last class of deeds or to the class of deeds before mentioned, or to both. The expression "deed," if taken literally, would not apply to a mere agreement in writing not under seal. But the material question turns on the construction of the 167th section. That section is to this effect :—From and after the registration of every such deed or instrument in manner aforesaid, the debtor and creditors, and trustees parties to such deed, or who have assented thereto, or are bound thereby, shall," &c. This description appears to be applicable to the different classes of persons who are specified in section 163, that is to say, the debtor, the creditors, the trustees, and those who without having assented to the deed are bound thereby ; certainly the latter expression would not apply to deeds under clause 165. Then it proceeds,—"shall in all matters relating to the estate and effects of such debtor be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and shall respectively have the benefit of and be liable to all the provisions of this ordinance in the same or like manner as if the debtor had been adjudged bankrupt, and the creditors had proved, and the trustees had been appointed creditors' assignees under such bankruptcy." In the course of the argument it has been admitted that the debtor under such a deed as the present is not entitled to the benefit of all the provisions in the ordinance, and that he cannot avail himself of the two contained in sections 168 and 169. The section proceeds, "And the existing or future trustees of any such deed or instrument, and the creditors under the same, shall, as between themselves respectively, and as between themselves and the debtor, and against third persons, have the same powers, rights, and remedies with respect to the debtor, and his estate and effects, and the collection and recovery of the same, as are possessed or may be used or exercised by assignees or creditors with respect to the bankrupt, or his acts, estate, or effects in bankruptcy."

It appears to their Lordships difficult to suppose that the Legislature could have intended to give this effect to every deed executed under the 165th clause. As before pointed out, a deed might be executed and registered under that clause, which would not pass the estate of the debtor to his trustees. If so, how could they have, with respect to that estate, all the right to be exercised by assignees in bankruptcy? Further, it appears improbable that the Legislature should have intended that a mere deed, or a mere writing without deed, whereby a debtor has conveyed, or has agreed to convey, any portion of his estate to any person under the name of an inspector or otherwise, without the consent of a single creditor, should have the effect of clothing that person with all the rights of assignees in bankruptcy. The difficulty of so construing this clause is very much increased by the two clauses which follow it. The next is section 168, which is to this effect : "After the copy of the entry made by the Registrar as aforesaid shall have been published in the Hong Kong Government Gazette, no execution or other process against the debtor's property in respect of any debt, and no process against his person in respect of any debt, other than such process by writ or warrant as may be had against a debtor about to depart out of the colony, shall be available to any creditor or claimant without leave of the Court, and a certificate of the filing and registration of such deed under the hand of the Registrar, and the seal of the Court, shall be available to the debtor for all purposes as a protection in bankruptcy." It has been admitted that this section cannot apply, partly because it refers to an entry in the Hong Kong Government Gazette, which would apply only to instruments described in section 163, and, further, because it could not have been intended that by merely executing such a deed as has been spoken of under section 165 the debtor should be able to protect his property from process. The next section (169) is as follows :—"In case any petition shall be presented for an adjudication against a debtor after his execution of such deed or instrument, as is herein-before described, and pending the time allowed for the registration of such deed or instrument, all proceedings under such petition may be stayed if the Court shall think fit, and in case such deed or instrument shall be duly registered as aforesaid, the petition shall be dismissed." It has been admitted that the words "deed or instrument" here must be narrowed in their construction to deeds or instruments under section 163 ; and that it is impossible to suppose that this section could apply to deeds under section 165. But if that be so, if these two sections admittedly do not so apply,—as it is clear they cannot apply,—it seems extremely difficult to regard the section immediately before them as applying. Their Lordships are disposed to read these three sections together, to treat sections 168 and 169 as supplementary to section 167, and to hold them all as applying only to deeds coming within the provisions of section 163. Section 165 may be described as an isolated section containing an isolated provision, doubtless a very valuable one, to the effect that if a debtor chooses to execute any deed or agreement relating to the management of his property, or the liquidation of his debts, or his release from liability, he shall not keep it secret, but shall register it for the information of persons whom it shall concern, under the penalty of its not being admissible in evidence unless he does register it.

Such being the view which their Lordships would have been disposed to take of this ordinance if there had been no authority on the subject, they think it right now to refer to some of the cases decided upon the construction of the Act of 1861, the clauses of which, as before observed, are almost identical, in reference to the subject matter now under discussion, with the clauses in the Ordinance of Hong Kong.

The first case to be referred to is the case of Exparte Morgan (1. De Gex, Jones, and Smith, p. 288), which was decided by Lord Westbury, than whom, it will be admitted, no man was more competent to construe the Bankruptcy Act of 1861. The part of the case material to the present inquiry is correctly stated in the first part of the marginal note :—"The registration of trust deeds under the 192nd and under the 194th sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, although in practice performed by the same officer, are distinct, and have different operations ; and where, for the want of the papers required by the orders, registration under the former section had been refused by the officer, and the applicant had registered the deed under the 194th section : Held, that the registration did not prevent the deed, which was an assignment of all the debtor's property, from being an act of bankruptcy." It should be here observed that the 192nd, 193rd, and 194th sections of the Act of 1861 correspond respectively with the 163rd, 164th, and 165th sections of the Bankruptcy Ordinance of Hong Kong. In the course of his judgment Lord Westbury observes :—"The protection intended by the statute to be given to a deed under the 192nd section was a protection extending only to such deeds as should be duly registered in the manner and form required by that section and the 193rd, which is consequent thereon. The immediate question which I have to determine is, whether the deed before me is a deed which has been so registered." Then he says :—"To determine that question it is necessary to observe, that in addition to the registration prescribed by the 192nd and 193rd sections, it appeared to the Legislature expedient to require another form of registration for deeds which did not exactly comply with the requirements of the 192nd section, and accordingly the 194th section gives the power and imposes the obligation of registering any deed of composition or deed for the benefit of crediters, which has not been registered under the 192nd section in the Court of Bankruptcy : and the words are material. A deed under the 192nd section is to be registered by the deed being brought into the office of the Chief Registrar, and the solemnities attending its registration are clearly defined. A deed under the 194th section is directed to be registered simply in the Court of Bankruptcy. For convenience sake, by a general order, I have given both forms of registration to the same officer and to the same office ; but the registration under the one section is very different from the registration under the other section. The 194th section was introduced with a double view. First, because it was apprehended that many deeds of composition might still be made which would not be brought under the 192nd section, and which might have an injurious effect by reason of their being secret deeds of arrangement. The obligation, therefore, was imposed upon all persons, parties to such a deed, of bringing it in to be registered within twenty-eight days after its approval in the Court of Bankruptcy, and a penalty is attached in case of default, that the deed shall not be receivable in evidence. Another object of the enactment was this—it was felt that possibly many a deed of composition might not be perfected in the manner required by the 192nd section within the twenty-eight days, and yet that all the creditors might be willing to accede to such a deed ; and, therefore, power was given to register, under the 194th section, a deed which did not exactly comply with the requirements of the 192nd section." Then he goes on to say :—"These two forms of registration, therefore, being very different, the consequences of the one form do not attach to the other. The consequence of an observance in every respect of the terms of the 192nd section is that the deed is binding on the minority of the creditors who do not execute or assent to it. No such consequence is attached to registration under the 194th section." And accordingly he held that the conveyance there, being a conveyance of all the debtor's property, and not being registered under the 192nd and 193rd sections, was an act of bankruptcy.

It may be desirable to refer next to the case of Symons v. George (33 Law Journal (new series), Exch. 231). Their Lordships cannot help thinking that the marginal note of that case, to which the learned Judges in Hong Kong appear to have referred, may somewhat have misled them. The marginal note is to this effect : "A trust deed in the form given in Schedule D. of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and registered, &c., according to section 192, though not assented to by the prescribed majority of creditors, is by virtue of the 194th and 197th sections,"—the 197th section corresponding to the 167th section in the ordinance—"subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy." It should be observed, however, that the real point decided in this case was no more than this—that the debtor having conveyed to certain trustees his effects and property, to be administered for the benefit of his creditors as if in bankruptcy, and that property having been delivered in pursuance of the deed of conveyance, it was held that the operation of the deed at Common Law was to pass the property to the trustees, although, incidentally, no doubt, an opinion such as that indicated in the marginal note is expressed. It was upon the same ratio decidendi that the decision was affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber. It should be observed that the case which has been before quoted, decided by Lord Westbury, was not drawn to the attention of the Court.

In the subsequent case of Pearson v. Pearson (1 Law Reports, Exchequer, 310) the Court of Exchequer had their attention more pointedly called to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, and also to the decision of Lord Westbury. It was there held that the legal right to sue in respect of debts and choses in action of the debtor did not pass to his trustees under a deed which fell within the provisions of section 194, and that section 197 did not apply to such a deed so as to give to the trustees appointed under it the rights to sue of assignees in bankruptcy. That is the very point to be determined in this case. If trustees have not by virtue of the operation of ss. 194 and 197 of the English Act (corresponding to ss. 165 and 167 of the Ordinance) the power to sue in respect of a chose in action, it is because they have not the rights of assignees in bankruptcy, and if so, it follows they have not the power of assignees in bankruptcy to sue in respect of a fraudulent preference. This case was dealt with by the same Judges, with Baron Channell in addition, who had decided the case of Symons v. George, and they came to the conclusion, expressed by Baron Bramwell, that the provisions of section 197 apply only to deeds entered into in conformity with the provisions of section 192. Their Lordships cannot help observing that the learned Chief Justice, when speaking of what he calls the dicta of the judges in this case, and observing that he could not explain them, appears not to have appreciated the full force and effect of the case itself as a clear decision of the very point now in question.

The only other case to be noticed is a case before Vice-Chancellor Bacon, of Exparte Atkinson (9 L. R., Eq., 736), in which, undoubtedly, the Vice-Chancellor does not seem to have accepted in its full breadth the view of the Court of Exchequer, that section 197 did not apply to deeds under section 194. It is to be observed, however, that he does not question the decision in Pearson v. Pearson. He says:—"With most sincere deference therefore to the learned Judges by whom that case was decided, and not presuming to question their decision upon the subject to which it applies, I must say that it seems to me to be no authority for the proposition that because a deed of assignment registered under section 194 does not enable the assignee to sue in his own name for a chose in action which was the property of the assignee before the deed, therefore the 197th section has no application to such a deed, and that all the power and jurisdiction which by the 197th section is given to the Court of Bankruptcy over every such deed after registration is wholly ousted." The effect of this decision would appear to be that, although the learned Vice-Chancellor yields to the authority of the case in the Court of Exchequer so far as it holds that the provisions of section 167 do not apply to deeds under section 194, so as to give to trustees under them the powers of assignees in bankruptcy, still he thinks that there is some jurisdiction in the Court of Bankruptcy to administer the property. What he actually decided was that the judge sitting in bankruptcy had power to summon a person to give evidence as to an alleged transfer of property comprised in such a deed, and to commit the witness for contempt for refusing to be sworn. This decision therefore, whether the Vice-Chancellor be right or wrong in the application which he gave to section 197, as to which their Lordships do not think it necessary to pronounce opinion, is certainly not an overruling of the decision of the Court of Exchequer in Pearson v. Pearson, which governs the present case.

Their Lordships have therefore come to the conclusion, both upon the decided cases and upon the construction of the Ordinance independently of them, that the plaintiffs have not a right to sue for the purpose of setting aside the conveyances on the ground that they are a "fraudulent preference" within the meaning of that term in the Bankruptcy law.

It has, however, been further argued that, even assuming this, the transaction now impeached constituted a fraud so much exceeding that of a mere fraudulent preference that, independently of any assistance from the Bankruptcy laws, the plaintiffs, by their mere appointment as trustees on behalf of the other creditors, would be entitled to sue to set it aside. Upon this subject their Lordships think it enough to observe, first, that this point does not appear to have been argued or taken in the Court below, and that they are always reluctant to decide upon points which have not been submitted to the inferior Court, and, secondly, that there does not appear to them any ground whatever for supposing that there was any greater fraud in this case than a fraudulent preference in contemplation of the Bankruptcy laws, if indeed there was such a fraudulent preference, which, this part of the appeal not having been fully argued, they by no means affirm.

On these grounds their Lordships will think it their duty humbly to advise Her Majesty that the decision under appeal should be reversed. There will be the usual order with respect to costs in the appeal, and the Court below.

THE CITY BANK.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders in the above-named Bank was held on the 17th inst. at the City Terminus Hotel, Mr. J. Atkinson in the chair. The accounts showed that the gross profits for the past six months, including £1,923 brought forward, amounted to £74,633. The directors recommended a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, that £10,000 should be added to the reserve fund (thereby increasing it to £180,000), and that the balance, £3,315, should be carried forward.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, which we publish elsewhere, said that the profits were more than they had had the pleasure of receiving lately. The acceptances were down to £466,720, and as a board they were sorry for the fact, because it was a profitable as well as a safe part of the business, and because it testified in its degree to the decreased volume of business going on between this country and other countries. The sensible increase in the reserve fund was a matter of congratulation, as was also the increased dividend. The branches had given satisfaction, and they were improving; but there was one point in connection with the manager of one of the branches which he felt it his duty to mention, and that was, as most of them were aware, that that gentleman in his private capacity, and in no way in connection with the business of the bank, had interested himself about a case before the Courts of Justice in such a manner as called down upon him a prosecution. No doubt he was not aware that he was laying himself open to the law, but such was the case. If the directors had known what was transpiring at the time they would have given instructions which would have saved him from such a state of things. The directors had received a deputation from more than one section of the shareholders and customers of the bank, and they strongly sympathised with Mr. Gliddon, whose zealous and energetic services since 1863 they were delighted to recognise. The directors had joined in a memorial sent forward to the proper authorities by many respectable persons asking for a remission of the sentence, and in addition to that the board had not ceased to pay Mr. Gliddon's emolument. (Hear, hear.) That was a substantial proof of their sympathy with that gentleman, and he trusted the shareholders would leave the board to deal in this matter as they thought fit.

Mr. Alderman McArthur, M.P., seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted, and the retiring directors and auditors having been unanimously re-elected, the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

THE TEA MARKET.

The subjoined letter signed "G." has appeared in The Times:—

The present position of the tea trade is the natural result of the manner in which the season's buisiness is opened. The great proportion of the buying interest have no establishments at Hankow, but send their inspectors from Shanghai to be domiciled under the roofs of two or three resident commission agents. These inspectors, being sent for the special purpose of buying tea, are naturally disinclined to leave without having operated to a larger or smaller extent. Thus congregated together, they are exposed to the excitement of competition in an unusual degree, and they have not the advantage either of necessary space or of the "light" with which they are familiar. Native dealers make the most of the rivalry thus established in one house. They "bid off" one buyer against another, and in this manner opening rates are secured that probably no one ever intended to sanction. The Hankow market, being the first to open, reacts on Foochow, and not until the whole of the first and part of the second crop teas are disposed of is the fatal result ascertained. Shanghai is in direct telegraphic communication with the rest of the world, but between that port and Hankow there is only an irregular post. At Shanghai the inspectors would have the advantage of their own tea-rooms, and also that of personal consultation with their principals. Six months ago nearly every China merchant recognised the evils of the present system—each one gave his opinion that Shanghai should again be made the northern depot—and yet no one would then enter into an arrangement that was an admitted benefit to all. Everything points to the advantage of this change, but if that cannot be effected then let tea inspectors be permanently quartered at Hankow, thus giving them some chance of exercising a cool judgment. If a leading house in the trade like Messrs. Matheson and Co. would call a meeting of those interested surely some agreement might be arrived at by which business in the future would be placed on a less unsatisfactory footing and the evils of the present system mitigated.

THE TELEGRAPH CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE COMPANY.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of this Company has been held at the offices, Old Broad-street—Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., in the chair.

The Secretary having read the notice calling the meeting, the Chairman said he had very little to say except in regard to the progress of the undertaking, such as what work was in hand and what work they might expect. With regard to the work in hand, a cable was being laid from Marseilles to Bona, 470 knots, and they had also a contract for 389 knots from Bona to Malta. They had arranged with the Western and Brazilian Company to lay 515 knots of new cable, and to do something in the way of repairing the old. As they were also aware from the newspapers, two of their ships were in the Atlantic endeavouring to repair the 1865 and 1866 cables belonging to the Anglo-American Telegraph Company. The first vessel started on the 8th May, and the second on 13th June, and he hoped they would be eventually successful in putting those cables right. They had done some portion of the work, but they had had no information for some little time as to what they were doing in mid-Atlantic. The Indian cable, which was unfinished at the date of the annual meeting, had been finished, and was now working in a very satisfactory manner, and had been entirely paid for by the Eastern Telegraph Company. He concluded by expressing his willingness to answer any questions.

Mr. Abbott said the Chairman had touched very lightly on the works done since the last meeting. Whenever there was any considerable work in hand they heard of the great responsibilities that attached to them. But he reminded the shareholders that the work done since the last yearly meeting amounted to over a million sterling, and the profit from that would no doubt show well in the balance-sheet at the end of the year. If the Chairman could give them any assurance that there was now no heavy liability attached to that work it would be a satisfaction to the shareholders.—The Chairman said he did not know of any great liability. There was one ship to come home, and the cable to be laid might be lost; but he did not think it was likely. The directors would take care to give them a good dividend, and yet not to pay them too much. (Laughter.) They had hitherto acted wisely in so doing—(hear, hear)—and he should always recommend the directors to adopt that course.

Mr. Vears wished to know if they would have the talked-of cable to the Cape of Good Hope.—The Chairman said he was not able to say anything on that subject, as the matter was under discussion by the Government, and therefore it would not be wise to speak about it. They would try to get cables to the Cape and everywhere else.

A vote of thanks concluded the proceedings.

HAMBURG, JULY 17.

The recent decisive defeat of the Russians in Armenia has given great satisfaction to the friends of the Turks, of whom, strange to say, the number seems to be increasing here daily. But the telegrams of yesterday reporting the capture of Nicopolis, with 6,000 prisoners, and of to-day, bringing intelligence of the Russians having actually passed the Balkan, have again much depressed the enjoyment, as well as the hopes, that Russia would make its peace with Turkey as quickly as possible, to avoid the intervention of any of the great European Powers. The uniform opinion in Germany regarding the Oriental war is best manifested by the fact that our Exchange answered the newest telegraphic news with a firm tone, which only was somewhat checked again by a telegram from London, reporting the very friendly bearing to the Turks of one of the London leading papers.

Emperor William has taken his sojourn on the Isle of Mainau, in the Lake of Constance, as I wrote the other day, and from there on the 14th of this month he has paid a visit to the King and the Queen of Wuerttemberg. The Emperor's meeting with the Sovereign of Austria, which is said to take place at Salzburg on the trip to Gastein, is, as I hear, postponed, and those two illustrious persons will have a conference when our German Emperor has left the mentioned Austrian bathing-place on his journey to Berlin. That conference is looked at with curiosity, as the triple-alliance between Russia, Austria, and Germany may be a topic of discussion, and in consequence of it the future politics of Austro-Hungary in the Eastern war.

Of late a rumour has been afloat to the effect that the German squadron at Wilhelmshafen will be fitted out in order to join the other men-of-war in the Mediterranean; but, as I hear, all these sayings are unfounded, and the only ground of them is an order for the Ariadne to be commissioned; this vessel shall leave our coast on the way to East-Asia.

I have to report the death of Bishop Ketteler, of Mentz, one of the best fighters in the so-named "Cultur Battle," and a clerical of pure water; that party is suffering a severe loss by this death. The ex-President Ulysses S. Grant, arrived on the 12th of this month at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, and a great dinner has been held on this occasion, on the 14th there, at which a great part of the upper ten-thousand of that city, and all persons in connection with the American trade, were present. The official speeches mentioned the merits of Mr. Grant as former President of the United States in a very honourable manner.

From good information I learn that the great naval docks at Ellerbeck, near Kiel, which not long ago were visited by English naval officers, will be finished at the end of September. The solemn opening of these really grandious and expensive labours is expected to take place during the month of October, in the presence of the Emperor, the Empress, and the Crown Prince. A deputation of the English and other friendly navies would also be very welcome, and are also expected.

The Hamburg-Sued-American-Dampfschiffahrts-Gesellschaft (Hamb South-American Steamship Company) recently has augmented its fleet by a splendid new steamer, called the Santos, and built by Messrs. C. Mitchell and Co., at Newcastle-on-Tyne; she is 320 feet in length, 36 feet beam, and 28½ feet deep in the hold, carries a dead-weight cargo of 2,400 tons, and has been measured in England at 1,587 T.R. Her engines are built after the compound system (Woolfe), and display a force of 275 indicated horse power, equal to about 1,100 horse-power nominal. In the saloon there is fine room for 58 first cabin passengers besides; these she can take 220 more passengers in the between decks. The Santos will leave here on the 19th inst. for South America, under command of Captain Heidorn, and with a full cargo. It deserves to be acknowledged that notwithstanding the uniform lay down of all business, the company has been able to build the new steamer even without the smallest loan, only from the earnings of its own, and notwithstanding of a dividend of 5½ per cent. paid for the last year.

Dr. Strausberg, the celebrated Railroad King, and well known in England, is still arrested at Moscow; but a rumour goes about, that the sentence, which "condemned" the poor King to "leaving Russia for ever," is soon to be carried out; certainly not too early for the ingenious and industrial man.

The Hamb. American Steam-Packet Company (Hamb. American Packetfahst) appears to have undertaken a great reconstruction of her internal administration; all the several loans are to be converted into one great loan of ten millions, the shares are to be diminished by being bought for destruction by the company itself, and thus hopes are entertained that the company soon will be again able to pay a dividend to its shareholders. Whether the new plan will prove a success or not will have to be waited for, but it is beyond doubt that of late very much energy has been displayed in the management of the company. The two large steamships, Silesiar and Halsatia, both well-known as tidy and splendid New York traders, are to be thoroughly repaired strengthened, and put into activity again, the former on the West Indian, the latter on the New York route.

The Colorado-beetle, whose appearance at the left bank of the Rhine I reported in last letter, keeps the minds of our farmers in great agitation; several reports have already come in from places in Germany, where the destructive insect had been found; but fortunately, hitherto, none of these reports has been either proved or confirmed. But should the fearful beetle really penetrate into Germany, no doubt in some districts great misery would ensue.

At Bremen the steamer Nordenskjold is expected shortly for a trip from Bremen to the mouth of the Zenisei river in Siberia, for the opening of a trade between the said country and Bremen. The steamer, being named after the celebrated Swedish Professor Nordenskjold (who was the first European that ever reached the mouth of the above river), belongs to Gothenburg, is about 158 British register tons, and will be loaded with about 67,000 kilograms of unmanufactured tobacco, and 33,000 kilograms of sugar, which articles are intended to serve as articles for sale to the natives.

The Borkum, lightship, which some weeks ago was taken away from its station for being repaired, has resumed its usual anchorage off the Borkum, and again will be a welcome guide for vessels coming and going. General Grant, the former President of the United States of America, on the 12th inst. arrived at Frankfort (upon Main), and was welcomed at the railway station by the American Consul General, Mr. Lee, besides several members of a committee, established on that purpose. Yesterday the General again left Frankfort for Switzerland, where he intends to stay some time at Luzerne.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The prevailing dull tendency on our Produce Markets is continuing, as the protraction of the war in the East, and the summerly, season as usual, have a checking influence; transactions are therefore made rather only for consumption. The Money Market remains abundant.

COFFEE.—The daily existing consumptive demand was sufficient to lead holders to maintain their reserve. An active business therefore cannot be reported; but in case of transactions full values had to be paid. Quotation for Java quality remains m.1.05 to 1.50 per ½ kilo.

SUGAR.—Of yellow Zanzibar, 1,000 bags changed owners during the past week, and in spite of the duller reports from other markets full prices could be fetched. Quotations are:—Manila brown, clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.23 to 24¼; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 31; do. yellow, m.31.50 to 34; Batavia, brown, m.24½ to 31; do. white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.32 to 35; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.25 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.22 to 32.

RICE.—The following cargoes of raw quality have arrived, viz. 12,000 bags Rangoon, per Deutschland, 9,000 bags Bassein, per J. H. Ramien, and 10,000 bags Arracan, per Thorsvalsden; these three cargoes changed owners already afloat.

TEA is very quiet, and transactions of any importance did not transpire.

COTTON has shown a quiet tendency during the past week, but values are pretty well maintained, with rather more animation at the close. In addition to several lots of American provenience ca. 50,000 kilo. rough South Sea changed owners.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality, m.5.60 to 6.20. Mace, m.4.70 to 4.90 per kilo. Ginger unchanged, Bengal m.27 to 27½; Cochin, m.63 to 85. Cloves are duller, Zanzibar quality m.134 to 135.; Amboina m.165 to 167. Pepper in more demand and higher in value, Singapore m.38to 38¼; Penang m.35 to 35½; White m.68 to 76.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.31 money, to 20.37 account, per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

The apathy in speculative transactions has made further progress during the last week. Neither the enlargement of the British squadron in the Besika Bay, nor rumours about an occupation of Servia by Austria, nor the success of the Turkish army in Asia had any remarkable influence, and all dealers have shown such a want of confidence as can only find its foundation in the prolonged march of the war, and the thus resulting uncertainty of further politics.

SHIPPING.

The trade on the river during the last week has not been so active as the week before, but in regard of the season still sufficient as to allow of no complaint. Of arrivals from the Far East we can report the Nouveau Nomade, Guere, from Malden Island; Sumatra, Kearn, from Akyab; Daniel, Jespersen, from Rangoon. Of departures we can name, Louise Georgine, Gosau, for Singapore. At Bremen are arrived, Etha Rickmers, Hess, from Rangoon; Marie Louise, Schmidt, from Bassein, and Lillian Morris, Jasker, from Rangoon. In vessels on the berth no alteration has taken place. Freights are still low and cargo scarce; steam is procurable to China at 40s., and 10 per cent., and 40s. in full, but even far inferior rates are said to be accepted. Sailing vessels are loading at 20s. to 25s. and 5 per cent.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JULY 18.

Some of the Liberal papers are continuing day after day to demonstrate the necessity for the resignation of the Heemskerk Cabinet; but up to this moment nothing transpired from which it may be concluded that it is the wish of the Premier to be indulgent for this advice. We even may suppose the contrary, because it was announced semi-officially that his answer to the "Section Report" about the Lower Class Instruction Bill will reach the Second Chamber within a very short time. It, indeed, seems to be the intention of Mr. Heemskerk to deal with this ticklish subject before leaving the office.

We hear very bad news from our cotton districts. Some manufacturers stopped payment, others ceased to work during one or two days a week; whilst other owners closed the doors. The general complaint is that there are no orders to execute; the trade has come to a standstill. On the Bourse an unparalleled inactivity prevails, whilst money remains very cheap, so that every amount can be obtained at 2 per cent. against securities. Under this state of things the middle class suffers the most.

The Emperor of Brazil has been for some days the guest of our country. He and his wife arrived last Saturday at the Hague, where they were received by Prince Henry. To-day they visit our beautiful International Exhibition. The Prince of Orange, who made a trip to Darmstadt, returned to the Royal residency. I am glad to state that the deafness by which Prince Alexander suffered is much better now. The King resides in Zurich; it is said that he will not return before the opening of Parliament.

Much uneasiness prevails amongst our students, because the Minister Heemskerk has the intention not to finish with the vacancies before the 1st of October, the day on which the new Academical Law enters into force. Several young men who wished to graduate before the introduction of the new law are very much disappointed by this measure, which is severely condemned in the papers.

The law-suit, which was opened by the owners of the vessel Phœnix, which was seized several months ago on the Scheldt, has at last been finished. The Court at the Hague asserted that the State was quite right by seizing this vessel; and the owners leave off to make an appeal on the High Court. The question is thus decided.

The one hundredth general annual meeting of the Dutch Society to Promote Industry was opened last Wednesday, at Haarlem, in a most solemn manner.

From the 18th of June till the 14th of July, the examinations took place of students who wished to be appointed as Java functionaries. There were 61 candidates, 48 had a success, of which 13 made their studies at Leyden, 35 at Delft. There is only place for a very small quantum.

A prospectus of a loan of f.900,000 has been set in circulation to provide Amsterdam with a dry dock. Messrs. A. A. Bienfait, J. Boissevain, P. E. Tegelberg, and G. A. Tindal are the promotors. Five-eighths of the capital wanted is already subscribed for; the remaining three-eighths will be offered to the public on the 24th inst.

It is with much regret that we have heard the sudden death of Mr. J. C. van Lier, editor of the Bat Handelsblad. Due honour was paid to him by our press.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

A dull tone prevails in our markets for Colonial Produces; rather no business was done.

COFFEE looks very healthy, but the transactions were limited to a few lots of private import, which changed hands at full prices.

TEA.—A small lot of 59/4 chests Souchong Tjiadjang (Java) changed hands at prices that did not transpire.

RAW SUGAR without any demand. The greatest dulness prevails for this article. The transactions in refined Sugar are very limited, and this checks business.

TOBACCO (Java).—The trade is waiting for the result of the private tenders, which will take place in the last days of this month. Sales were 527 bs. G. Kidoel, 648 bs. K.P.S., and 49 bs. Sumatra Deli D.R. The stock includes 36,935 bs. Java, 4,472 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila.

COTTON looks very dull; buyers and sellers are not inclined to operate.

SPICES have met with a good demand, especially Nutmegs for export. Mace enjoyed a good demand at firm prices. Cloves were very dull.

RICE (Uncleaned) met with a regular demand, and several floating cargoes changed hands. In Cleaned a good business was done. For Japan sorts higher prices were paid.

RATTANS 200 pic. ex Nelly, 150 pic. ex Prins Hendrik, and 80 pic. ex Voorwaarts changed hands.

JAVA INDIGO.—A regular trade took place; about 120 chests were sold. The stock includes 3,846 chests.

TIN looks very dull. It was impossible to find buyers. The statistics are very unfavourable. Banca was nominally quoted at f.42; loco Billiton at f.40½.

HIDES without anything particular to mention. The trade is waiting for some important lots, which will be brought into the market.

ARRIVALS.—July 4, at Nieuwe Diep, from Bassein, Argo; 13, at Nieuwe Diep, from Batavia, President Trakanen; 16, at Ymuiden, from Macassar, Noach I.; from Banjoewangie, Oceaan.

DEPARTURES.—July 13, from Nieuwe Diep, for Batavia, Voorlichter.

Monetary and Commercial.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10¾ to 11¼; Chartered Bank of India, 21 to 22; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 28 to 29; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.678¾; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 32 to 34; Oriental Bank, 44 to 45; P. and O. Company, 37 to 39; Messageries Maritimes, f.612½; Suez Canal, f.665; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 109 to 112; ditto, 7 per cent., 99 to 101; China Loan, 103 to 105.

The tone of the Tea market is slightly ameliorated on what was reported last week, there being more buyers than sellers at the low range of value for the commoner kinds. Finest teas, however, on account of their scarceness, are readily picked up at full rates, viz., 2s. 5d. to 2s. 8d. The trade being satisfied that the Foochow teas are exceptionally poor, there has been more disposition to look at black leaf. Importers generally are far less inclined to quit their parcels, and a reaction has apparently set in from the panic-stricken haste which characterised the opening of the market. The sales yesterday comprised only 2,800 packages of new season's Kaisow, which realised perceptibly better rates than those obtainable by private contract, in consequence of being sold in small parcels. The lowest quotation for Hankow teas was 11d., and for red-leafs 9½d.

For the week ended the 14th inst. the total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London was 3,768,316 lbs., or an increase of 6 per cent. as compared with the preceding week, when the total was 3,555,002 lbs. Of the former total 2,236,436 lbs. was for home consumption, 831,990 lbs. was exported, 647,443 lbs. was removed coastwise, 49,330 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,117 lbs. was for ships' stores. During the same period £55,911 was received as duty, as against £56,436, a decrease of close upon 1 per cent.

There have been some unimportant sales of silk at about the rates reported by last mail; but the market does not show any signs of rallying, owing in a great degree to the unsettled aspect of political affairs on the Continent generally, and specially in France.

In the Produce Markets an inactive tone continues to prevail, and prices have exhibited little variation. Coffee continues in limited supply, and quotations of both Plantation and Native Ceylon have advanced. Sugar is still very quiet; there have been small sales of Penang and China in auction. Floating cargoes of Rice have continued in active request, and a further advance has been paid. The speculative demand for Black Pepper has ceased, and the market for both Black and White is flat. Japan Wax is lower. Spices have been quiet. Gambier has been in active request, and has advanced in value. Tin continues to decline, Straits being quoted £67 per ton. Other articles are without alteration.

The Coupons on the Six per Cent. Debentures of the Eastern Extension, Australasia, and China Telegraph Company, Limited, will be paid at the Consolidated Bank, Threadneedle-street, on and after the 1st prox.

Messrs. J. Henry Schroder and Co announce that the half-yearly interest on the Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan for £1,000,000, due on the 1st prox., will be paid on and after that date at their counting-house.

The report and accounts of the Eastern Agency, of which a summary was given in our last, was duly passed at the meeting on the 17th inst.

The subjoined changes in mercantile firms have been notified:—Mr. Charles Cooper has taken over the London business of Messrs. J. B. Swasey and Co., of Talbot-court, Gracechurch-street, and being joined by his brother Mr. Alexander Cooper, will carry on the business of American and general merchants, under the style of Cooper and Brother. Messrs. J. B. Swasey and Co. announce that their business in Boston, U.S.A., and Melbourne, Australia, will be carried on as heretofore. Mr. A. H. Young and Mr. A. Nixon have commenced business as coffee, tea, and colonial commission merchants, at 36, Mark-lane, under the style of Young and Nixon. Messrs. E. Norton, Harper and Sons, accountants, of 2, Cowper's-court, have taken into partnership Mr. H. E. Harper.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £193,950; Bombay, £60,050; and Madras, £11,000. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras for bills and telegrams at 1s. 8 15-16d. will receive in full. On Bombay, at 1s. 8⅞d. for bills, about 50 per cent. An increased demand for remittances is indicated in these figures.

In the market for Bar Silver there was considerable activity in the early part of the week, and some amount was sold at 54⅜d. and 54½d. per oz. standard, but the inquiry is less marked at the close, 54⅜d. per oz. standard being the nearest quotation. Mexican Dollars are without change, at 54½d. per oz.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular says :—Further arrivals have taken place, and there has been a fair demand for the better classes of Moning Congous, and the improvement in price noticed in our last has been maintained for these. The tone of the market has slightly improved, and although only a moderate business has been done, prices of Chinas and Japans have advanced from 6d. to 1s. per lb., while those of Cantons have remained stationary. ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

On the 18th inst. the Market showed no departure from the position reported on the previous day. On Thursday there was rather more inquiry for some special makes of Grey Goods, but without leading to much business, the offers being on too low a scale. Since then there has been an improvement in the general demand, and full prices paid where business resulted. As a rule, however, producers are asking higher prices than buyers are willing to pay, consequently, the transactions continue to be of only limited extent. The tendency at the close was towards higher prices.

GENERAL AVERAGE.

A matter of considerable importance alike to shipowners and owners of cargo has just been before the Divisional Court of Common Pleas. The ship Rollo, on a recent voyage from this country to Hong Kong, experienced very bad weather, during which portions of the rigging gave way, and in consequence the mainmast began to lurch violently. The master, being apprehensive that the mast should rip up the decks, and thereby imperil both ship and cargo, ordered the mast to be cut away. Eventually an action was raised by the shipowners against the owners of cargo, which involved the question whether the cutting away of the mast, in the peculiar circumstances of the case, was a subject for general average contribution. The learned Judge who tried the case asked the jury to decide whether the mast was a wreck, and valueless, and gone, at the time it went over. The jury answered in the affirmative, but immediately a rule was obtained on the ground of misdirection, and that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, the misdirection being that the Judge did not ask the jury whether, if the weather had moderated the mast possibly could have been saved. The motion for a new trial came before Mr. Justice Grove and Mr. Justice Lopes, and they are agreed in opinion that the rule should be made absolute. Their Lordships have held that there was a probability of the storm continuing, in which case the mast would have not broken, but would have gone overboard wholly. The ship would have been torn up, and everything would have been lost. They were of opinion that probably the mast might have been saved if the weather had moderated quickly, which was improbable; and they considered further, that the mast was cut away, not as a mere incumbrance, but for the purpose of preventing its tearing up the ship and sacrificing the adventure. But they thought that, in addition to the question on which the rule had been obtained, the jury should have been asked the further question—whether, at the time the mast was cut away, the purpose was to save vessel and cargo by preventing the mast tearing up the ship, to which the evidence very strongly pointed, or whether it was cut away as wreck, as a mere incumbrance, or lumber. Their Lordships have made the strong observation that the beneficial objects of the doctrine and law of general average would be frittered away if, where a sacrifice was made, as seemed to have been obviously the case here, to save the whole adventure, the sharing of the burden of such sacrifice could be made to depend upon nice questions of probability afterwards discussed as to whether the thing might or might not have been saved. Here, if the mast had gone the ship would probably have gone with it, and the ship was probably saved by the sacrifice of the mast. It would defeat the main utility of general average (added their Lordships) if at a moment of emergency the captain's mind were to hesitate as to saving the adventure through fear of casting a burden on his owners. But in making the rule absolute for a new trial, their Lordships expressed the opinion that the question of the mast being saved was put to the jury as one of probability and not of possibility; that no question was left to them as to the purpose for which the mast was cut away, and that contingent wreck was treated by the Judge who presided at the trial as though it were actual wreck. From the point of view in which Mr. Justice Grove and Mr. Justice Lopes regarded the case, they thought that, although the Judge who presided was not dissatisfied with the verdict, yet the verdict was against the weight of evidence. When the new trial comes on, the result will be awaited with considerable interest.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

NAGASAKI.

The Rising Sun says the British barque Ville de Lille has been chartered as a store ship by the Japanese Government at the high rate of, it is stated, $1,500 per month. On two days last week she was busy unloading ammunition, &c., from the Acantha, and is now lying down the bay nearly opposite Tategami.—On the 23rd ult. the French gunboat Surprise left for Kobe, and next day the U.S.S. Kearsarge left, it was believed for Kagoshima. It is rumoured that the U.S. Minister at Yokohama, not being perfectly satisfied with the information derived from the Government, the Kearsarge has been sent down with a view of observing the position of affairs.—About one A.M. on the 25th ult. an engineer in the Mitsu Bishi employ, while walking along the Bund, was fired at by two Japanese and wounded in the head. When seen at 2.30 A.M. by the medical officer of H.M.S. Lily he was found to have received a lacerated wound of the right temple, which fortunately proved of small moment. No cause can be assigned for the outrage.—A small steam flour-mill is in course of erection on the Tokitsu-road, not far from Goto Machi, Nagasaki. The machinery arrived some time ago, and the buildings would have been finished before this, but for some opposition on the part of the neighbouring farmers. Although the engine is only three horse-power, it is hoped, now that the native population are beginning to appreciate bread as an article of diet, that the present movement may be the means of establishing a new trade in this part of the country. The mill was originally little better than an experiment, but possibly it may prove a decided success, as the wounded soldiers are ordered bread among their rations.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News correspondent writes:—

I have just returned from the city. Not so many beggars are on the street as there were a month ago. I hear from the Chinese the rains have been quite general throughout the province. Spring rains are always very light, but this year the showers have been exceptionally heavy, and the wheat is said to be looking very fine. So I think another month will see the famine, ended so far as this province is concerned. Where no rain has fallen, what will the end be? I have heard of no news concerning anything or anyone. There is much sickness amongst the Chinese. To-night rain is threatening, but its fall is doubtful.

H.E. George F. Seward reached here this evening with his family, and goes on to Chefoo to-morrow, by the Hae-shin (late Zhihli), where they will spend the summer.

From parts of the interior we hear that the severity of the suffering seems to be past. In one place a severe hailstorm has beaten down the wheat badly, and it is difficult to say to what extent the yield will be affected by it; the stalks may straighten up again. Rain has fallen in many places, and crops promise well. We learn that the Chinese Government has sent a note to each of the Foreign Ministers in Peking, expressing thanks for the very liberal and practical manner in which foreigners have shown their sympathy for the poor sufferers from famine during the past winter. It is thought to indicate a good state of feeling on the part of foreigners. It is a pity that the Government does not manifest a better state of feeling for its own suffering thousands, and institute such reforms and improvements as would render such terrible and wide-spread suffering as the last few months have witnessed an impossibility.

Our Bund is covered with cargo, extending even into the cross streets, and rendering locomotion exceedingly difficult. The appearance is quite disgraceful to our otherwise neat little settlement, and it is to be sincerely hoped it may not continue so long.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 10th June; the Shanghai French mail from London, April 20, was received on the 3rd June, and the following P. and O. mail of April 27 arrived out on the 7th June.

A new trouble has, it appears, arisen in connection with the Lekin Dues question. It will be remembered that when it was notified that lekin would no longer be collected within the area of the Foreign Settlements, the native merchants residing in the City and suburbs claimed exemption also, declaring that they would remove into the Settlement if it were not granted. The late Taoutai, Fêng, yielded; and the outside hongs have since enjoyed the same immunity from lekin as those within the Settlements. The new Taoutai, however, seems to take a different view. He appears to intend having his "pound of flesh" at all costs; and a warrant has been issued against certain of the principal dealers in cotton goods in the City and Namtow suburb.

No mention is made in the document of foreign cloth as the article to be taxed; and the document is so framed that an ordinary reader might suppose only native cloth was to be the subject of the squeeze; but the Chinese interested say that this omission is intentional, in order that foreigners shall have no pretext for interfering, and that foreign goods are really aimed at. The notice has been addressed to four of the principal dealers in Foreign cloths (hongs, in fact, that have very little to do with native manufactures), and they seem to understand its drift, and fully expect they will be made to pay up, not only in the future but for past exemption. If their fears are realised, they are said to contemplate putting their former threat into execution—viz., migrating to the Settlements.

A meeting of shareholders in the North China Insurance Company has been held, to consider a proposal for re-forming the company upon a permanent basis at the expiry of the present term. It was explained that the object was to build up a reserve fund, as the present subscribed capital of the company did not suffice for the increasing business which was within its power. A resolution in favour of reconstituting the company as a permanent one, to commence business on the 1st January next, was passed, and the present directors were elected a provisional committee. The Chairman, in explaining the object of the meeting to the shareholders, said:—The changes which the directors recommended were most important; contemplating, as they did, making the Company permanent instead of triennial. They had had the careful consideration not only of the directors, but of the Home Committee, influential shareholders, who fully approved them. He might remark that the Committee wished the Company registered, but that was impossible; the Court here was unable to register. The next important thing was building up a reserve. It was suggested that a division of profits should be made as at present, viz., $\frac{1}{4}$ to shareholders in proportion to the number of shares held; $\frac{3}{4}$ to shareholders in proportion to the net premium paid or influenced by them; and out of the $\frac{1}{3}$ attaching to the shares, to set aside each year for the formation of a Reserve Fund, until the same amounts to Tls. 400,000, such sums as the shareholders may decide to appropriate. It was contemplated at one time to propose that a certain sum should be set aside, each half-year, for a Reserve Fund, till Tls. 400,000 were reached. But on consideration it was thought better such sums as might be voted by shareholders should be set aside. It would of course happen that one half-year would be better than another; and a rigid rule to set aside Tls. 25,000 in June and Tls. 25,000 in December might take too much out of the pockets of shareholders; and the figure had better be left to be decided at the meetings. Then, as regarded the revision of the share list at the close of every three years. This was a necessary clause; and after consulting their legal adviser they found there would be little difficulty in framing a clause empowering the directors to exclude any non-contributing shareholder, and to confine the Company to contributors.

The Celestial Empire says:—

We hear that the remaining two million and a half of Hk. taels, making in all a loan of five millions, were settled on Wednesday with a local bank. The only difference between this contract and the former is, that in the present instance the term of repayment is fixed at seven years instead of ten. Interest 10 per cent., exchange 5s. 9½d., and repayments of principal and interest to be by half-yearly instalments in six months' bank bills at current rates.

The North China Herald publishes the full text of the circular which has been issued with reference to the proposed alteration in the mode of conducting the tea trade, and to which reference was made in this paper some time back. It runs as follows:—

The unsatisfactory result, in recent years, to the importer of China teas is a fact of universal experience; permit me, in our common interest, to ask your attention to a suggestion for obviating what I believe to be one of the causes leading to this result; I refer to the system of sending our buyers from Shanghai to Hankow to meet the article on its way to the former place.

The drawbacks of this system are manifest.

In the first place, most of us are not established in Hankow, and we have to send Chaaszees from their own tea-rooms, where they are "at home," have their own light, and in every other respect are in the most favourable circumstances for exercising an unbiassed judgment, whether as to the desirability of operating or in the selection of their purchases—to a settlement of which it is hardly an exaggeration to say that, for a time, almost the whole population acts and talks as if to secure an interest in Tea were the one end of life.

In the cases to which I now specially allude, our representatives are herded, half-a-dozen together, in the houses of two or three agents, and are thereby exposed to the influences of competition and emulation in the strongest possible form—influences which cannot fail to operate in the most fatal direction, that of causing the individual to mistrust his own judgment, and to be led away by the action of others when this differs from what he has proposed to himself.

Our tasters set out with the one object in view—to buy tea; they have a fleet of steamers impatiently waiting for their purchases; they are agents, called upon to decide a highly speculative question, deprived of the opportunity which they would have in Shanghai of consulting with their chiefs, and they are urged wholly in the direction of operating to the almost total exclusion of the other side of the question.

There are the further arguments in favour of Shanghai, that in view of the hurried manner in which teas are now manipulated and fired, every period which can be interposed between the packing of the tea and the time it is offered for sale is a direct advantage to the purchaser, and that it has a material advantage as against Hankow in being in daily communication by telegram both with the consuming markets and other centres of Tea export.

Why, then, should we stop the leaf halfway between the place of growth and the place where we have located ourselves? As importers of tea, and as property-holders in Shanghai, it is our interest to do all that is possible to restore to that port the position of the Northern Tea Depot, and to this end it is proposed that we should enter into a mutual undertaking not to send either tea-tasters or orders to Hankow for the coming season. Should there be a few dissentients there is no danger that they would get the whip-hand of their neighbours; the Chinese are too astute not to avail themselves of the market in which the greatest buying power exists; they would place extreme limits on tea in Hankow, and failing to obtain them they would order it to Shanghai, for, by nature sanguine and speculative, the natives would have the greatest faith in the greatest number.

I think there can be no doubt that a sufficiently large majority of the tea buying is under control of London firms—either as heads of the Shanghai houses or as entrusting them with orders—to ensure that unanimous, or nearly unanimous action on their part would effect the desired change.

Several large buyers have expressed their desire to co-operate in putting an end to the existing system provided there be some sort of unanimity on the point amongst the trade generally, and to test this, I ask your consideration of the question, and that you will be so good as to sign and return to me one of the enclosed forms, according to the view you adopt.

It is reported that the steamer Chinkeang has accepted a long charter to carry Chinese emigrants from the South of China to Australia. Her passengers will not be welcome, at least in Queensland, where there are said to be already twice as many Chinese as can find occupation, and where distress is said to exist in consequence.

We hear that the opposition between the rival companies on the Yangtsze is growing keener. It is said that freight is being taken at a tael per ton, with 10 per cent. discount allowed, and that native passengers are travelling to Hankow for $2½.

The two Municipal Councils have decided on a uniform width of 39 feet for the Yang-king-pang creek, from the Fohkien-road bridge to the Defence Creek. The French Council purpose constructing a bunding on their side, as we are doing on ours. Several purchases of land for the purpose of widening streets on the French Concession are in contemplation.—The granite bunding of the Hwangpoo is to cost Tls. 192 per chang (10 feet); and additions and improvements are to be made to the Municipal Hotel, at a cost of Tls. 14,000.

RAILWAY PROSPECTS.

The Herald concludes an article on the above-named subject as follows; the view taken is not over-encouraging:—

There has been a great deal said lately about the Woosung railway, and the prospect of its extension. Rumour has even declared that the removal of the existing plant to Formosa was decided on, and that more substantial material had been ordered to replace it, and to extend the line Soochow-wards. We cannot learn that there is any truth in the report. That there was some talk of banishing the line to Formosa we believe; but even that design is said to have fallen into disfavour—Ting Futai having returned from his recent visit to the island with a less favourable idea of the project. And the real question just now, at Nanking, is said to be whether the line shall not be rooted up altogether at the close of the year. After all the Viceroy may be right! He came here with a reputation which is found to have been very much overrated; but he may still have a fairly correct idea of his own and his countrymen's abilities. He may know that the Chinese are not capable of managing railways, and that if they attempted to do so they would have a smash and bring discredit on an institution which is now in perfect order. They like the little railway to Woosung immensely, and come scores of miles to have a ride in the "fire-dragon carriages;" but it is managed by foreigners at present, and is safe; and of course foreigners cannot be allowed to continue managing it, because—well, because they are foreigners. They may be tolerated on board the C.M.S.N. steamers, because those steamers are supposed to be occupied in doing harm to other foreigners; and what more clever than to use diamond to cut diamond? but unhappily there is no second railway to be ruined; and as, of course, foreigners cannot be allowed to work it, and if Shen Pao-chen is persuaded that the Chinese cannot—what remains but to tear it up? Railways have been constructed, and are working successfully in Japan, Egypt, Turkey and other backward countries, but China thinks they won't suit her, and perhaps she is right. Chinamen are the best judges of their own capabilities, and so long as half the land is occupied by graves, in a manner totally incomprehensible to civilised nations, there is of course the impossibility of avoiding these. It is far better to let the ground lie waste for the benefit of the ancestral bones, than it is to occupy it with roads designed only for the convenience of the living. The Viceroy may be quite right in thinking China should be content with a back seat among nations, and not trying to do what is beyond her.

WENCHOW.

The North China Daily News says:—

From Wenchow we have the curious intelligence that the missing lorcha Mandarin has been at last discovered, disguised as a Chinese junk. Mr. C. Schmidt, a pilot, while on his way to the pilot ground, saw a boat that he at once recognised as the missing lorcha Mandarin. He accordingly went to H.B.M.'s Consul and reported the matter, and steps were at once taken to have the crew arrested and the vessel detained, which was accomplished very readily with the assistance of some of the Chinese officials; so that there is at last a prospect of this long-standing act of piracy and murder being brought to a close. What the end will be, or what redress the owners will get, remains to be seen.

The Courier's correspondent says:—

Everybody seems to agree that Wenchow is a very charming place. We have even heard of the inland sea through which it is approached compared in point of beauty to the famous inland sea of Japan. Even the town is said to be the cleanest and prettiest ever opened to British trade in China, while the people are friendly and inoffensive. Commercially the prospects of the newly-opened port are hopeful, and although it is not likely there will be much tea exported this year, it is well to remember that formerly Wenchow was an important mart for the noble leaf. Latterly its trade has been diverted into different channels, a number of insignificant coast-ports in the neighbourhood having derived the benefit; but the opening of the city to foreign commerce will no doubt bring this lost trade back again, and conduce to the advantage of both Chinese and foreign merchants, without in any way injuring the prospects of Foochow. Another new field for the energy of tea-tasters is likely to be found in Wuhu, and we hope soon to give our readers a few particulars of the article the Chinese are preparing for the foreign market at this port.

FOOCHOW.

An attempt has again been made at the Foochow Club to pass a vote in favour of having the billiard-rooms open on Sundays, but it has been lost, there being 27 votes in favour of it, and 20 against it—the number of votes required to alter the rule being two-thirds of the total number of members.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 16th June; the French mail from London, May 4, arrived out on the 11th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 11, was received on the 15th June.

The question of the manner in which the natives in the Colony should be governed still occupied public attention. It appeared doubtful whether the Governor intended to interfere with the night-pass system, this being stated on the one side to be the case, while it was denied by others. It is clear, however, from the papers that considerable anxiety prevailed on the subject, and that many changes are likely to occur unless public opinion be found sufficiently strong to restrain the energy which Mr. Hennessy is evidently prepared otherwise to manifest. The sentence of flogging, which had been passed, and, as mentioned by last mail had been suspended, had not been carried out up to the time of the departure of the present mail.

The old (now almost forgotten) cause célèbre, "Landstein v. The King of Annam, which at one time attracted so much attention in the colony, has again cropped up. The China Mail reports that a commissioner of the Annamese King appeared in court on the 14th June, with his full staff, and tendered the $60,000 in boxes of ingots of sycee in settlement of the plaintiff's claim. The original claim, it may be remembered, was for some $170,000, and the seizure of the Annamese Government vessel, Dang Wee, afforded lively discussions in court some four years ago. At last a compromise was arranged by which the King of Annam, through his representative, undertook to pay $60,000 in satisfaction of all demands. The terms of agreement come to on the 15th April, 1875, were that the action should be taken as against Yuen Tak How, an Annamese who originally contracted the debts, whether rightly or wrongly, in the name of the King of Annam, instead of as against the King; that the defendant Yuen Tak How was to pay $60,000 in full of all demands, the same to be paid in Annam; and that the Annamese commissioner, Lai Tiu, was to stand security for due payment. Meanwhile the Dang Wee was to be released. This arrangement was ratified by the signatures of the parties concerned to a deed on the 23rd April, 1875. The last step was the present tender of payment. The Commissioner is a mandarin of high rank, being the Senior Vice-president of the Board of Revenue. According to his present commission he appears to have been charged with the delivery of a despatch to his Excellency the Governor and to the Chief Justice respectively, thanking them for the trouble they took in settling this case. He was also entrusted with a sum of money to meet the judgment of this case, which was formally brought before the Court. The boxes of ingots were handed to the custody of the Hon. C. C. Smith, Registrar-General, by whom they were lodged in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, and pending the drawing up of the bond of release by the plaintiff's counsel, the money was to be placed to the credit of the Registrar of the Court. When the bond is approved of, a protracted case, commenced in the beginning of 1873—nearly four years and a half now—will have been brought to a conclusion. Later in the day the following order was made by the Court:—"The representative of His Majesty the King of Annam having this day appeared in Court and having tendered the sum of $60,000, the amount of the bond given in this suit dated the 23rd day of April, 1875, and under the hands and seals of Yun Duc Han and Lai Din, and William Rudolph Landstein hereby in Court undertaking to release and actually releasing his Majesty the King of Annam from all claims and demands whatsoever against his Majesty the King of Annam or against his Government, so that hereafter William Rudolph Landstein may not have the slightest matter on which to say anything: this Court doth order that the said sum of $60,000 be paid to William Rudolph Landstein, and that all further proceedings in this suit be stayed."

A question with reference to the estate of the late Mr. George B. Falconer has come before the Supreme Court. The litigants were the next of kin of the deceased, who died intestate, and the next of kin consequently became entitled to the property, the relict in one-half and the two brothers the other half. The plaintiff was one of the brothers, and the defendants were Mrs. Falconer and the other brother, who was represented by his son under a power of attorney. The estate consisted of the good-will and stock-in-trade of the testator's establishment of a watch-maker and jeweller, valued at $171,320. The plaintiff, under the law, was entitled to one-fourth share of this estate, and he wished to retire from the business. The present application was therefore for a decree of the Court. After a somewhat lengthened hearing, the matter was compromised at the suggestion of the Court.

We take the following from the China Mail:—

We are glad to learn that the four Kanaka women brought here in the French brig Dauphine are now under the care of the Sisters of Mercy. They have been dressed in Chinese costume, and express gratitude for the care taken of them, although they do not acquire a great relish for the food they get and hanker rather after the savoury morsels they were wont to enjoy in their native isle. H.E. the Governor was absent in Canton when the good Sisters took charge of these women, and the authorities do not seem to take much interest in their fate. This is to be regretted, and even although international courtesy may have thrown difficulties in the way, we do not suppose that the French Government would have objected to our paying half of the expenses incurred. Captain Lelonnais deserves great credit in this matter, and so do the Sisters of Charity.

The first marriage of a Chinaman under the civil law took place on the 7th, and caused quite a commotion. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Chun Tai Kwong, translator and clerk in the Supreme Court. The bride and the bridegroom appeared before the marriage registrar in their nuptial costumes, that of the former being a suit of mandarin dress, while that of the latter consisted of the usual red robe, and the head-dress resembling a crown with strings of beads hanging down over the face. After the ceremony had been gone through, the lady, contrary to the usual illiterateness of Chinese females, signed her name in good legible Chinese characters.

The memorial in regard to the currency question that was recently sent round the Colony for signature having been forwarded to his Excellency the Governor, the Colonial Secretary has replied that the same will be transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, as well as some specimens of clean and mutilated silver coins, and an ivory steel-yard that have since been sent in to his Excellency for that purpose. There were 245 signatures appended to the memorial.

It would seem that there is some screw loose about the management of the Government Gardens generally; and this is to be regretted, as they are justly the pride of Hong Kong. It may be that such a man as Mr. Ford is not picked up every day, and that a difficulty presented itself in obtaining a competent locum tenens. Whatever the cause may be, the fact is too patent, that the Gardens are not tended as they were wont to be, and there are evident signs on all sides of a want of some capable head to see that the work is done. We observe that a number of rare plants presented some time since to the Government Gardens are in a most wretched condition—half of them are dead, while the remaining half appear to be drooping from sympathy at the general wreck. Now, as similar plants in the possession of amateurs are flourishing and healthy, this appears a strange comment on the present condition of official horticulture. Probably it would suit the Government to sell such plants—amateurs would gladly pay for them, and keep them alive without remuneration.

CANTON.

The correspondent of the China Mail writes :—

The "Heathen Chinee," with gaping mouth, will swallow much that to us would seem incredible. In a certain district in the Kwangsi province it is recorded that one day last April was made memorable by a rainfall of blood—or, to speak less figuratively, rain of a reddish colour. This is regarded as an omen of approaching rebellion, and by way of corroboration it is asserted that, in the fourth year of the reign of Hien-fung, the same phenomenon at Fatshan heralded the advent of the "red-haired rebels." Whether or not this was so, we are not in a position to say; but it is a curious coincidence, for which probably some of the native oracles may give some explanation, that those natural (or in native eyes supernatural) phenomena play so persistently into the hands of political agitators. Whether the "bloody rain" of Kwangsi will be the prelude of any natural or extraordinary disturbance remains to be seen.

The subscriptions at Canton by both the foreign and Chinese community there to the Shantung Famine Fund of which Mr. R. E. Bredon was the chairman of committee, aggregated $2,725,45, and the whole sum has been duly transmitted to the order of Mr. George Jamieson at Chefoo.

A disastrous fire, attended with fatal results, occurred in Canton on the night of the 1st June. About midnight an alarm of fire was raised, and it was soon discovered that the scene of conflagration was Tsing Yuen-street, a place in close proximity to the Canton Steamer Wharf and to the premises of Messrs. Russell and Co. The Chinese firemen turned out as usual, and in the great bustle and confusion that generally ensues in such a scene the men worked at suppression well and heartily with their tiny engines. The roughs turned out as usual in great numbers for the purpose of looting, and vigorous efforts were made to effect an entrance into the house of Messrs. Russell and Co., so that the occupants had to barricade it from inside. The Chinese soldiers were also turned out to maintain order, but it appeared they were almost impotent to effect their purpose through the roughs being in great force. Nevertheless, three men were caught in the act of looting, and are now in the hands of the Nam-hoi Magistrate for trial.

CANTON, JUNE 14, 1877.

Mr. Robert Hart, Inspector-General of Imperial Maritime Customs, arrived at this place on the 9th inst. Since his arrival he has been much occupied in receiving visits of ceremony from the principal Chinese officials. Amongst the most distinguished native officers, who have honoured him with visits were their Excellencies the Viceroy, the Tartar General, and the Commissioner of Revenue. It is, we understand, Mr. Hart's intention to proceed on leaving Canton to the newly-opened ports of Paak-Hoi and Hoi-How, the former being situated on the south coast of China, and the latter being the commercial metropolis of the island of Hainan. His Excellency Pope Hennessy, Governor of Hong Kong, has also been on a short visit to this city. We were all much pleased with him, and feel that he will very well administer the affairs of the colony over which he has so recently been appointed to preside. Sir David Wedderburn, Bart., formerly an active member of the British Parliament, passed through this place a few days ago. He has been travelling in India, and is now on his way to Japan and the United States of America. He is a highly intelligent man, and will, doubtless, give to the reading world a very interesting and instructive book of travels. It would appear that kidnapping is again prevailing in this city to an unusual extent. Thus on the 10th instant, when taking my customary walk, my attention was directed to two men who were, at one moment, beating gongs, and to another informing all persons passing by that a female slave named Tsau-fa, aged thirteen years, the property of a gentleman named Kwok, who resides in the Shap-i-poo-street of this city, had been stolen, and that a reward of fourteen taels of silver would be paid to any one who on finding her should restore her to her lawful owner. Again, on the same day we met with another party of "bellmen," who were announcing that a youth named Lau-hau-shui, aged seven years, had been abducted from the family residence of a gentleman named Chan of the Poo-wa-fong-street of this city, and that a reward of seven taels of silver would be given to any one furnishing correct information as to his whereabouts. The grand topic of conversation, however, at present amongst our Chinese neighbours is the following singular circumstance. It appears that at a village named Hang-mi-tau-heung, a man and his wife, who are surnamed Tang, had, some years ago, affianced their daughter to a young man named Faan, who resides in San Francisco. As this youth showed no signs of returning to China, the parents of the maiden deemed it advisable to affiance her to a more suitable person. They, therefore, promised to give her in marriage to a man named Ho, and the 8th inst. was actually set apart as the day on which the marriage was to take place. The young girl having heard of the new arrangements which had been made by her parents, and regarding their conduct in the matter as highly censurable, secretly communicated with the parents of the swain to whom she had been in the first instance affianced, and begged that they would use their best endeavours to rescue her from what she termed an impending calamity. Accordingly, on the day in question, the 8th inst., as her parents were in the very act of sending her in a bridal chair to the residence of Ho, the parents and relatives of Faan suddenly appeared on the scene, and having previously provided themselves with a bridal chair, carried off this modern Penelope in triumph to their family residence, where she was married by proxy to the absentee. The people maintain that so virtuous a woman is sure to become, on Faan's return from San Francisco, the mother of great and illustrious children. But let me now remark that Saturday last was observed by the Chinese as a holiday, in honour of Yeuk-wong, the Medicine King, or first discoverer of medicinal plants. The temple which stands in honour of this heathen deity, in the street called Kwong-chow-foo-chik-kaai, was, throughout the day, literally crowded by votaries, all of whom—chiefly physicians and women—were most anxious to render proper service unto the idol. As Yeuk-wong on the morning of this anniversary is supposed to have returned wearied and fatigued from the mountains, on the slopes of which he is regarded as having spent several hours in search of medicinal plants for the service of men, the votaries, one and all, vigorously fan the idol by which he is represented, with the view of cooling and refreshing him. The fans which have been employed for this purpose are afterwards conveyed by the votaries to their respective homes, and used by them to fan members of their families, who, at any future time, may become ill of fever.

On the 12th inst. two malefactors were decapitated, under an Imperial warrant, on the common execution ground of this city.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

Heavy rains had fallen at Manila, the rainy season having set in there. Rains had also fallen in some provinces, while in others the severe drought was still prevailing. At San Isidro, in Nueva Ecija, where there had been no rain since September, rain had fallen, accompanied by heavy thunderstorms, the lightning setting tobacco-sheds on fire, and killing one person. Small-pox had decreased greatly at Manila, few cases being reported there, but it was reported as making great ravages in the province of Cavite.

Mr. Robert Tooth, the director of the Yengarie Sugar Company, has applied to the civil authorities at Manila for permission to construct two wooden piers on the right bank of the river Pasig, to form part of the sugar manufacturing works he is having constructed there. Mr. Tooth has been granted patent rights for fifteen years, respecting a chemical process of his own invention for improving the manufacture of sugar.

At the town of Ilagan, in the province of Isabela, a fire consumed six Chinese plank-houses, together with their contents, on the 14th April. On the 17th a woman was killed by lightning there while gathering tobacco, during the first thunderstorm of the season.

In Bulacan and Nueva Ecija the paddy crops had failed from want of rain. Thousands of persons there were living on roots and jungle fruits. In the province of Nuevo Vizcaya, many cacao trees, both young and fruitbearing, had perished from the great drought.

On the 1st May a heavy shock of earthquake was felt in the province of Laguna, which, fortunately, caused no accidents of any kind, and no damage to buildings.

The Governor-General has authorised Mr. H. C. Gray to officiate as British Vice-Consul at Ilo Ilo.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The latest advices relative to the progress of the war in Atchin state that at Atchin Proper the Dutch remain in undisturbed possession of the territory they have conquered, and their settlements there continue progressing. During the last few months there has been a large influx of Chinese, who seem to be attracted by the high wages paid for various kinds of labour. At one or two places on the West and East Coast the state of affairs is not yet satisfactory. The Commander-in-Chief has deemed it necessary to double the garrison at Analaboo West Coast, where several small encounters have recently taken place. At Blangne East Coast the Dutch forces have succeeded in repulsing an attack on the small Dutch fort, but lost one officer and a few privates killed, besides several wounded. The Atchinese loss was seven killed, but, as usual, they carried off their wounded. General Diemont, the civil and military commanding officer, is ill, and has, it is said, applied to be relieved, General Schultze is said to be the officer designated to hold the staff of command. General Diemont, in a report published on the 8th June, states that the hostile Atchinese had taken to stealing horned cattle and horses with great dexterity.

The Handelsblad of the 13th June says :—"As to trade there is very little of a special nature to be mentioned. Since our previous summary two more Chinese traders have suspended payment, and the remaining ones appear to enjoy but little confidence. In Sugar there is nothing doing ; the new crop is beginning to come in. Coffee, too, is quiet ; on the 9th inst. a subscription was held for a portion of the Pamanukan crop, but the offers were far below the limits fixed. The tin auction sale on the 9th June resulted well, the 9,753 piculs put up being sold at an average of 45.18 guilders."

By ordinance of the Governor-General, dated the 7th June, the harbour of Saparua in Amboyna has been declared to be open to import and export trade in general ; no harbour and anchorage dues will be levied there.

Several gentlemen have formed themselves into a committee at Batavia to collect subscriptions for the benefit of an expedition to be despatched from the Netherlands to the Polar Regions, to place monuments there to the memory of early Netherlands' North Pole voyagers.

On the 2nd June six gang robbers were hanged at Djokdja in Java. Gang robbery being very prevalent there, it was expected that their execution would have a deterrent effect.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 24th June ; the P. and O. mail from London, May 25, was received on the 23rd June. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

The fortnight has been an unusually quiet one, even for Singapore, and all interest has been centred in news from other quarters, more particularly in the war between Russia and Turkey.

Mr. W. E. Maxwell, who succeeded Mr. J. G. Davidson as British resident in Perak, has returned to Singapore and been appointed senior police magistrate, vice Captain Walshe, who acts now as inspector-general of police. In face of the chaos in our superior law courts it is some satisfaction that our police court business should be so efficiently conducted as it has been and is at present. In connection with this it may be noted that Mr. N. B. Dennys has been gazetted a justice of the peace, and thus the services of this gentleman and his knowledge of Chinese will be more utilised than they would be if he remained simply a protector of emigrants. A week or a fortnight more should bring here the newly-appointed judge, Mr. H. Lushington Phillips, C.M.G., and it is rumoured that our present acting chief justice will be obliged to apply for leave of absence on account of his health upon Mr. Phillips's arrival. And thus the three Settlements will be left again with only one judge.

A brutal murder was committed in the harbour on board the American ship Mohican, on the morning of Tuesday, the 19th June. The victim was Robert Welsh, second mate, and the alleged perpetrator was George Henry Smith, steward of the ship. In a drunken quarrel Smith is said to have attacked and fearfully mauled Welsh with a cleaver about the head, causing instant death. The accused is in custody, and will be tried at the next assizes, a coroner's inquest having recorded against him a verdict of culpable homicide amounting to murder. The murdered man, Robert Welsh, was an Irishman by birth, and the prisoner, Smith, is a Spaniard.

The property in Cross-street and South Bridge-road belonging to the late Daing Ibrahim Sri Maharajah, and known as Campong Pungulu Kessang, has been sold by Mr. Angus for $70,000. This must be considered a high price, and is an instance of the high value now of property in Singapore. The area of the ground is two acres, three roods, and fifteen poles, and the present monthly rental of the property is only $180, although an increase to double that amount is anticipated when the existing leases fall in.

A painful feeling has been excited here by Mr. Gladstone's unjustifiable attack upon the memory of Sir James Brooke in his speech in the House of Commons on the 7th May. Once upon a time there were two opinions here in Singapore about Sir James Brooke, but there has been only one for a long time, unmistakable proof of which was given by the public entertainment given in the Masonic Hall to the late Rajah in 1861, when on his way home.

One of the subjects which has attracted considerable attention here lately is Technical Education, and we have received a letter suggesting what seems a feasible plan for the establishment of a Government institution for the purpose. The question was first raised by Sir Andrew Clarke, and, had he remained here, something practical might have been done in the matter, but his successor, Sir William Jervois, has thrown cold water upon anything of the kind, declaring it to be impracticable and undesirable.

The passengers who were on board the steamer Gloria have arrived here on board the steamer Bentan. The subjoined declaration has been signed by all the passengers :—

We, the Captain and passengers of the Spanish steamer Gloria, hereby tender our warmest thanks to Capt. McKeon, of the British barque Marquis of Argyle, for his kind and speedy action in at once coming to our rescue on the occasion of our vessel being stranded on the 30th May last, and for his willingness in conveying the purser and engineer of the Gloria to Singapore in his vessel, owing to which a steamer was sent to our assistance.

Seventy of the Chinese coolies who lately made complaints against a Chinese firm of attempted kidnapping, and who, upon inquiry, were received under the protection of the police, have been set at liberty, the result of which is that the firm in question has lost the amount paid for the coolies' passage money to Singapore. We understand the firm will also be prosecuted.

Dr. H. L. Randell, Principal Civil Medical Officer of the Straits Settlements, died on the 22nd June. Dr. Randell had been ailing for some time, but he was believed to be recovering, and the news of his somewhat sudden death was received with surprise and regret throughout the community.

There has been heavy and continuous rain throughout the fortnight, and the weather has been perceptibly cooler. There is now a plentiful supply of water throughout the town, which has been greatly conducive to the public health.

All is quiet in the Peninsula so far as the public know. Private advices from Perak state that the Regent, Rajah Yusuf, is as unpopular as ever with the natives, who desire nothing better than direct British rule, pure and simple.

H.M.S. Growler has gone on a cruise to Labuan ; the Charybdis has not arrived, and this port is at present under the protection of two Dutch men-of-war.

PENANG.

On the 5th June there was launched from the premises of the Penang Wharf and Transit Company a beautiful steam yacht, of the following dimensions :—Length between perpendiculars, 60 feet ; length over all, 68 feet ; breadth of beam, 12 feet ; depth of hold, 6 feet. As she left the ways she was christened The Commissioner by his Excellency Chow Mun Samochai Rajh, for whom she was built. This little vessel was constructed by Messrs. Cunliffe and Dunlop, of Port Glasgow, by whom she was sent out in pieces.

The Penang Gazette says :—Their Excellencies the "Phra Nai Wye," and the "Chow Mun Samochai Raj," Commissioner of Tongka, have arrived here in his Siamese Majesty's corvette the Siam Monkut (or Siamese Crown). Both have been instrumental in quelling the riots in Tongkah and other neighbouring ports of the Siamese possessions, which at one time assumed rather an alarming aspect. The prompt and energetic measures adopted by the Siamese Government, at a most critical moment in sending a large armed force from the immediate neighbourhood of Tongkah most effectually stopped a rising among the Chinese, which, had it been successful in one instance, would, we have no doubt, been general over all that quarter of the peninsula.

The Gazette announces the appointment of Mr. Alfred D. Neubronner as Siamese Consul for Penang. Mr. Neubronner during a long career as a Government officer has by his courtesy and address not only merited the esteem of those to whom he was subordinate but has endeared himself to the Native Princes and Rajahs who at all times found him accessible and obliging.

Owing to the absence of the Honorary Secretary there has been no meeting of the Penang Association.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabie and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Goods of all descriptions have been in very little demand, the business that has passed being purely of a retail nature. We hope soon to see a reaction, as the good crops in the surrounding districts now about ready for harvesting will relieve the distress at present prevailing, and the natives will be able to turn their attention towards business in Cotton fabrics. Metals: Lead has been imported in sufficient quantity for requirements, and the price is now easier. Iron of good brands would be readily saleable at quotations.

NEWCHWANG.—Only a limited business had been done, and stocks were accumulating.

HANKOW.—During the interval the business in Cotton Goods had been quite nominal. Cotton Goods.—Grey Shirtings: The only sale reported is 1,000 pieces common quality 8¼ lbs. Cloth at Tls. 1.20 per piece. White Shirtings: A small quantity of superior quality "Tree" chop had been sold at Tls. 2.35 per piece. Metals.—Lead: There had been a small demand by teamen at Tls. 5.90 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—There had been an improved feeling in the market for Cotton manufactures during the week, and there was evidently greater desire on the part of buyers to operate at low prices. The classes of Grey Shirtings most wanted were those selling from Tls. 1.70 to 1.80 per piece, with a few of Dewhurst's 8·4 lbs. Eagle chop, the quotation for which was maintained at Tls. 1.88 per piece at the close. The commonest makes had been selling at Tls 1.10 to 1.18, and good common chop from Tls. 1.30 to 1.45, and from medium qualities for Tls. 1.55 to 1.65, sales about 60,000 pieces. T-Cloths were also in better request, 7 lbs. ordinary Mexicans of known chops commanding Tls. 1.23 per piece and 8 lbs. of the same class about Tls. 1.42 per piece. Common 7 lbs. were also in better demand at Tls. 1.05 per piece. Dewhurst's "T." Drills had been sold as high as Tls. 1.90 per piece for ordinary 14 lbs. English. American Drills were firmly held at Tls. 2.90 per piece. In Fancy Goods there had been very little doing at unchanged prices. In Woollens quite the average business had been passing at auction at full rates. There had been scarcely any change in the Metal market; some articles showed an upward tendency, Lead being firm. In Nail Rods sales had been comparatively small, but a better demand existed for Dawes and Rogers. In Tin Plates and Quicksilver there had been little doing.

FOOCHOW.—The sales during the interval had been—T-Cloths, 81lbs., 500 pieces, at $2.35 per piece; do., 8¼lbs., 500 pieces, at $2.65 per piece. Lead, 2,700 pigs, at $8.30 to 8.60 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The market for Yarns had continued depressed, and quotations were lower and almost nominal. For Cotton Goods there had been a slightly improved inquiry. In Woollens more business had been done, but at lower quotations. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—All counts of English Yarns can be had at lower prices. Piece Goods: English Drills of light weights have been in fair demand, and nearly 9,000 pieces of these have been settled; but American Goods have been altogether neglected, and the only sale has been an auction of 22 bales of damaged Drills, ex Highlander, which averaged about $3.06 per piece. Privately there is no demand at the moment for either American Sheetings or Drills, and some sound parcels which were offered at public sale were withdrawn, as no fair offer could be obtained. Woollens: A moderate inquiry exists for some of the principal fabrics, but prices are generally easier. Metals: Demand for Lead has been somewhat stronger, but no advance in value will be paid. Tin is lower. Yellow Metal has been slightly asked for at former rates. Quicksilver has somewhat declined. Coals: The arrivals have been 6,950 tons, comprising 4,500 tons of Cardiff, 1,560 tons of Welsh, 490 tons of Australian, and 400 tons of Formosa. The only sale has been 200 tons of Anthracite, ex Highlander, at a reported rate of $11 per ton. The market is now very quiet, and best soft Australian kinds are slow of sale at $8 per ton; for Cardiff to arrive the best figure offered is $10 per ton. Rice: A decided improvement has taken place in the market, and a good business has been done in foreign grain at advancing prices, the decline last noted having been more than recovered.

CANTON.—The market for Lead had declined during the fornight; quotations were for mixed brands $8.10 to 8.20 per picul, and for Hole Chop, and W.B. $8.25 to 8.30 per picul; at these prices there were but few sellers. Quicksilver had advanced to $63, but prices had subsequently receded to $62 to 62.50 per picul.

AMOY.—Stocks were heavy and prices consequently weak. T-Cloths and Yarns were lower in value. The stock of Grey Shirtings had been slightly reduced by re-exports.

MANILA.—There had been little or no alteration in the market during the interval. There had been a continued fair demand for Plain staples, while the market for coloured goods had remained quiet.

SINGAPORE.—The demand for some descriptions of Grey Cottons had been more active, and a moderate business had been done; prices had been fairly maintained, and in a few instances slightly higher rates had been obtained. Stocks of the principal staples were heavy. Bleached goods had been quiet. The principal sales reported are 18,000 pieces Grey Shirtings, 9,000 pieces Grey Supers, 80,000 pieces T-Cloths, 40 bales Grey Drills, 17,000 pieces White Shirtings, 57 cases White Cambrics, 8 cases White Brocades, 210 bales Grey Yarn, 70 bales T. R. Yarn, 150 bales Coloured Yarn, &c.

PENANG.—The market generally had been very quiet during the fortnight. Sales had been limited, prices of Grey staples were weak, as stocks were increasing.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

HANKOW.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says: Supplies have been on a fuller scale than ever known before, and the first crop promises to be the largest on record. The excess, however, consists chiefly of undesirable low-class teas, and on these the teamen are losing so heavily that already some large failures have taken place, and there is an inclination to contract operations in future. There has been throughout a larger stock to work upon, and Medium Teas from Tls. 18 to 22 are fully Tl. 1 lower, and classes below that Tls. 3 to 4. Ly-lings have been sold as low as Tls. 11.50. Third packs of Yung-low-tungs have sold at Tls. 15.50 to 17. Sung-yangs, Tls. 18 to 21. Cheong-sow-kais, Tls. 16 to 19, and Ping-kongs Tls. 14 to 16. Good Oonfaas, owing to their distinctive character and quality, have commanded most attention, and second packs have realised Tls. 23 to 27, third Tls. 19 to 22½; Seang-tam mixed have sold as low as Tls. 16½ to 19. Ningchow Teas of quality retain their value; the higher classes, ranging from Tls. 28 upwards, are firmer.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Musters were first shown on the 5th June, but the market was not opened until the 8th, when a small chop of Ningchow at Tls. 25 was settled; the stock amounted to about 12,000 chests, of which only 4,000 chests had been shown, for the most part consisting of teas offered in Hankow or Kiukiang, and very few desirable chops were to be found amongst them. Green: The season was closed. Considerable quantities of leaf had arrived from Wuhu, Ningpo, Hoochow, and Japan; and the manufacture of Shanghai packs was going on with energy.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—During the past week, considerable settlements have taken place on our market, a fair proportion being for Australian steamers Killarney and Bowen, both of which leave early next week for Melbourne and Sydney direct. Settlements during the week:—Congou, 69,796 chests; Oolong, 1,362 chests; Flowery Pekoe, 711 chests; and Scented Teas, 4,210 boxes. Congous: Prices for all grades below fair have given way generally speaking 1 to 2 Taels, and in some cases 3 Taels per picul. From fair medium to finest, prices have hardened, until they may be quoted at Tls. 1 to 2 over opening rates. Finest teas have maintained their value. The scarcity of medium to finest Teas is most marked. Souchongs have just commenced to arrive. Oolongs have continued to be taken at a reduction of Tls. 1 to 2, but the quality is undesirable. Flowery Pekoes are scarce and extremely fine; a few parcels have changed hands at a high Tael cost, but the quality is undesirable Scented Teas are purchased as they arrive at former rates for Teas poorly scented, although the make is good and the leaf fine. Quotations are:—Congou finest to choice, 1s. 11d. to 2s. 2½d.; fine to finest, 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10½d.; good medium to fine, 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 8d.; medium to good medium, 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 5½d.; flavoury to medium, 11¾d. to 1s. 2½d.; common to good common, 9d. to 11½d.; dust to leafy, 7¾d. to 8½d. Souchong: No quotation. Oolong: Fair to good, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4½d. Flowery Pekoe: Choice to extra choice, 3s. 2d. to 3s. 10d.; Scented Orange Pekoe, finest to choice 1s. 10½d. to 2s. 3d.; Scented Caper: Good to fine, 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 9d. The export to Great Britain and the Continent amounts to 7,287,973 lbs., against 2,200,000 lbs. To America, 59,299 lbs, against nil. To the Colonies, nil against nil, at same period last year.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says:—We have to report a more moderate business in Tea during the past fortnight, and transactions have generally been made on more favourable terms than previously. Congous: Our market remains unchanged, and settlements have only been small; shipments have been made to some extent from Macao, and consist chiefly of common grades. Scented Teas: There has not been quite such an active inquiry for Capers, and transactions have been on a more moderate scale. Prices for common and medium sorts have ruled in favour of buyers, the former having been bought at a decline of half a tael, and the latter at a decline of about one tael; fine and finest kinds are without any material change. We quote common to good common Tls. 15½ to 18, fair to good medium Tls. 20 to 26, and fine to finest Tls. 27 to 34. Pekoes have continued in fair demand; fine and finest "long leaf" sorts have been taken at former rates, but medium grades and "new makes" have declined in value about one tael. "New makes" have found buyers at Tls. 17 to 18, and "long leaf" kinds at Tls. 22 to 25 for fair to medium, and Tls. 27 to 30 for fine to finest. Canton Greens: The settlements are mostly in execution of Colonial orders. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 3,000 boxes, Tls. 19 to 33 per picul; Scented Caper, 26,500 boxes, Tls. 15½ to 34 per picul; Scented Orange Pekoe, 12,300 boxes, Tls. 17 to 30 per picul; Gunpowder, 1,500 boxes, Tls. 15 to 30 per picul.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—The up-country prices are said to have risen to the equivalent of Tls. 495 per picul (at Exchange 5s. 5¾d. = 23s. per lb.) for Blue Elephant, at which however only a very moderate amount of business appears to have taken place. The few bales of fair 9 × 12 Moss on this market are said to give a selling cost of Tls. 340 per picul for Laeyangs; something like Tls. 310 to 320 is the reported price for fair cargo, whilst in Kahings and Hangchow Tsatlees the purchases are too limited to make a quotation. The very cool reception of the new silk by foreigners has considerably damped the ardour of the few native operators; the countryman, however, is beginning to believe there may be some truth in the reports of bad markets and impossibility to sell, and prices are declining again in the producing districts with the silkmen holding off for news from Shanghai. The market here has not been opened yet, and the general belief is that we shall see the mail go by without any business. The holders of the 1,500 bales of new silk in stock seem waiting for the owners of the Gold Lion or Blue Elephant chops to give them a lead, and say it is useless showing musters in any quantity with the cost price so "long way different" from possible opening rates.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—It is difficult to arrive at actual settlements on the market during the past two weeks. Contracts for first crop Silk are generally computed at 1,100 to 1,200 bales, of which (including shipments by outgoing mail steamer) about 880 bales have been delivered, and there is now no silk of this yield remaining unsold. The quality is not up to standard of ordinary years, the thread, especially in the lower grades, being full-sized and foul, and the colour unusually dingy. Small musters of second crop are now being shown, and appear in all respects preferable to the former yield. A large quantity of Silk is looked for, and if there is no undue haste to purchase this should indicate lower prices. At present there are no contracts for second crop reported. Long-reels have been dealt in by Parsees to extent of 50 piculs of Kowkong, Seulam and other kinds. Re-reels: Settlements so far are 260 to 270 bales of Cumchuck and Lucklow; prices have advanced lately. Stock cannot be ascertained, but must be very trifling. Waste: 300 to 400 bales of New Season's have been bought.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HANKOW.—There had been small settlements of Szechuen Rhubarb at Tls. 13 to 13¼. Three boxes Szechuen Musk had found buyers at Tls. 83 to 84. Hides were in limited inquiry, and lower in value.

HONG KONG.—A somewhat better supply of Camphor had been placed on offer, and rather lower prices were ruling; Formosa was quoted $18.50 to 19, and Japan $21.50 per picul. Gamboge was still scarce, and good was quoted $54 to 55 per picul. Vermilion was unchanged at $33 per case. Quotations for Drugs at Macao were:—Aniseed Oil $185 to 186; Cassia Oil $97.50, and Star Aniseed $25 per picul.

CANTON.—Drugs and Spices: Cassia Lignea was quoted at for New Season's Loting $10.30 to 10.40 in mats, $10.60 to 10.70 in boxes; for Old Seasons $10.40 to 10.50 in mats, $10.60 to 10.70 in boxes. Sales of New Season's 500 piculs, stock 6,000 piculs; sales of Old Season's nil.; stock 6,000 piculs; Star Aniseed, $26 to 27; Rhubarb, No. 2, $55 to 60; Alum, $1.80 to 1.90 per picul; Camphor, $20 to 21 per picul, packed. Sundries: Fire Crackers 73 to 77 cents. per box, for Gowqua's No. 1, gold chop; Vermillion $32 to 33 per box. Matting, Manhing's Fine contract, White 4/4, 10¼ cents, 5/4, 12¼ cents, 6/4, 15 cents per yard; Red Check, 4/4, 11¼ cents, 5/4, 13¼ cents, 6/4, 16 cents, Double Extra Imperial, white 4/4, 13½ cents, 5/4, 16 cents, 6/4 19 cents, Red Check, 4/4, 15 cents, 5/4, 17½ cents, 6/4, 20½ cents per yard; Cargo Ginger, new, in syrup (Chyloong) $3.50 per box of 6 jars, Manderin, $4.10, Young Stem; stock exhausted.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar and Hemp are weaker, but Coffee has advanced. Sugar: Dealers continue firm, but buyers are cautious and the sales of the fortnight do not exceed 20,000 piculs, superior having been taken at from $6.06¼ to $6.25 per picul, and extra at $6.75 per picul. Unclayed: A parcel of about 6,400 piculs Taal, ex store, has changed hands at a price reported to be over $4 per picul packed; and the arrivals during the fortnight amount to over 17,000 piculs, all of which have been delivered under contract, at prices varying from $3.50 to $3.81¼ per picul. Price to-day is very firm at the last-named figure, with very little business practicable, and the arrivals have already begun to fall off. Since the date of our last circular no later advices have been received from Cebu, but Ilo Ilo advices extend to the 3rd inst., on which date that market was rather less excited, though prices had previously gone up to an absurd point. Hemp: Our market has at length given way, and current quality is not now saleable at over $6 per picul (£25 8s. 1d). Reports have, for some time back, been reaching this from Albay to the effect that the Hemp plantations there have been suffering from want of rain, and there is no doubt some truth in this, but, in the meantime, we see no reason to fear any material falling off in the supplies from that or from any other district. In the course of shipment there are now 9,000 bales going forward to Great Britain, and 18,600 bales to the United States. Stocks here, after deducting requirements for vessels in port, we estimate at 6,472 bales, and in Cebu at 10,104 bales, together 16,576 bales. Coffee: The sales during the fortnight have been at from $20.75 to $21 per picul (£80 17s. 9d. to £81 16s. 7d.), and although there is not much demand at these prices holders are very firm, as supplies are now getting scarce.

SINGAPORE.—A moderate business had been done in the principal staples, quotations for most articles had been steady, and there was not much change to report. Gambier opened firmer, and had had an upward tendency, the price rising from $4.42½ to $4.55 per picul; There was a demand at the higher quotation, and the market closed firmer. Supplies were coming forward slowly, the contracts during the fortnight amounting to 1,200 tons. Cube Gambier had continued in request, rates were higher, purchases of 250 tons of No. 1 quality at $5.52½ to $5.60, and 50 tons of No. 2 quality at $4.35 per picul; a further advance was asked at the close. Black Pepper had declined about 10 cents per picul; supplies had been plentiful, there had been a fair demand, 700 tons had been purchased mostly at $7½ per picul. White Pepper had been firmer, and a good business is reported, 180 tons had been taken up at a slight advance on last quotations. The Tin market opened rather weaker, but prices afterwards recovered, and closed slightly firmer; the market was cleared of available stocks, but some dealers were still holding for higher rates.

PENANG.—A fair business had been done in Tin and Pepper. In other articles only a limited business is reported. Tin: The bulk of the purchases had been for China, for which there was a demand. Prices had ranged between $18.50 and $19, and closed firm at the latter figure. Black Pepper: The demand for Europe, India and China had been fair, and transactions amounted to about 8,100 piculs, at $7.12½ to $6.95 for Atchin, and $7.12½ for West Coast. Stock 4,500 piculs West Coast, and 800 piculs Atchin. White Pepper: Purchases $12.60.

THE PERAK CAMPAIGN.

In the House of Commons Mr. Hardy said the delay in fixing the scale of the special allowances to the officers and men serving in the late campaign in the Malay Peninsula was owing to the fact that Indian as well as English troops were engaged, and the War-office and the India-office had different rates of allowance; but he had sent a letter to the Treasury, asking its sanction to special allowances to these troops, and as soon as that sanction was obtained the allowances would be paid.

CAPTAIN LOVELL.—We regret to announce the death of this gentleman, superintendent of the P. and O. Company at Calcutta. Captain Lovell had been in a delicate state of health for some time past, and embarked for England by the Nepaul, on the 24th inst., but died before reaching the Sandheads. The deceased, who entered the Company's service as an officer as far back as 1841, was fifty-eight years of age, and held in high esteem by the mercantile community of Calcutta.

FIFTY guineas premium was paid on the 27th inst. upon the Harbinger, which arrived at Hong Kong, from Newcastle, on the 28th.

Correspondence.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In a letter I have just received from Canton, dated June 7, occur several items of news in connection with the famine still raging in the north of China, and in connection with the great Missionary Conference lately held in Shanghai, which may prove interesting to some of your numerous readers.

After describing a local famine in the province of Canton, the result of the breaking of an embankment and flooding of the neighbourhood in question, he goes on to say :—"The Chinese have shown great liberality to the sufferers, sending them hats which have acted for umbrellas screening them from the down-pouring rain, as also large supplies of food. Canton province is easy of access through its numberless rivers. Not so, however, is Shantung, where the famine prevails. There thousands of people have died, notwithstanding all that the Chinese and foreigners have liberally subscribed towards their relief, and notwithstanding that missionaries have gone distributing food amongst them. . . . But missionaries are getting worn out in this work. Dr. Carmichael, of Chefoo, is dead, having caught fever while attending to the sick Chinese, and things seem to be getting worse than ever in those parts."

It is to be hoped and expected that the noble exhibition of European charity and self-sacrifice which this Shantung famine has called forth will not be lost on the Chinese. With reference to the Missionary Conference in Shanghai my correspondent writes :—"You will be interested to learn that the Shanghai Conference has been a great success. The harmony and earnest spirit of the missionaries seem also to have made a good impression in Shanghai." If the missionaries assembled have ventured to reopen the vexed question as to whether "Shin," or "Shangti," or some other be the right term for "God," the preceding testimony to their harmonious spirit in the Conference speaks volumes in their praise, and volumes, too, in praise of the improved state of feeling on this pungent subject. Another correspondent of mine has sent home a sermon preached before the Conference by the Rev. G. John, as well as a photograph of more than a hundred ladies and gentlemen composing the Conference. We may expect in time a full report of the proceedings of this Conference—a volume which will, no doubt, add greatly to our stores of missionary knowledge with reference to the grandest of missionary fields, the Empire of China.—Yours, &c.,

SILK SPECULATIONS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I trust that the attention which you have directed to the vicious system of business which is in vogue in the Silk trade will have the effect of inducing the brokers to abandon it, not only in their own interests but also in those of importers and others concerned. Your remarks mainly bear upon the direct effects of this system of trade—if trade indeed it can be properly called at all : but in its indirect results it is scarcely less pernicious. Instead of business in Silk being a respectable, regular and steady trade, as it was in former days, it is now rapidly degenerating into one of the most unsound businesses in London, and the result of this state of things must infallibly be that it will in the course of time get out of favour with people who are in a responsible position and have capital to lose. Instead of being able to base calculations upon the actual circumstances of the market, people have now to take into consideration the effects of what a number of speculators may decide upon doing ; and in consequence the business is becoming more and more unreliable, and more and more unsatisfactory. The results of this state of affairs it is not very difficult to foresee, and the brokers if they be wise will take warning in time. It may suit them up to a certain point to guarantee the sales to the importers, and to take the risk of the buyers failing; but will it suit them to do so always? I should certainly question this very much. The facilities which are offered at present will assuredly prove sufficiently alluring one of these days to attract some heavy speculators into the field, and we all know only too well what the history will then be. The great A, the giant of the market, will for a time be the terror and the envy of the whole trade. Upon him prices will depend ; his foresight will settle the future, his marvellously successful speculations be the wonder of gaping crowds. One fine day, however, it will be found that a sudden and quite unaccountable fall has taken place ; and it will be rummoured that the great A is "bearing" the market. After a little it will be whispered that perhaps he is doing so a little too much ; and then after a few days more there will be a perfect panic because A has either failed, or disappeared, or both, and deep and loud will be the lamentation among the brokers who have stood guarantee for the great A. This, Sir, has been the invariable history of markets in which speculation such as that to which you have directed attention has become rife ; and I would strongly warn the Silk brokers to be on their guard betimes, unless they wish another Collie scandal, but in the Silk instead of the Cotton and Piece Goods market. Such an event would no doubt bring the trade again to reason; but is it necessary that they should wait for its occurrence? Even as things are, the brokers have lost enough by comparatively small, though, still by no means insignificant failures, and it will be wise for them to bear in mind that it would only be a question of magnitude that would make the difference between such a failure as I have sketched above, and some that have already taken place ; and that the proportion between the assets and liabilities in either case would be much the same; that is, the assets would be to the liabilities in the ratio of nothing to the extreme amount for which the speculator could do business.

—Your obedient servant,

CAUTION.

OVER-CARRIAGE IN STEAMERS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—A few words may perhaps be admitted into your paper with reference to the over-carriage of goods which even now too frequently takes place in the canal steamers on the China line. Complaints have so frequently arisen on this score before that it might be hoped by this time due arrangements would be made to prevent such accidents ; but unfortunately this does not appear to be the case, and instances frequently occur of mistakes being made. No doubt they arise only from too much haste in the discharge of cargo at intermediate ports, and a little more care would be sufficient to put an end to them.—Yours faithfully,

London, July 28, 1877. A CHINA MERCHANT.

Literature, Science, &c.

The Athenæum contains a favourable review of Dr. Denny's recent work on the Folk Lore of China. It says :—

"Among the Chinese, who are possessed of some civilisation, who are entirely ignorant of science, and whose priests are little better than wizards and necromancers, we may naturally expect to find vast stores of superstitious beliefs and legends ; nor will any one so expecting who reads Mr. Dennys's book be disappointed. On every important event of daily life, and in almost every branch of folklore, he has diligently collected the beliefs current among the people, and, with but a few exceptions, he has been able to identify them with those existing in European countries. On this identification Mr. Dennys has enlarged at considerable length, in some instances even relating the whole of the European counterpart of the Chinese legend. We are inclined to grudge the space thus occupied to the exclusion of additional Chinese matter. It has been impossible in this notice even to indicate the many branches of Chinese folklore of which Mr. Dennys treats in his work. To say that he has not exhausted the field is merely to say that he has not performed an impossible feat ; but his book, which is full of valuable and interesting matter, will form a very important addition to folklore literature."

The Rev. Joseph Edkins writes to the Academy an interesting letter from Shanghai on literary and scientific matters there. He notices the Chinese newspapers, and speaking of the remarks recently made in the Shen-paon regarding railways, he writes that the Chinese critic omits any allusion to the advantage of railways in time of famine in lowering the price of food. England, however rich, would not have been able to meet the need of India without railways. China still refuses to make railways. So, too, the difficulty from the love of peculation on the part of Chinese officials, impeding the outflow of public money, and preventing many of the necessitous from obtaining their share, is not alluded to. China cannot obtain such honest officials as England can. Regarding the Shanghai Polytechnic, he says :—"The Polytechnic Institution and Reading Room, founded here by a few representative Europeans and Chinese, is at present still only in the germ. There is a reading-room, and the native newspapers and journals are there on the table, but no one goes to read them. It is not in a busy street, and anyone going there would have to take a walk or call a jinriksha on purpose. The library contains some valuable Chinese books, ancient and modern. Among them are about twenty works recently translated for the Chinese provincial Government. There are treatises on the steam-engine, electricity, chronological tables, geology, geography, navigation, &c. Two translators and a schoolmaster of very competent ability are in the constant employ of the provincial Government. One of these gentlemen has lately published a political work, Chung si kwan hi lio lun. It is not written for the Government, but from the author's desire to give to the official class in China a correct view of the political condition of those countries with which their native land has diplomatic relations and commercial intercourse. It treats fairly the question of Christianity, of reconquering the Mohammedan provinces in Central Asia, of opium, and of other pressing matters. It aims at giving China sound advice, and its statements are made in a friendly and Christian tone. It has called forth commendation from Li-hung-chang, and is being much read here and in the capital."

In a paper contributed to the Church Missionary Intelligencer for July, the Rev. C. F. Warren gives an account of a visit to the temple of Chion-in, which is one of the finest in Kioto, the former capital of Japan, and one of the most interesting cities in the Empire. There is a very fine yashiki, formerly occupied by the chief priest, and connected with the temple by a covered way; the floor of this is so constructed as to make a creaking noise like the chirping of birds, by which warning is given of the approach of any person. In one part of the temple, on a pedestal about three feet high, placed under a canopy, stands a small figure, some eighteen inches in height, and gaily decorated with flowers. This figure has one arm pointing towards heaven and the other hanging down, and is said to represent Shaka—as the Japanese call the supposed historical founder of Buddhism—as he appeared at his birth, when he said:—"Above heaven and under heaven, I alone am exalted." Mr. Warren adds that the figure was standing in the centre of a shallow basin, in which there was a liquid called ama cha (sweet tea), which is poured over the image by means of a small ladle, by all who come to do honour to it. Some then drink a little, some moisten their fingers with it, rub their eyes, &c., while others take a small quantity away with them, all being done in the hope that some benefit will be derived thereby.

We have received from the London office of the Inspectorate of Chinese Customs the Customs Gazette from Oct. to Dec. 1876; Medical reports to 30th Sept., 1876; list of Lighthouses and Buoys for 1877, and reports on the Trade at the Treaty ports of China for 1875, which will be noticed in due course.

INDIAN TEA COMPANIES.

(MONEY MARKET REVIEW.)

Surprise can scarcely be excited by the increased favour with which Indian tea companies are now being regarded, as evidenced by the enhanced price commanded lately by the few undertakings which are best known to the public. In these days, when money is to be had at 1½ per cent., when an almost unprecedented amount of capital is lying idle, and when investors are weary of and disquieted with so many of the foreign loans, it is only natural that they should look further afield for a safe and fairly lucrative channel of investment. They are now becoming convinced that Indian tea properties offer what they want—viz., sound security and a very profitable return.

The company best known in this market—the Assam—has, consequently, within the last few months increased considerably in value, the shares, which in March, 1876, were quoted 52 to 55, having now risen to 73 to 77. And the public seem to be warranted in their growing appreciation of this class of property. In the first place, the land itself under cultivation and in reserve uncultivated affords security for the capital they embark, while the sale of the tea produced affords, in the ordinary state of trade, sufficient profits, after payment of cost of production, to secure a solid and often handsome dividend. Thus, the Assam Company, on shares with £20 paid, has given a dividend for 1876-7 of £7 per share, or 35 per cent. Other companies, too, which have long been struggling under difficulties, are now gradually emerging into a dividend-paying state, and, consequently, have risen greatly in value, e.g., Upper Assam Company, whose shares, with £10 paid, quoted in March, 1876, 2½ to 3, are now at 5¾ to 6¼.

But, of all the Indian Tea companies the most successful, perhaps, has been one which, owing to its being a private concern, and not quoted in the market, is perfectly unknown to the general public—we mean the Wilton Tea Company. A few figures relating to this company, its doings, and earnings, may therefore prove interesting.

The Wilton Tea Company was formed and registered in London in 1870, with a capital of £10,000, in £1 shares, and took over, as a working concern, all the property and gardens of the Chubwa Tea Company, then in liquidation, consisting of 15,379 acres of land, of which 633 acres were in cultivation, with all the plants in full bearing. The purchase money was only £3,500, after the property had been offered at public auction and no bid made, or about one-twentieth part of the sum actually spent on the property by the old company; and the remaining £6,500 was used as working capital. Steady dividends have been paid since the formation of the company.

In the 1st year, 1872	... ...	10 per cent.
„ 2nd year, 1873	... ..	10 „
„ 3rd year, 1874	... ...	10 „
„ 4th year, 1875	... ...	12½ „
„ 5th year, 1876	... ...	12½ „
„ 6th year, 1877	... ...	20 „

And, as the newly-cultivated acreage comes into full bearing, these dividends may be expected to increase

In 1874 it was resolved to gradually increase the cultivated area of the gardens, and it was therefore decided to double the capital by five yearly issues of 2,000 shares of £1 each. Of these 6,000 have already been issued, making the present total capital £16,000. Of the remaining 4,000 shares, 2,000 will be issued this year, and 2,000 next year, to the shareholders at par. These issues at par are very valuable, owing to the large premium they command, and will no doubt be annually continued, if that course be found desirable in the interests of the company.

By this means the acreage under cultivation has been yearly increased, and it is still capable of still further extension. The original acreage and gardens being so extensive, certain portions have been in recent years advantageously sold, and the money so derived has been distributed amongst the shareholders, realising 8s. per share, and leaving the acreage, according to the last report, as follows:—Fee-simple grants, 8,829 acres. Total cultivation: Old, 401 acres; new, 333 acres; total, 734 acres.

The present market price of the shares is 4 to 4½.

During the last few days letters have appeared drawing attention to the extreme depression in the tea trade. This is to a great extent owing to the bad quality of the tea shipped from China, and the enormous quantity forced for sale on the market at one time. But it must be remembered that, the worse the China tea, the greater is the necessity to buy really good Indian tea to mix with it, in order to produce an average article.

THE DESPATCH OF TROOPS TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

The Times says the country will be satisfied with the general purport of the answer given by Lord Derby and Sir Stafford Northcote last night—namely, that the despatch of this reinforcement does not mean an intervention in the war which desolates the East. The Times has little doubt that the Queen's Ministers fully perceive the dangers of the hour and will be cautious in proportion to their responsibility. It would be unreasonable to connect them with the extravagances of a section of their supporters, even if we had not the express statements of more than one of the Cabinet as to the policy they will pursue. The various statements of the Ministerial policy taken together form an exposition which ought to make us quite secure as to what is intended. If Ministers are of opinion that, under certain conditions, a certain use of the British forces may be expedient, it would be less imprudent to specify them than to allow erroneous or exaggerated objects to be attributed to this or that measure. There will, no doubt, be many who will see even in the answers given yesterday evening something significant or ominous. The "uncertain and disturbed condition of Europe," "the present unsettled state of the Mediterranean region," invite to endless speculations. But the English public generally will consider that these answers, given deliberately, after evident concert, and in almost the same words, do constitute another pledge that the Government will maintain the same policy which it has indicated on former occasions.

The Morning Post remarks that in despatching troops to the Mediterranean the Government have taken the first step in fulfilment of the policy on which they have all along declared they would act—the protection of British interests. It is an assurance that the Government are determined to carry out their policy, whatever course it may be necessary for them to take for that purpose. It will perhaps be contended by those who have committed themselves so far in supporting Russia as to make it difficult for them to draw back that the despatch of troops to the Mediterranean will be regarded by the Porte as an assurance that, if its armies are defeated, it will in the last resort be able to rely upon the support of this country. That may or may not be; but if the interests of England and those of Turkey should eventually prove to be identical we shall certainly not abandon our own interests merely because in defending them we shall also defend those of Turkey.

The Daily Telegraph says the determination to send reinforcements to our garrisons in "the Mediterranean regions" proves that the interests of this great empire still possess vigilant guardians. It must be confessed that the cheering reassurance came none too soon. The cheers with which Sir Stafford Northcote's laconic reply was received and the fevident contentment of the House, proved that there existed a patriotic comprehension alike as to what was said and what was left unspoken; while the country generally is manifesting the same intelligent satisfaction. What has to be done, however, to secure the proper influence of England in the final settlement must be done henceforth manfully and thoroughly. If Gallipoli be the proper spot, to Gallipoli let our regiments go, whomsoever it displeases and whomsoever it helps or does not help; and to Gallipoli, moreover, let it be frankly proclaimed that they are going.

The Standard holds that, with regard to Lord Derby's and the Chancellor of the Exchequer's explanations, it is surely rather a poor sort of policy which attempts to explain away every act of vigour, as though its authors were ashamed or frightened of their own energy. A little more frankness, even a little more audacity, would not injure the character of the Government for discretion, while it would certainly tend to strengthen the confidence of the public, probably to avert the very danger the prospect of which seems to inspire this extraordinary caution.

ROYAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—The annual Congress of the Royal Archæological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland has already been fixed to be held at Hereford, and the arrangements of proposed excursions have just been made. The Hereford meeting will be held under the presidency of the Lord Bishop of Hereford, and among the local patrons are Lord Bateman, Lord Lieutenant of the county and High Sheriff, the Marquis of Hartington, Earl Powis, Earl Beauchamp, Earl of Bradford, Earl Ducie, &c., and all the local M.P.s. Sir W. Guise is the president of the section of Antiquities; Mr. Beresford Hope, M.P., of History; and Mr. Gambier Parry, of Architecture. On the afternoon of the opening day Sir Gilbert Scott will conduct the visitors round the cathedral, and give a historical description of the fabric. There will be excursions on every day of the Congress, with the exception of the opening day, to objects of archæological and antiquarian interest in the surrounding district. These will include a considerable number of churches of antiquarian interest, including the Minster at Leominster, and Ludlow Church, Ludlow Castle, Kilpeck Castle, Ewyas Harold Castle, Goodrich Castle, Kentchester (Magna Castra), with a Roman road crossing Offas Dyke near, and Credenhill Camp will be visited, and it is proposed to wind up the meeting by devoting a day to an excursion to Tewkesbury to examine Tewkesbury Abbey, now in course of restoration.

THE New York Times states that Commander Perkins, of the United States steamer Ashuelot, attached to the Asiatic station, has drawn up an interesting report, in which he gives the particulars of his recent visit to the newly-opened Chinese ports of Hoihow, on the Island of Hainan, and Pakhoi on the main, in company with Mr. Lincoln, the United States Consul at Canton.

LONDON: MONDAY, JULY 30, 1877.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

THE sad accounts of the effects of the famine are more than confirmed by the present mail. At Chefoo famine fever has been causing great disaster—the wards of the hospital were full and patients were being brought and left at the doors. It was feared that if strong preventive measures were not speedily taken there might be a severe epidemic, possibly cholera. A correspondent says that in the native town there are hundreds of small rooms with three or four fever patients in each. The Chinese Government have made a very handsome acknowledgment of the assistance which has been afforded by foreigners to the sufferers from the famine. The Peking authorities have sent a letter to each of the foreign Ministers, expressing their thanks for the liberal and practical manner in which sympathy has been shown. It is evident, as we surmised some time back, that this assistance which has been rendered will have a very beneficial effect upon the relations between China and foreign nations. Education seems to be making as great strides in China as here, if we may judge from the reports in this mail's papers. It is stated that the recent examinations in Peking for the degree of Chin Shih, or Doctor, five of the hundred and more candidates from the district of Tientsin passed successfully, a proportion so large as to have overwhelmed everyone with astonishment. Singularly enough, they are all residents within the city wall, and all have the reputation of being men of sense. From Shanghai we have details of a meeting at which it was proposed to reorganise the North China Insurance Company upon a permanent, instead of a triennial basis. The lekin dues business was causing further trouble, a new Taoutai having determined to charge them on the shops in the city, the proprietors of which threatened, if this were done, to migrate to the foreign settlements, so as to get free from them.

From Japan there is no later news by the present mail than that brought by the last Pacific mail to hand. A curious fact not yet noted is mentioned from Hakodadi, namely, that on the 11th May, when the great earthquake in Peru took place, there was a violent commotion of the sea in perfectly calm weather. It appears also that a similar occurrence of less intensity happened about eight years ago, when it was discovered that the wave was also attributable to a violent earthquake in Peru.

In Hong Kong the papers are full of discussions concerning the policy of the new Governor with respect to the government of the Chinese. The case of Landstein v. the King of Annam, which attracted so much attention some years back, has been finally settled.

From the Straits Settlements we learn that the interval since last mail has been marked by no event of special importance. Mr. W. E. Maxwell has been appointed senior police magistrate at Singapore, and the magisterial bench has been further strengthened by the appointment of Mr. N. B. Dennys as a justice of the peace. A painful feeling has been excited by the report of the observations made by Mr. Gladstone regarding the conduct of the late Sir James Brooke. The death of Dr. Randell, principal Civil Medical Officer of the Settlements, is reported. The second mate of the American ship Mohican, lying in Singapore harbour, has been murdered by the steward of the same vessel. Mr. A. D. Neubronner has been appointed Siamese Consul at Penang. Matters continue quiet in the native States. Advices from Atchin report that the Dutch are employed in strengthening their position in the Atchinese territory occupied by them. The severe drought which has recently prevailed in some provinces of the Philippine Islands has given place to a heavy rainfall.

GOVERNMENT OF THE NATIVES IN HONG KONG.

WE regret to notice from the papers to hand by the last mail that the new Governor of Hong Kong appears likely to carry too far the principle of avoiding every possible form of class distinction in the laws passed in the Colony. Of the soundness of this principle, of the duty of all placed in authority to act upon it, no less upon grounds of justice than of policy, no one in the present enlightened times can entertain any doubt. But even this principle is not without some limits. It cannot always be put in force without some modification, and it should, in common with all general principles, never be applied without a careful consideration of the people to whom it is desired to extend it, and the peculiar circumstances of the place in which order and good Government have to be maintained. Public safety is the limit to individual liberty. Where the former is menaced the latter must be restricted, and, indeed, individual freedom can never be long maintained when it is incompatible with the general welfare of the State or the community. These principles, which are indeed so trite as almost to appear truisms, are unfortunately too frequently overlooked by many thoughtful and well-informed men, who, enamoured of liberty and equality, are unable to believe that any restriction should be imposed upon them. Unfortunately, however, though all people of advanced views would desire to see perfect equality before the laws, it is only too well-known to those who have studied the subject from facts and not from theories that this ideal is unattainable. Even at home the necessity is recognised for much more class legislation than is commonly imagined to exist by superficial observers, and in our colonies and distant possessions this necessity is far more pressing. It is simply impossible to deal with Asiatics in precisely the same manner as we can with Europeans. We may hope to be able to do so in the course of years, but they must in the meantime be educated up to the necessary standard. Before this has been done to attempt to treat them as Europeans can only lead to disaster, in which natives and foreigners must alike suffer.

It appears that Mr. HENNESSY, as a commencement towards introducing an ultra advanced policy as regards the government of the natives, has determined to do away with two safeguards, which have long been regarded as necessary in Hong Kong, namely, the application of flogging as a punishment for crimes of violence, and the issue of night passes to the Chinese residents. There can be no doubt that no greater error could be committed. Long experience has proved the necessity of both these measures; and a Governor of a few months' standing, knowing little more of the Chinese than that they have yellow skins, and wear pigtails, will assuredly be very bold to do away with these safeguards. Even at home we are obliged to apply the lash to some of our most ruffianly criminals. Some years ago, as many will recollect, the crime of garrotting was alarmingly on the increase, and it was only put down by the application of the lash. In Hong Kong we have to deal with some of the very worst of the Chinese coast population—men in every way as hardened as any criminals here, and experience amply proves that the terrors of the lash are the only means of controlling them. We fully endorse the opinions expressed by our Hong Kong contemporary, the Daily Press, that to do away with it, especially in conjunction with the proposed abolition of the night-pass system, would be to afford the utmost encouragement to the criminal classes of Canton to migrate to Hong Kong, and so increase its insecurity and augment its already heavy police expenditure. We cannot too strongly condemn these acts of the new Governor, which bear the impress of haste and impetuosity, and will assuredly land him in difficulties similar to those which he encountered at Barbadoes.

CHINA AND KASHGAR.

A CAREFULLY-written epitome of the history of the rule of the Chinese over Kashgar, which it would seem probably may be reasserted, appears in The Times, and is of interest at the present moment. The conquest of Kashgar be China took place about the year 1760, and was the result of a reprisal on the part of the Chinese, the inhabitants of Kashgar, in conjunction with those of Tungaria and of Mongolia, having produced invaders and even conquerors of China. About the year 1750 an opportunity presented itself to China for interference in this direction. In that year two Princes—DAVATSI and AMURSANA—held supreme authority in Tungaria, which is that territory lying north of the Tian Shan, of which Kuldja or Ili is the western portion. These two chieftains could not rest contented with a divided power, but resolved to test who should be pre-eminent by an appeal to war. The result of the struggle was the overthrow of AMURSANA, who was obliged to seek safety in flight. He sought an asylum in China, and proceeded to Peking to lay his grievances and his homage at the feet of the Emperor. He was received with courtesy, granted titles and estates as a vassal of the Empire, and was encouraged to hope that the Chinese might lend him the aid necessary to replace him in his rightful position in Tungaria. But he was clearly informed that he was only a vassal of the Chinese, and must acknowledge the suzerainty of Peking in the event of his obtaining repossession of his territory. In 1755 he reappeared in Tungaria in command of a large Chinese army, and routed in several encounters the forces of DAVATSI. After a campaign of some months DAVATSI himself was taken prisoner, and AMURSANA'S triumph was complete. But after this great success AMURSANA forgot by whose aid it had been obtained, and he openly expressed his discontent at the Chinese requiring him to hold the country as their representative and with their own army. He took up arms, but was defeated at Kiahta, and paid the penalty which the Chinese considered his treachery and ingratitude to them deserved. Tungaria then became an integral portion of China, but the energy of KEEN LUNG was not satisfied even by this great conquest. His armies were directed to cross the mountain barriers into Khokand, and Tashkent was entered in 1758. In 1760 Khokand also submitted to his Generals, and Kashgar was formally annexed about the same year. It is stated by competent authority that the Chinese rule, even in the time of its decadence, was more popular than that of YAKOOB BEG, the very necessities of whose position compelled him to maintain the strictest order, as well as a somewhat meddlesome espionnage over the sayings of his subjects that would not contrast favourably with the less irksome system founded on Chinese confidence in their strength. Should the news which appears to have reached India of successes by the Kashgar army over the Chinese not be confirmed, and should the progress of the Chinese expedition be maintained, it is to be hoped that both the neighbourhood of Russia and our own interest in the country would tend towards impressing on the Chinese the necessity of using both their success with moderation and also their utmost efforts to bring their rule into harmonious accord with the subject population, without shocking the sentiment of the civilised world by excesses that are out of date even in Central Asia.

THERE is now no longer any doubt of the truth of the report of the death of YAKOOB BEG. The Russian Agency in Paris says it is announced from Tashkend that "BEKONLI BEG, the eldest son of YAKOOB BEG, Emir of Kashgar, has notified to General KAUFMANN the death of his father and his accession to the Throne." News has also been received from Bokhara of the death of the son of the Emir SEID MOHAMED, who visited St. Petersburg with an Embassy last year.

THE proverbial delay of the law has not apparently been in any way diminished by the procedure under the new Judicature Act, cases being as much delayed as ever. We learn that, in consequence of this inefficient working, the case of STRACHAN and THOMAS v. HOGG and WALKER, to which we some time back called attention, cannot come on before December next.

THE Italian Minister of Finance and Public Works and the representative of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company at Rome have signed a convention prolonging the present contract for the mail service between Venice and the East until the month of February, 1880.

Naval and Military.

The Ariel, now building at Chatham, will be ready for commission in October, and will probably be ordered to the China Station.

The Tamar, troop-ship, Captain W. D. Liddell, arrived at Portsmouth, from Hong Kong (last from Plymouth). She brought home the officers and crews of the following ships, paid off:—Charybdis, Captain T. E. Smith, Lieutenant J. G. Jones, Lieutenant R. W. White, Surgeon G. Gibson, Staff-Surgeon T. L. Bickford, Navigating-Lieutenant B. S. Bradley, the Rev. Douglas J. Boutflower, M.A., chaplain, Lieutenant R. Montgomery, R.M.L.I., Mr. R. M. Colwell, paymaster, Mr. S. W. Wright, assistant-paymaster, and Sub-Lieutenant T. B. Hammond. Modeste, Lieutenant J. P. Pipon, Lieutenant the Hon. E. T. Needham, Surgeon C. C. Gedding, Staff-Surgeon R. R. Siccama, Paymaster T. N. Firth, Assistant-Paymaster W. C. Gillies, Navigating-Lieutenant P. Aplin, and Sub-Lieutenant J. Montgomery. Sylvia, Lieutenant G. S. Gunn, Paymaster E. H. Whyte, Staff-Surgeon S. Campbell, Navigating-Lieutenant William Pearce. Nassau, Lieutenant the Hon. F. C. Vereker, Lieutenant W. S. White, Lieutenant G. N. Pollard, Lieutenant J. St. C. Bower, Surgeon J. G. Clarke, Navigating-Lieutenant John Dixon. Hart, Lieutenant W. B. Forbes, Navigating Sub-Lieutenant Scullard, Mr. G. M'Ewen, engineer; Surgeon M. E. Bourke, invalided from the Curlew; Lieutenant Henry Pearson and Lieutenant Drake, invalided from the Victor Emanuel; Lieutenant C. G. Dickson, invalided from the Vigilant; Acting Sub-Lieutenants Thompson and Beresford, from the Hibernia. When the officers and men for Portsmouth are all discharged it is expected that she will immediately return to Plymouth to have her few defects made good, unless she should be required for further troop service immediately, and then these defects will be completed at Portsmouth.

The following appears in the Army and Navy Gazette:—Having received late news from China, I wish to bring under your notice the pleasures of paying off on that station. I wish especially to bring forward the case of one of the gunvessels lately paid off at Hong Kong. As every one was obliged to clear out of the ship a few days before they paid off, they confidently expected to be sent to the Victor Emmanuel; but they were rather surprised to hear that there was no room on board her, and that they were to be relegated to the Opossum. On going on board this ship they found that they could expect no comfort on board her, she being simply the shell of an ancient 40-horse power gunboat with no gear at all on board; they even had to demand a table from the dockyard. In going to her they found they gained a rather doubtful advantage—viz., in not being able to sleep below, as it was very stuffy and the bilge odours were strong, though not sweet; so that they had to sleep on the upper deck, with the cool, refreshing breezes that generally blow in Hong Kong Harbour playing on them, and that rather roughly, as the bulwarks were cut away in some places. (I have heard that the doctors forbid sleeping on deck in China, as it is very unhealthy.) The courtesy of the ward-room officers of H.M.S. Victor Emmanuel does not seem to be very apparent, for it was through their alleging they had no room in their mess that these officers were condemned to the Opossum; and that they had no room I am inclined to doubt, for, though they had the officers of the Charybdis in their mess, yet they only have one table on the starboard side and a full-sized billiard table on the port side, so that the whole of the mess amidships is clear room. The Commodore agreed with them in thinking that the receiving-ship could only accommodate one other ship's company besides their own. The men, I think, had a harder time of it than the officers, for on the ship paying off they were given forty-eight hours' leave (which, I suppose, was made a great boon), and, to add to their enjoyment of this leave, they were obliged to take all their traps on board the Opossum, but were told they could not mess there, as they were not victualled on board their late ship after that day, and, though they were victualled on board the Tamar (in which they are to come home), she wanted so much cleaning that they could not go on board her; in fact, making them go on shore to knock about the pleasant streets of Hong Kong for two days, so that they should be able to spend all their money comfortably and stand a good chance of getting fever or dysentery before they came home. One of the officers of the vessel about which I am writing did obtain the latter complaint from a chill caused by sleeping on the deck of the Opossum.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR MALTA.

The following troops embarked on board the Indian troopships Euphrates, Captain Cumming, and Crocodile, Captain Sharpe, for Gibraltar and Malta, viz.:—195 men from the 108th Regiment to join the 27th Regiment, 239 men from the 64th Regiment to join the 98th; 288 men from the 79th Regiment to join the 42nd; 245 men from the 78th Regiment to join the 71st; and 231 men from the 104th Regiment to join the 101st. Also the 2nd Battalion of the 2nd Regiment, and the 2nd Battalion of the 13th Regiment, who, it is expected, will ultimately relieve the Royal Engineers on their being removed to another destination, but respecting which there are as yet no definite orders. The other troopships Malabar, Jumna, and Serapis will follow in due course as occasion should require. They are all ready for service. The naval drafts embarked on board the Euphrates from the flag-ship Duke of Wellington.

The strength of the garrison of Malta about ten years ago, and before Lord Cardwell's reduction of our military establishments in the Colonies, was eight batteries of Artillery, with an aggregate strength of 805 non-commissioned officers and men; two companies of Royal Engineers, numbering 178; six battalions of Infantry, 4,232 strong; the Malta Fencible Artillery, 591; the whole garrison numbering 5,854 non-commissioned officers and men. The establishment of the present garrison, including officers, is 5,098—namely, Artillery, seven batteries, 1,022; Engineers, two companies. 198; Infantry, five battalions, 3,440; and the Malta Fencible Artillery, 371. The additions now being made consist of the 2nd Battalions of the 2nd Queen's and the 13th Light Infantry, each 902 of all ranks, or 1,804 altogether, with drafts as follows:—195 to the 27th Regiment, 288 to the 42nd, 245 to the 71st, 239 to the 98th, and 231 to the 101st, making the total reinforcements 3,002, and bringing the strength of the garrison up to 8,100 of all ranks.

An officer with the Fleet in Besika Bay, writing on the 12th of July to a friend in Cork, says:—"We were practising with the electric light last night. With its aid you could examine a ship from stem to stern; even the smallest craft is within reach of this powerful light, everything under the influence of its intense brightness standing out as clear and well defined as at mid-day. No doubt it will be invaluable in naval warfare in detecting the approach of an enemy under cover of night who might be desirous of attempting a surprise or testing the efficacy of his torpedoes on our ironclads. We all coaled again this week full up. A general belief prevails throughout the Fleet that we shall be active participators in the Russo-Turkish quarrel before long. All is ready for any contingency that might be brought about by passing events. All symptoms of discontent have passed away and are absorbed in a desire to sustain the honour and good name of the old flag should it be run up in the presence of an enemy. The Fleet at present consists of the Alexandria, Swiftsure, Raleigh, Devastation, Rupert, Hotspur, and Torch. The Pallas steamed away for Malta last week. We are very happy here, although the surroundings are not of a very cheerful or picturesque character. The prospect is barren wherever the eye rests; no habitation can be seen, and the nearest approach to anything in the shape of a town is a place called Chanak, twenty miles from where we are at anchor. It blows very hard, too, sometimes in the Bay. Twice already in consequence of those fitful gusts of wind we have had to get up steam to prevent our anchors dragging."

Vice-Admiral Chads, the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, visited Chatham and made an inspection of the armour-plated ship Téméraire, and the other vessels fitting for sea. During his visit the steam torpedo launch of the Téméraire was tested in the large basin in the presence of the dockyard officials, when it worked most admirably. The statements made in some of the morning papers that the utmost exertions are being made to get this and other vessels ready for sea are exaggerations. On the contrary, everything is remarkably quiet, and instead of the "utmost exertions" being used, overtime has been stopped throughout the dockyard. The vessel, according to arrangements made months ago, will leave for the Mediterranean about the first or second week in September.

The arrangements for placing the control of the Indian Marine on a new footing have, we understand, been nearly completed. The formation of a distinct Marine Department for the Government of the service afloat is not, however, decided upon, as it is thought that the system of retaining the services of a naval adviser, a post now filled by Captain Bythesea, R.N., V.C., C.B., will be found to work efficiently.

Orders have been issued for the completion by the 1st of August of the Slaney, which is now in course of construction at Jarrow, and some others of her class. Although the Medina is the only one of the twelve which is ready for sea, eight have undergone their steam trials at Portsmouth and could be got ready for the pendant, if required, in a short time.

As the Penguin, 6, was going out of Devonport Harbour, for the purpose of testing her machinery, she came into collision with her Majesty's ship Indus. The collision was of considerable violence, injuring the Penguin's bowsprit and head-gear and doing damage to other parts of the ship. She returned into Keyham-basin for repairs.

Chief Engineers are in future to be appointed to all ships with engines of 800-horse power and above, provided such ships are in charge of a Commander or Captain. By this new arrangement it is estimated that employment will be found for a much larger number of Chief Engineers, and promotion consequently facilitated.

The Agincourt, Captain R. Wells, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir J. E. Commerell, K.C.B., left Plymouth Sound for the Mediterranean. The Agincourt will call at Gibraltar and Malta, and then join the squadron at Besika Bay, the Admiral taking third command.

The Queen has given orders for the appointment of Colonel John Stokes, C.B., of the Royal Engineers, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

Assistant Commissary-General Long, who has been prematurely brought home from Ceylon, is regarded as the officer selected to command the Commissariat Department if it should be necessary to establish a corps d'armée.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.

IN RE J. M. REYNVAAN, TRADING AS VAN OORDT AND CO.—LIABILITIES £55,000.

This was an application for the appointment of a receiver, and an injunction against a suing creditor.

The debtor, who traded in partnership with W. C. Van Oordt at Great St. Helen's, and Yokohama in Japan, as merchants, has presented a petition for the liquidation of their affairs, estimating the debts at £55,000, the value of the assets, which consist principally of the profits to be derived from shipments in transitu, not being ascertained.

Mr. Baker, of the firm of Lawrance, Plews, Baker, and Boyer, in making the application, stated that a few days before the suspension goods to the value of £30,000 had been sent to Japan for sale, and were now in transitu, and it was necessary in the interest of the creditors to appoint a receiver to deal with remittances. His Honour granted the application, and appointed Mr. Waddell to the office, and made an interim order restraining the legal proceedings for a week.

HAMBURG, JULY 24.

In consequence of the hot season a deep calm has taken place in the position of Germany; the high class of Government people are enjoying their vacancies, and, besides the negotiations between Austria and Germany, about the renewal of the Trade Treaty, hardly anything worth mentioning at present is visible in this direction. This quietness greatly contrasts with the uniform situation of Europe, which but for the passions and the greediness of its several nations at present might be just as calm and quiet as our position.

From all directions reports are coming in about a plentiful and blessed harvest, an abundance of the necessaries of life is expected; and still in almost every country neither peace nor contentment are to be met with, the passions of the different parties are raking worse than ever, and perhaps in not far a time the whole Continent may be in flames.

The Emperor William arrived at Gastein on the eve of the 17th July, and intends to stay there for three weeks. On the 8th of August he is to return to Berlin via Salzburg.

The Crown Prince and his family have taken a summer trip to Ostende (Belgium); they arrived there on the 17th inst., and are dwelling in a villa which has been offered to them by the King of the Belgians. On the 20th the Imperial Prince alone went to Brussels, in order to partake in a Te Deum, celebrated on occasion of the anniversary of the accession to the throne of King Leopold I.

In high politics there is great apathy prevailing, but I am able to report to you that the instructions of the German Plenipotentiaries for the commercial treaty with Austria are now completed; those gentlemen are not yet gone to Vienna, as Prince Bismark has reserved himself, by political reasons, as it is said to point out the moment which he thinks the best for their departure.

The Colorado beetle, which has shown itself in the neighbourhood of Cologne, has been totally destroyed, and all narratives of a new appearance of this insect in German harbours are mere rumours, and are without any foundation. Messrs. Stollwerck, at Cologne, the famous producers of chocolate and drops, have fabricated an imitation of this dangerous insect in the various stages of its development, and each little box shows eggs, a larva of three days, a larva of fourteen days, a larva of three weeks, chrysalis and beetle. The German Governments have ordered considerable numbers of those boxes, which are to be distributed among the schools of each country, in order to make the scholars acquainted with the insect.

The cattle-plague has again been detected in the Prussian province of Upper Silesia, and therefore the transport of cattle within the Empire has at once been stopped, as well as the export from Homburg and other sea-ports.

Last Saturday the largest ironclad ever built in Germany has been launched from the Vulcan's Wharf at Stettin. The new vessel, which, when under construction bore the letter of "A," has been christened the Lachsen (Saxony), after the German kingdom of the same name. She is 290 feet long, by 58 feet beam, and 26·5 feet in depth, drawing only 19 feet of water under full armament. The hull of the corvette is a triple one, the inner skin, constructed of m.32 (millimeter) iron, is surrounded by a teak-planking of m.200, on which iron-plating of m.254 has been bolted; the upper deck is laid of forged iron of two inches thick. Her armament consists of two ironclad towers, of which the after one is armed with four 27 c.m. guns, the fore one carrying one gun of the same size, her stem being provided with a sharp ramming apparatus of three metres in length. The vessel's two engines, each of 2,800-horse power, are independent of each other and are estimated to be of sufficient power to make the new man-of-war one of the quickest of the German navy. Another ironclad of about the same construction and dimensions, being built at Gaden, near Kiel, is to be launched in the course of the present week, and very likely will be christened the Bayern (Bavaria).

In consequence of the favourable results attained with German coals in the German Navy the Admiralty has taken into consideration the erection of depots of German coals, at least, at several predominant points in Europe, in which respect the following ports have been named:—Flushing, Lisbon, Carthagena, Catania, and perhaps Alexandria. At all these places large stores of German coals are to be stored to supply the German vessels, at least, as far as possible.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Business has been very quiet throughout the week; according to the prevailing season, only a small consumptive demand was perceptible, but holders are firm, in expectation of a better autumn inquiry.

COFFEE.—Holders of first-hand parcels did not show any pressure for sale, and values therefore maintained their high range. Quotation for Java quality m.1.05 to 1.50 per ½ kilo.

SUGAR.—Holders have shown more disposition to part with their stocks, and in addition several transactions for delivery have taken place. Quotations are:—Manila brown, clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.23 to 24¾; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 31; do. yellow, m.31½. to 34; Batavia, white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; do. brown, m.24½ to 31; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.32 to 35; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.25 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.22 to 32 per 50 kilo.

RICE.—Quotations of dressed but inferior qualities are, in sympathy with English markets, about m.0.25 per 100 lbs. Of raw quality 6,000 bags Rangoon arrived, ex Daniel, have been bought by a mill; 11,000 bags Arracan, ex Sumatra, are bought in a Channel port.

TEA is unchanged, and transactions are of no importance.

COTTON.—Values are slowly enhancing, but sales are still very restricted. Holders are not disposed to part with their stock at present quotations.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are pretty well inquired for, and prime quality is quoted m.5.60 to 6.20. Mace, m.4.70 to 4.90. Ginger unchanged, Bengal m.27 to 27½; Cochin m.63 to 85. Cloves are neglected, Zanzibar quality m.134 to 135; Amboina m.163 to 165. Pepper in demand, Singapore m.38 to 38½; Penang m.35 to 36; White m.70 to 80.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.33 money; 20.39 account, per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

Business on all markets has become a better one during the past week, in consequence of the crossing of the Balkans by the Russians, and the hopes of peace thus arrived at. Berlin gave the impulse for greater activity on the German bourses, and this has been responded to by our place, so that I can report a firm tendency at the close.

SHIPPING.

During the last week a good many arrivals have taken place, as well as departures, and in this regard things look satisfactory, the list of arrivals from the Far East though but small, comprising the Fortuna, Stcohsahl, and Argo, Gaetye, both from Rangoon. Of departures only the Walter Siegfried, Stolp, for Manila, is to be named. At Bremen the following vessels arrived from Rangoon, viz., Convenutti, Bozzo; Therese, Meyer; Armin, Ruhasel; Ravenna Padre, de Andreis; and Wilhelmine, Keller, all loaded with rice; besides the Devana, May, from Japan. On the berth are here at present the Egeria, s.s., to leave Aug. 8, for her usual route to Penang, &c.; Conrad Hinrich, Schuler for Singapore; Palma, for Bangkok; India, Dirksen, and Andreas, Peters, both for Hong Kong; Iphigenia, Gren, for Hiogo and Yokohama. All these vessels are slowly filling up, as cargo is not at all plentiful, and freights, therefore, are as low as last reported. The English steamship Humboldt, from Rio Janeiro, has arrived here with engines broken down, and will have to repair. The English steamship Criterion has been found drifting about, abandoned, in the vicinity of Horns-reef, and perhaps will be taken into the Weser or the Elbe river. About the fate of her crew hitherto nothing is known; she is loaded with wood and planking from the Baltic.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JULY 25.

The topic of the day is still the question whether the Heemskerk Cabinet will leave the offices in September next. Opinions are much divided thereabout, and it being an impossibility to foretell what will happen, the best is to wait for the event. In the meantime the Minister of the Home Department has laid before the M.P.s a Bill to regulate the rights of the authors, in order to secure their properties, at least during fifty years. The question of the right of translating foreign books will, when this Bill will be voted, be still an open one, because this can only be decided by an international treaty.

Both here and in Rotterdam the protests against the annexation of the Transvaal have been circulated.

It was decided, on a meeting of promoters of the erection of a charitable institution in remembrance of our late Queen, to build a hospital for children and for training nurses.

H.M. the King will return from his trip abroad about the middle of August, for being present at the opening of the new Canal from Amsterdam to the North Sea, which has now become a complete success. After this solemnity H.M. will make a voyage over the Pyrenees. The King visited also Paris.

Great uneasiness has been caused because a potato bug (doryphora decemlineata) has been found at Rotterdam, where it was imported from New York by a steamer. The fear now prevails that other specimens of this insect will be spread else where, so that measures are prescribed by the Minister in order to destruct them.

A meeting was held here of shareholders of de O. J. Maatschappy van Administrate en Lyfrenten. A proposal to prolong the terms for winding up the Company with three years was approved with 2,668 against two votes.

The Emperor of Brazil left our country after having visited several towns. He remained in Amsterdam three days and made generally an excellent impression. He is an indefatigable sightseer; from very early in the morning till late in the evening he visits all sorts of establishments.

According to the Staats Courant H.M. the King has presented to Mr. Charles Gardiner, living at Goring (Oxfordshire), a golden medal bearing the Royal bust. The named gentleman discovered in Nova-Zembla a large number of objects that belonged to Barentz and Heemskerk on their unhappy voyage in 1596 and 1597.

The medals that were obtained by our manufacturers at the Philadelphia Exhibition were distributed most solemnly by the Minister Heemskerk. Prof. Baumhauer, President of the Commission, was appointed commander of the Order of the Dutch Lion, whilst the knighthoodship was conferred upon Messrs. L. C. Van Kerkwyk and Eigeman.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Great dulness prevails in our markets for Colonial Produces. The transactions are of rather no interest.

COFFEE.—The trade was very limited. Only a few lots of private import changed hands. In the second hand without business.

TEA.—No new to report. Prices remain very healthy.

TOBACCO.—Some lots of several headmarks were offered by private tender, the quality being middling, and inferior low prices ought to be accepted. Of Manila a lot of 178 bs. H. 1874, Cagayan 4a., floating per Valparaiso, was sold. The stock includes 30,796 bs. Java, 4,268 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila, and 3,600 bs. E.I.

RAW SUGAR very dull. About 1,000 mats changed hands at f.1⅞ to f.2⅝ under July quotations.

COTTON.—Prices looked well enough, but the transactions were very poorly. There was want both for buyers and sellers.

SPICES met with a regular demand, especially for Nutmegs. Mace: The cheaper prices fixed more the attention upon this article. Cloves: Prices are nominal. Pepper looks well.

RICE is calm; 4,697 bs. that arrived from Batavia will soon be brought into the market. Clean Rice met with a regular demand at firm prices. Java and Japan went both up.

JAVA INDIGO.—With a regular trade. About 200 chests changed hands at unaltered prices.

TIN.—The trade was very limited. Banca on the spot was not offered; out of the sale, which will be held on the 31st, could be bought at f.42. There were, however, no buyers. Billiton can be had at f.39½.

HIDES without transactions.

ARRACK.—Sold were 45 casks Batavia, ex Baron Van Pallandt Van Rosendael, and 25 ditto ex Geesina Maria.

Monetary and Commercial.

The condition of the Tea market—incredible though it may appear—is materially worse for all teas except fine and finest, which, on account of their scarcity, still maintain their position. Equally good Congou to what was selling last week at 11d. realised in public sale yesterday only 9¼ to 9½, and if the present system of unreserved sales be persisted in, we shall in all probability have to chronicle a further decline week by week, and, indeed, it is impossible to foresee where prices will stop. The heavy arrivals during this month, aggregating in round numbers 35,000,000 lbs., against an average delivery of 10,000,000 lbs., will in part account for the lamentable state of affairs; but it is impossible on the other hand to ignore that it is in a great degree attributable to a hastiness in selling, altogether unwarranted by the circumstances of the trade, as although the import has been large, the latest statistics do not point to an overwhelming total. The tactics adopted seem quite incomprehensible, unless the idea of present sellers be to find out the bottom of the market.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the week which ended on the 21st inst. was 4,143,200 lbs., which was 931,502 lbs. more than was cleared during the corresponding week of last year. Of this quantity 2,372,685 lbs. went for home consumption, 808,391 lbs. for exportation, 3,647 lbs. for ships' stores, 198,537 lbs. went coastwise to various outports, of which 191,629 lbs. went coastwise to be immediately exported. The sum paid in London last week for tea duty amounted to £59,317 2s. 6d., which was an increase of £6,637 6s. 6d. above the amount derived from the same source of revenue during the corresponding week of 1876.

The Silk market continues in much the same unsatisfactory condition as it has been in for some time past. There is a little firmer tone, but it is very quiet, and prices can scarcely be quoted as higher. This results in part from the very unsettled aspect of political affairs on the Continent and the doubtful state of public matters in France, while the recent disturbances in America have added to the untoward influences against which the market has had to contend. From China the advices are on the whole encouraging. The prices have been as usual above rates here, namely 22s., against 18s., but the settlements have been only to the extent of some 1,600 bales, as against about as many thousand last season. It is clear that buyers there recognise the imprudence of paying high rates on the speculative probability of prices increasing here; and should this course be adhered to, as seems likely to be the case, there is room to hope that the market here may improve, upon any amelioration taking place in the general aspect of trade and of political affairs.

The British Indian Tea Company (Limited), in their annual report, state that the balance of revenue account indicates a surplus of £5,963 6s. 5d. This sum the directors propose to deal with as follows: To declare a dividend of 6s. per share, which will absorb £3,649 10s.; and to extinguish the balance at debit of "Profit and Loss" of £2,173 12s. 2d.; leaving a balance in favour of "Revenue account" of £140 4s. 3d.

Great disappointment is felt at the notice which has just been issued by the liquidators of the late firm of J. C. Im Thurn and Co., who failed on the 9th of April, 1875, announcing the payment of a dividend of 1s. in the pound. At the time of the suspension 5s. was paid, and it was given out with some confidence that the estate would ultimately realise 15s. in the pound. Regret is expressed by the liquidators at the delay in making the first distribution, which is explained by the long-continued and severe depression in trade, especially in the Argentine Republic. The winding-up, it is stated, is still far from complete. "The principal asset, upon which it has been found necessary to expend a considerable sum of money, is only just now beginning to support itself, and to show a fair prospect of a return."

From the fourteenth report and statement of accounts of the Ouvah Coffee Company (Limited), made up to May 31, it appears that with the unappropriated balance brought forward there was a profit of £17,594. A dividend of 10s. per share was paid in January, and the directors now recommend a further payment of 14s. per share, or 12 per cent. for the year, and after an appropriation of £4,000 to the reserve fund there is an undivided balance of £1,594. It was at first estimated that the 1875-6 crop, when the appearance of the blossom was considered, would yield as much as 10,000 cwts., but the actual out-turn was only 8,728 cwts. In its turn the crop of 1876-7 was anticipated to show a good result, but advices received in January showed the estimates were then reduced to 9,000 cwts., and it is now known that the crop will fall short of this lower estimate by a very considerable amount.

The directors of the London and Provincial Bank state in their report for the half-year to the 30th of June that the gross profit was £55,854, including the balance brought down. After deducting expenses and all other charges, the net balance left amounts to £22,288, and this sum the directors propose to distribute as follows:—£12,500 in payment of a dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent., £3,343 as rebate, £500 in reduction of premises account and a balance of £5,945 to the new half-year. During the six months 5,000 new shares have been issued, raising the paid-up capital to £200,000, and the premiums received on this issue amounted to £34,242, of which £33,728 was placed to reserve, making it £100,000, and the balance appropriated in aid of the dividend on the new capital. A new branch has been opened by the bank at Rhyl.

The directors of the Imperial Credit Company (Limited) state in their report for the past half-year that, including the balance of £8,123 brought forward, the net amount at credit of profit and loss is now £44,699. From this they propose to pay the usual dividend at the rate of 6 per cent., or 4s. 6d. per share, and they also recommend a distribution of 7s. 6d. in respect of each surplus certificate, both, of course, tax free. These two payments will take £33,375, leaving £11,324 to be carried forward. The large addition made to the profits during the past half-year is due to the recovery of an amount referred to in former reports as likely to reach £15,000, and which has actually netted £20,736. This has swollen the profits to a point which the directors do not anticipate will be again reached, especially as the gradual conversion of the company's assets into sounder items of security will affect the periodical income adversely rather than otherwise. Increased income can then only be obtained by the improvement of several large and important assets. The directors further announce that they propose at an early date to take the necessary steps for formally closing the liquidation of the old company, which will enable them to close the realisation account and otherwise simplify the accounts.

The directors of the Bank of Egypt state in their report for the past half-year that the net profits were £14,382, including £1,802 brought forward. They recommend the usual interim dividend at the rate of 10 per cent., carrying £1,383 forward. The liabilities of the Bank on current and other accounts amount to £240,489, and the principal assets are—cash, £143,168; Consols, representing the reserve fund, £110,000; bills receivable, £201,664; and Egyptian Government securities and Daira acceptances, £153,494.

Messrs. J. Henry Schroder and Co. announce that they are prepared to pay the amount of the reduced interest of £2 per cent. per annum on the bonds of the Amoor River Navigation Company.

The annual general meeting of the Globe Marine Insurance Company (Limited) was held on the 25th inst., and a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum was declared.

The directors of the Southampton Dock Company have agreed to recommend a dividend for the half-year ended June 30 last of £2 per cent., free of income-tax, being at the rate of £4 per cent. per annum.

The Indian Council has sold the usual amount of bills, but the price is nearly ¼ per cent. below last week. Of the tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India which were received at the Bank of England, £176,500 was allotted to Calcutta, at an average rate of 1s. 8·89d.; and £88,500 to Bombay, at an average rate of 1s. 8·875d. Tenders on both Presidencies for bills at 1s. 8 7/8d. will receive about 29 per cent.; all above in full.

The Khedive, from Southampton on 26th, takes out £724,200. The greater part of this is £373,200 in bar silver for Calcutta and £223,000, also in silver, for Bombay, while £5,000 in gold coin is consigned to the latter place. The dollars for Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Penang are respectively valued at £4,000 £46,000, and £70,000.

The market for Bar Silver is quiet, at 54 1/16d.; Mexican Dollars no change.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular reports as follows:—Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings have been sold from 8d. to 9d. per lb. and dust at 8d. to 8½d. per lb.; common to fair kinds sell at about last week's prices. Medium Saryune kinds have sold rather lower, but good kinds both of Saryune and Kaisow at fully previous rates. Fine to finest Kaisow kinds have sold readily from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 11d. for fine and 2s. to 2s. 3d. per lb. for finest. Pak Lin kinds have recovered from the depression of last week, and sales have been made from 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 5½d. for fair to good, and 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d. for fine kinds. Black-leaf kinds: Old season's show no change; in new, common to fair have sold from 9½d. to 1s. 1d. per lb., being rather easier rates; medium kinds from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. remain much as before, the demand being moderate; good, from 1s. 5d. to 1s. 8d., have been in fair request at full prices, the Oonfa kinds having a preference; fine Moning and Ning Chows have been wanted from 1s. 10d. to 2s., finest also remaining firm at last week's prices. New-make kinds: Common to fair sell slowly, but there has been some inquiry for the better kinds, for which full prices have been paid. Oolongs have been dull of sale, prices ranging from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 8d. for fair to good kinds. There have been no fine Souchongs as yet on offer. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers remain without material change, the finer kinds sell more readily than the common to fair. Orange Pekoes: The Macao kinds have sold well for good to fine kinds, as also a few parcels of long leaf kinds. Foochow kinds: Further arrivals of Orange Pekoe have sold at rather lower prices. Green Teas.—The public sales of these have gone off slowly, and prices realised have been very low in the absence of export demand, and only a limited inquiry from the home trade.

Dealers still complain of dull trade in the provinces, and the large delivery of new season's Tea during the month has been evidently to meet the London requirements, indicating a large autumnal demand, when the market is fairly settled down. The further arrivals of red-leaf establishes the quality to be far below an average; this has caused renewed attention to fine and finest black-leafs, which are selling at very reasonable prices, and as imports fall off will be found to be the cheapest Teas of the season. Fair to medium Teas are ruling low in price, and it seems a pity importers force them on unwilling buyers, seeing that before the bills fall due these Teas will be wanted at pence per lb. more. The steamers loading at Foochow are meeting with slow despatch, the Viking and Penguin taking several weeks to fill up, and the heavy losses on the red-leafs, except the few favourite finest chops will tend to materially reduce the ultimate export. Canton Scenteds of good quality are scarce and wanted, and prices show an advance of ¼d. to 1d. per lb. Tayshan Congou in less supply, but demand is inactive, as usual when the country Congous arrive in quantity. Green Teas—except the No. 1 lines of the different classes—sell at very low rates, and the import must be checked, if not cease entirely, until a higher range is again established. Indian leaf so far imported of season 1877-78 is of very inferior quality, and this has also tended to improve fine China growth.

SILK.

The market has been quiet during the week.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The Circular of Messrs. John Siltzer and Co. of the 27th says:—The inquiry reported at the close of last Tuesday's market soon dwindled away, and the transactions of the two following days were of small importance, at unchanged prices. To-day there has again been only a moderate demand, but by no means freely met, producers as a rule steadily holding for their quotations. Short time has been adopted in some spinning districts, and under the influences at present ruling the market, the movement will probably spread.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Parngon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COUGHS, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
(Ex Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium.

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.

None genuine without the word "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. Sold in Hong Kong and Shanghai by Watson and Co.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present mail's advices extend to the 13th June. The P. and O. mail from London, April 27, arrived out on the 11th June. The Japan Mail supplies the subjoined items of intelligence :—

A telegraph wire, connecting the Kanagawa fort and the camp at Honmoku, is to be laid underground. The wire has already been laid as far as Sakuragi-cho through Takashima-cho.

A letter from Kagoshima states that about fifty policemen are stationed in the island of Sakurajima, where a handful of tobacco, worth about one tempo in Tokio, costs at least 8 sen ; and one egg from 6 to 10 sen, while jinrikisha charges are 1 yen for 1 ri of travel.

An addition is to be made to the stock already on the Shimosa Farm by importations received from San Francisco by the Belgic. Mr. Ap Jones, who arrived in that vessel, has brought three mares and eleven head of yearling cattle. Of the mares two are three-year old bay Clydesdales in foal to a Percheron horse. The third is a three-year old thoroughbred bay mare. The cattle are of the short-horned Durham breed, and comprise seven heifers and four bulls, which were purchased from the ranches of Mr. Jesse D. Carr, of Salinas, and of Mr. Shippey, of Stockton. No trouble was experienced throughout the passage with any of the animals, which to the credit of Mr. Ap Jones and his subordinate in charge, Mr. Kay, have been landed in splendid condition. Four horses and twelve mares purchased in Kentucky, and a further number of shorthorns, &c., are expected to arrive by early steamers.

We are informed that the death of the Imperial General Nodzu, which, though often rumoured, has never been officially announced, actually took place some weeks since. He was really the only commander in whom the troops had any confidence, and there is no one on the side of the Government who is competent to fill his place.

Anton Williams, who, it will be remembered, was arrested whilst attempting to pass a forged $500 note of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation in February last, has now been set at liberty. When making his deposition, General Van Buren promised Williams that if his testimony led to the conviction of the principal offenders his own part in the crime would be leniently dealt with, and in the meanwhile he would be detained as a witness. The result confirming his Honour's anticipations, and the prosecutors meanwhile withdrawing their charge, Williams has accordingly obtained his freedom.

The trial of Peter Garhard Hansen for complicity in the forgery on the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, took place on the 8th June, when the prisoner, by advice of his counsel, pleaded guilty to the third count of the indictment, which runs as follows :—"Alfred Henry Charles Haselwood aforesaid further charges that Anton Bennett, alias Julius Hakon Kinchoff, at some time unknown to the aforesaid prosecutor, but before the said seventh day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand eight-hundred and seventy-seven, feloniously did forge a certain note of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, commonly called a bank-note, for the payment of five hundred dollars, with intent thereby them to defraud. And Alfred Henry Charles Haselwood aforesaid further charges that the said Peter Garhard Hansen, before the said last-mentioned felony was committed, did maliciously and feloniously incite, move, procure, hire, counsel, aid, and abet the said Anton Bennett, alias Julius Hakon Kirchoff, the said last mentioned felony in the manner and form aforesaid, to do and commit against the form of the statute in such case made and provided and against the peace of our Lady the Queen her crown and dignity." It will be seen that in this count the prisoner was charged that he did "incite, move, procure, hire, counsel, aid, and abet," in the felony, and it might perhaps appear that the sentence of hard labour for one year, which was passed on the prisoner, was a lenient one. It should be remembered, however, that Sir Edmund Hornby long ago laid it down as his opinion that one year's imprisonment out here was held as equivalent to three years at home, and probably the remembrance of this ruling influences the decisions of those who preside over criminal cases here, though we are inclined to think that in many instances the offender gets an undue benefit by this consideration.

It is said that the samurai of Tosa do not permit even a pilgrim to enter their province. Hitherto there were only about 400 troops garrisoned at Marugame, in the province of Sanuki in Shikoku, but a force of about 700 men has now been sent there from the garrison at Himeji. Pickets have been stationed on all sides of Marugame, and policemen belonging to that place have been sent to Awa and Tosa for purposes of investigation. A new fortress has been erected on Cape Wada, in Hiogo, perhaps as a defence against any assault that might be made from Shikoku. The garrison at Temposan, Osaka, was reinforced by two companies of infantry on the 3rd June.

On the 29th May a frightful hail-storm visited the vicinity of Shirayama-mura, in the province of Mino. It was preceded by thunder and most violent rains. The hailstones were of enormous size, weighing three and four ounces, and caused terrible destruction to the crops of barley and young rice. A similar storm took place at Akimura, which nearly stripped the mulberry trees of leaves. There has, consequently, been great loss among the young silkworms.

CHINA.

—o—

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News correspondent writes on the 8th June :—

There is nothing of any special interest to relate. The weather since the two hot days of last week has been fine, and the almost universal report is of promising crops. The wheat is almost ripe, and with a good yield of this the famine may be said to be ended in this region. From the more western provinces we hear that little or no rain has fallen, and there is little hope of a crop of anything ; I do not know how reliable this report is, however. The more one knows of this country and its people the more does a mingled feeling of disgust and pity fill the heart. A patient, capable people, a rich and fruitful country in everything that pertains to resources for sustaining a large population and developing great power, China stands at zero, almost, in the world's scale. It is very sad, and very bad, and makes one's very heart sick to think of it. So much for moralising ; I suppose the application is, let us each in his way do all he can to help on to a better day.

NANKING.

A correspondent of the Shanghai Courier writes under date of June 7 :—

While recently passing along the Grand Canal we arrived at Wusih just as an extensive fire, near the Catholic establishment, was in progress. The native fire companies did what they could with water and gongs to check the progress of the flames, but a large tract was soon in ruins. The fire spread so rapidly that a number of persons were unable to escape. Four charred bodies were taken from one house near us, and we hear of others, but did not learn the total number of lives lost. While the fire was in progress quite a number of those long-nailed and long-robed imbeciles, called gentry, repaired to the temple in the canal near by, known as the Hwang-p'u-twen, where they could quietly fan themselves and gaze unmoved upon the sufferings of others. At Ch'ang-chow we passed 5,000 Manchus from the north (some said Shantung) on their way to Hangchow.

Here, as well as at Wusih and Soochow, war has been declared against the small cash with which Nanking is being flooded ; but it is propable the Viceroy intends to take the matter in hand, for cash has just fallen to 1,140 per Mexican dollar, with a tendency to further decline, and one man who had established a private mint here is likely to lose his head very soon.

The wheat crop along the Grand Canal is remarkably good, but, though in that rich district there is an immense yield, it will all be needed in view of prospective distress nearer than Shantung, some of whose sufferers we met moving southward. After passing Tan-yang we encountered the much-dreaded locusts. They were moving northward in such numbers that for miles the country seemed to be a living mass of insects. From all that we can learn the scourge is likely to extend over a large tract of this province and Ngan-hui. The greatest anxiety prevails. For six weeks there has been no rain worth noting, and many have not been able to plant their rice crop, while others who planted early expect to lose it entirely. Prices are rapidly rising. Speculators in view of prospective famine are buying up the grain, and everywhere through the city can be seen "houses to rent." The chief products of Nanking are literati, and satin, and velvets. The former have suffered some inconvenience by the closing of opium dens for a year or more past, while those who manufacture silken goods all complain of hard times.

The Viceroy is praying for rain and ordering out the soldiers to fight the locusts, each of whom must slay five catties a day of these enemies. It is said that over 10,000 catties are daily brought into the city alone for inspection before being thrown into the river.

There was a slight fall of rain last night, but wholly inadequate ; though we have hopes of more.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 17th June; no later mail from London had been received since the P. and O. mail of April 27, which arrived out on the 7th June.

The question which was many years ago set on foot of establishing waterworks for the foreign settlement has been agitated again, and the Municipal Council have obtained estimates from Messrs. Laidlaw and Sons, Glasgow, with the view apparently of proposing a scheme.

The report with reference to native and foreign theatres in the settlements has been published. It shows a fairly satisfactory condition of things as regards the foreign buildings which are used for purposes of public entertainment, but some very pertinent suggestions are made for improving the means of exit from Chinese theatres. The very inflammable material of which these are constructed renders greater precaution necessary in their case than in that of foreign-built houses ; and the use of gas, which has lately come into vogue, increases the risk of fire, which was comparatively slight in the days of the oil lamps now superseded.

The North China Daily News confirms the news of the final conclusion of the Chinese Loan, though the terms which it mentions differ slightly from those previously spoken of. According to its information the negotiations which the Chinese have been carrying on have culminated in a loan of Tls. 5,000,000 from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, at 10 per cent. interest. This is understood to be at last definitively settled, and covers the loan of two-and-a-half millions previously spoken of ; that is to say, five millions, and not seven-and-a-half millions, is the total amount they have borrowed.

The following copy of the letter which has been addressed by the Members of the Tsung-li Yamên to Mr. Seward, and the other foreign Ministers, acknowledging the contributions that have been sent by foreigners for the relief of the sufferers from famine in Shantung, has been published :—

Peking, 25th May, 1877

We have recently noticed a statement in the newspaper press that foreigners of all nationalities have raised contributions which had been sent for distribution to the famine district of Shantung, to the relief of the sufferers, thus manifesting their delight to do good and grant aid to all men without regard to race. We, the undersigned, have been exceedingly gratified at what we have heard, and now beg to return to them, through you, our expression of appreciation and thanks.

With compliments, &c., cards of all the Ministers.

From the North China Herald we take the following :—

In the Supreme Court, on the 11th June, before R. A. Mowat, Esq., Acting Assistant Judge, a case, Holliday, Wise, and Co. v. F. Carnie (sued as agent for J. M. Canny and Co.), came on for hearing. It was a claim for Tls. 1,715.8.5, balance of account on the sale of 86 bales of shirtings, at Chinkiang, by defendants for plaintiffs. Defendants did not appear, and judgment was entered for plaintiffs for the full amount claimed, with interest to date, and all costs, the latter, including Court fees amounting to $195.15.

Mr. Holcomb, Secretary of the American Legation, has arrived from the north, en route for Nanking, whither, we understand, he will shortly proceed in an American gunboat, upon some official business.

The latest news here from Szechuen is that Mr. Gill had gone for a trip to Cheng-tu, where he purposed staying for a month, with the view of making some excursions in the neighbourhood. He took the celebrated FireWells and Brine Pits of Tse Liu Tsing on his way, which made the journey a little longer, but the result quite repaid him. He met with no incivility on the way, though at one or two places he was slightly crowded by people anxious to look at his dog—which seemed to be thought infinitely more wonderful than himself. The examinations were going on (16th May) in Cheng-tu, which was rather a nuisance, as they bring together a number of people of rather uncertain temper and behaviour, as students are in other countries ; but no annoyance had been offered so far ; and Cheng-tu is otherwise declared to be the pleasantest Chinese town yet visited. The Missionaries had news from Tatsienlu that an English expepedition had left India for Lhassa and Szechuen. But as we have heard nothing of the kind here, we fancy the story must have arisen in the Chinese mind out of a knowledge of the clause authorising such an expedition, which finds place in the Chefoo Convention.

We are sorry to hear a report that Tseng Kwo-fan's eldest son has incurred the enmity of his countrymen in Hunan, through his pro-foreign proclivities. A correspondent writes :—"I learn to-day the following, which my native informant told me reached here yesterday. What truth there may be in it of course I cannot say, but from what I know of the individual in question, and the natives, or rather the literati, I am only afraid it is too true. Tseng Kwe-fan's son, as possibly you are aware, has a very strong leaning towards foreign ways. Apart from this, however, it appears young Tseng has been employed in his leisure time during his term of mourning, compiling a small pamphlet which he eventually issued broadcast through his native province of Honan. In it he set forth in stronger language than was apparently considered justifiable his opinions regarding the superiority of Western civilisation over Chinese, and even went so far as to denounce Confucianism to a certain extent. For his good intentions, report has it, his house been burnt to the ground ; and Tseng, to save his life, has had to flee to Peking. That is the tale as my native informant told it me." It is just possible that the natives may be jumbling up Kwo Sung-tao's affair with Tseng's name.

The Missionary Conference have decided to omit Mr. Legge's essay on "Confucianism in Relation to Christianity" from the printed record of the proceedings, in deference to the wishes of some who regarded it as taking one side in the controversy respecting the term to be used for God in the Chinese language. Certain of the author's friends, however, members of the Conference and others, have deemed it their duty to publish the paper in a separate pamphlet.

A raid has been commenced by Ch'en, the Chinese Magistrate of the Mixed Court, upon the small cash used in the settlements at Shanghai. The Courier says that after issuing several proclamations without effect, and letting off several offenders who had been brought up, on their promising not to do so any more, he has now set the native police at work, and two hundred thousand of the condemned coins have been seized from the counters of various shops and impounded at the Mixed Court. Following the example of his colleague T'ang at Soochow, Ch'en is going to melt them all down into copper, which will be confiscated for the benefit of the State.

HANGCHOW.

The correspondent of the Herald says :—

On my recent visit to Shanghai, when some ten miles from Hangchow, I came to a district extending about ten miles along the Canal, where the principal crop was poppies. I had no means of ascertaining the width of the country thus planted, but hear that it is not confined to the Canal ; in fact, it is now being cultivated quite extensively just outside the north gate of this city. No measures are taken to put a stop to this plague, which not only impoverishes those using it, but is, I understand, one of the most exhausting crops ever put on the land. The large increase, or rather the introduction, of the poppy in this section, is owing to an influx of two or three thousand Wenchow citizens, who, abandoning their homes after the floods last year, migrated to this vicinity. Natives inform me that when the poppy is cultivated under mulberry trees, the exhalations so impregnate the leaves that silk-worms fed on them seem to become intoxicated, sicken, and die. Whether this be but an imagination or not, I cannot say. A native in this city is, I suppose, imposing on his poppy-growing neighbours. He ssys foreigners could not supply the Chinese market if they collected the opium by scraping it from the seed pod. He has discovered their plan, which is to boil down pod, stalk and leaves, and thus get twice as much opium as by the usual process. And he agrees to pay the grower twice the usual amount per acre for his crop. It is understood among the natives that the Chekiang Fu-tai intends imitating the Viceroy at Nanking, and trying to root out opium-smoking. This he hopes to do by shutting all shops except on the main thoroughfares, restricting these to doors three feet high, forbidding the use of beds, and compelling smokers to lie on the floor. He fears an uprising, it is said, were he to shut up all the shops at once. But by thus making opium-smoking disreputable, from the surroundings, he hopes to deter all who have any regard for respectability. All success to any effort to put a stop to such an evil ! But, if rumour be true, his Excellency is not a member of a temperance society, though he might be with profit to himself.

The silk-growers and mulberry farmers are much discouraged this season in this vicinity, because of an epidemic that has in some cases destroyed eight-tenths of the first hatching of worms. Some families have not lost any, while their neighbours have lost almost all their stock. The origin of the trouble is unknown, but could hardly be attributable to the weather, for there has been a clear dry spell for four weeks.

The farmers are becoming anxious about their rice crops, as the thermometer has marked over 90 degrees in the shade these few days, with a clear sky and a hard soil.

WUHU.

The Shanghai Courier has the following :—

Our letters from Wuhu give a charming description of the place and people. The neighbourhood is not very lively—in fact, it is one of the sleepiest, peacefullest dreamiest places one can conceive ; but the climate is good, and the more distant surroundings very pretty. The country is flat, with here and there a hill of sufficient height to relieve the monotony of the plain ; while running along the right bank of the river there is a splendid stretch of natural green sward, which is just now principally used for quoits. Among the more interesting features of the landscape there is a venerable pagoda, which escaped the ravages of the Tai-p'ings, and is now the abode of all sorts of birds, from kites to sparrows. We wish we could publish the delightful little sketch which accompanies this description. The people, too, are said to be singularly quiet and friendly. Foreigners are usually addressed in very respectable terms. Instead of being called yang kuei-tsze, they are almost invariably styled ta-jên, even the Consular constable being spoken of, or spoken to, as hsun-pu ta-jên—his Excellency the policeman. The other day as a foreigner was paddling up the creek in a canoe a little boy addressed him as lao-yeh (venerable sir), when his companion gave him a nudge, saying, "Don't call him lao-yeh ; you should say "ta-jên." This all tends to show the good feeling of the people towards the new residents. It is noticeable that children are the only ones who have ever used the objectionable term yang kuei-tsze, and they only very occasionally. We regret, however. to hear further bad news of the locusts, which now threaten to develop into a regular Egyptian plague. It is strange that there is always some part of the Empire suffering, either from famine, plague, inundation, or rebellion. The natives round Wuhu are digging holes to catch the young locusts, though, we believe, with but indifferent success.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald supplies the subjoined items of intelligence :—

Ting Futai is, we understand, about to pay another visit to Formosa. His Excellency will probably leave this port for Taiwan-fu at about the close of the current month.

A native boat was capsized on the 13th June, between Messrs. Gilman and Co.'s and the Custom House. Of three persons on board (all sampan people) only one was saved, the strength of the freshet precluding all possibility of a rescue.

Wên Yih, late Tartar-General of this province, is to be succeeded by K'iang Ch'un, a mandarin of some distinction as a soldier. It may be mentioned that the Tartar-General, though always a Manchu, is not necessarily a military man by profession.

Notwithstanding the reported refusal of the Foreign Consuls to hold official intercourse with the Tung Sh'ang-chu, or Board of Foreign Trade, the Viceroy has, we are informed, appointed another officer to the presidency of that Board in lieu of Chen Taoutai, who is about to leave for Peking.

The teamen at Hankow are said to have made very handsome profits on first crop Congou, averaging about Tls. 5 per picul ; and a large supply of second crop leaf is consequently, and not unreasonably, expected. Foochow teamen have also been favoured beyond their most sanguine expectations, and a like result seems equally inevitable.

Rice is, we hear, now selling in the city at $4 per picul. This time last year it was worth about $3 per picul. The former price is considered excessively high, though as compared with quotations in many other parts of the country, especially in Shantung and Chihli, it may be termed moderate. The large supplies recently received will doubtless have some effect in checking any further marked advance in value.

Heavy rains up country have had the usual effect on the river, which has risen to such an extent during the past two days as to seriously interfere with ordinary traffic. The shipment of tea has been prohibited by several local insurance offices, and the supply of fresh fish has been greatly curtailed. These are the only inconveniences experienced so far.

The Taoutai of Formosa has, we learn, issued a proclamation informing the people of the district between Takao and Taiwan-fu that a line of telegraph is to be constructed between those places, and warning the inhabitants to abstain from all interference with the work. Roads from the capital to different parts of the islands have been commenced, and an effort is being made to attract Chinese settlers from the mainland.

A special general meeting of members of the Fohkien Race Club was held on the 8th June, to consider Bye-Law No. 9, as adopted at the recent annual general meeting. After same discussion it was decided by a show of hands that the Bye-Law in question should read, "Weights for North China ponies of 12 hands, 9st. 10lb., with an increase of 3lb. per inch. Fractions of an inch to count in favour of a pony."

Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s Tea Letter, dated Foochow, June 16, says :—

During the first four days of the week under review a steady business was transacted for England and the Colonies. Buying was yesterday brought to a standstill by the rapid rise of the river, and although floods to the extent of those experienced last season are not apprehended, yet a serious inundation of the country has taken place. The rains are ceasing, and the interruption to business will probably be of short duration. Natives continue to assert that a short supply of first crop Teas is inevitable, estimates from the most reliable sources placing the probable deficit at 35,000 to 40,000 chests. There is no doubt that supplies are reaching us less readily than they did last season, but it may be that they are being kept back designedly. The decline in the value of common Teas on the London market will probably cause such a range of prices to be established for the lower grades of first crop as will deter teamen from heavy operations in the second, the bulk of which is looked upon now-a-days as common Congous. The following figures are worthy of notice :—

Last year the first steamer left on 9th June, with ...	2,200,000 lbs.
After which, owing to the floods, a gap of nine days took place
Between 18th and 30th seven steamers left, taking no less than	14,601,650 „
Making a total of first three weeks of the season of ...	16,801,650 „
This year the first steamer left on 26th May, and has been followed at fair intervals by four others with aggregate cargoes amounting to	9,302,650 „
Or, an export this year of this quantity, for the first three weeks, against last year, ...	16,801,650 „

Congous.—No fine Teas are now on offer A drop of Tls. 3 per picul is noticeable on many settlements of good medium Kaisows. Flavoury kinds have given way Tls. 1 to 2, and in common purchases have been effected at a reduction of Tls. 2 to 3 on those made last week. The opinion expressed as regards the quality of the crop, in reports of 26th May and 2nd June, can now be fully confirmed,—the desirable parcels of all districts, with exception of Fock Oan, are considerably superior to last season's. Souchongs : A few of the most desirable chops have been taken at last year's rates. Oolongs : Small purchases are reported, without change in rates. Flowery Pekoes : Two chops have changed hands on more favourable terms. Scented Teas : Settlements show no change.

FORMOSA.

Referring to the reforms instituted by Ting Jih-chang recently in Formosa, the North China Herald states:—

We referred lately to two memorials in which Ting Jih-chang related the steps he had taken to reform the civil and military administration of Formosa. The Peking Gazette of the 31st May contains further proposals for amending the fiscal system, if system can be called a heterogeneous group of taxes which, like Topsy, have somehow "grown" under different administrations as the land became more settled. First there is to be a redistribution of certain land taxes which, owing to changes in the area and nature of the soil, produced by floods, inroads of the sea, and other natural causes, have come in process of time to bear inequitably upon the owners. Next it is proposed to abolish a host of miscellaneous taxes, which yield a very small return to the revenue, but are made engines of extortion and annoyance to the people. Certainly a more curious collection of imposts it would be difficult to imagine. Among them is one levied from the aborigines, who acknowledge subjection to the Chinese, but who, as they cultivate no rice land, cannot be called on to pay the grain tax. Their avocations are confined to deer-hunting and wheat or barley planting, and they accordingly pay a tax called the deer skin and small rice levy, which the Governor thinks a fair one, and it partakes of the nature of a tribute to the lord of the soil. There is a salt-tax collected from lands where fishing pools are owned, and an impost known as the sugar and plantation tax, which are also considered fair sources of revenue. "Though of a somewhat petty and inquisitorial character, they have at least the justification of being assessed upon actual sources of gain," and are incidentally compared with the grit-stone tax in Szechuen, and the hazel nut and chestnut taxes in Chihli!—both about the most curious objects to select for taxation that have ever occurred to a political economist. These taxes, however, as we said before, are voted legitimate. Those which are declared to be most objectionable are "a multitude of petty levies on the value of each utensil employed by the fishing population along the coast, such as landing or deep-sea nets, ropes, bamboos, fishing-stakes, &c., the oppressiveness of which is enhanced by their being levied through middlemen," who buy the privilege and add heavy percentages on their own account to the sums which they have to pay into the exchequer. Ting Futai's memorials represent an earnest intention of thoroughly reorganising the Government and placing the island on an equal footing with the districts of the mainland. The primitive taxes instituted by Koxinga, which suggest in themselves the state of society for which they were invented, are to be swept away, and proof of the progress of recent years is given in the Governor's remark that "the increasing revenue from lekin and Customs duties on the tea and camphor production which has sprung up of late years may be relied upon to compensate for the loss entailed upon the local exchequer; while the development of the mining industry in the north of the island will also add considerably to the local revenue."

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 23rd June; no later mail from London had arrived out.

The Legislature Council met on the 21st June, when the 'Companies Ordinance" was read for the second time and passed. Chief Justice Smale, who it will be recollected opposed the measure on its first introduction, said while bowing to the decision of the Secretary of State he could not say he had altered his opinion, and that among those who thought as he did was Lord Knight Bruce. Seeing, however, the view the Home Government took of the Bill, he was willing to offer it his support and assistance.

Some sensation has been caused by a reported murder of a Chilian seaman in Gage-street; the matter was undergoing investigation when the mail left.

The Daily Press, alluding to the lorcha Mandarin, says that it is now about four years since the Chinese crew of that vessel mutinied, murdered the captain—an Englishman—and pirated the vessel and cargo. Disguised as a junk, the Mandarin has, it would appear, during all this time been trading along the coasts and up the rivers of Fohkien and Chekiang. The local authorities may or may not have been aware of her origin and of the character of the crew, but in any case it is difficult to imagine that they ever used any bona fide efforts to discover and capture the lorcha. The supineness of the Chinese officials is, however, in this case nothing unusual or extraordinary, and is traceable in great degree to the apathy of the British representatives in not more energetically demanding satisfaction for the murder, and the restitution of the stolen property. It really seems almost incredible that four years should have been allowed to lapse without any active steps being taken to bring the murderers of Captain Main to justice. Such is, unfortunately, the fact, however, and it certainly does not redound to the credit of the British representatives in China.

The fire brigade question has been further discussed, on the publication of the report of a Committee appointed some time back to investigate the subject, on the motion of the Hon. Mr. Ryrie, who was of opinion that a practical engineer would be of great use at fires, as he would be able to remedy any little defects in the engines on the spot. The Committee do not endorse Mr. Ryrie's views, and state that they do not think it expedient at the present time to make any change in the existing arrangements for the supervision of the Engineering department. But they are evidently agreed that the condition of the Government engines is not altogether satisfactory, and they strongly recommend "that boilers, similar to those now used in the Dockyard engines, be substituted without delay for those at present attached to the Government engines." They believe that the breakdowns of the engines are mainly attributable to the faulty principle upon which their boilers are constructed. In order that no unnecessary delay may take place in making the change they advise that the boilers should be procured, if possible, in the Colony, thereby showing their appreciation of the urgency of the case.

The above-named paper gives the following items of news :—

We hear that it is probable the Rev. James Lamont will terminate his connection with Union Church in March next. His numerous friends will, we are sure, hope that he may be induced to reconsider his decision.

On the anniversary of Her Majesty's accession to the Throne, a Royal salute was fired at noon from the shore battery, the Royal Standard was hoisted at Government House, and the men-of-war in the harbour dressed ship.

CANTON.

The Daily Press Correspondent writes under date of June 21st :—

The wife of His Excellency the Viceroy arrived here from Hunan on the 18th instant.

News has arrived here of a sudden and remarkable rise in the river up at Lin Chow, about five days' journey from Canton. The water rose, it is said, to a height of about forty feet. Many hundreds of people were drowned and an immense amount of property was destroyed. The water has since sunk some fifteen feet, but is still very high.

The Chinese are proverbially careless with fire, and it is a wonder that more accidents do not happen with the kerosine lamps. On the 15th instant a shopman in a shop in the western suburb managed to capsize one of these lamps, and was so severely burnt that he died in great agony of his injuries the following morning.

On the 16th instant, the Old Men's Hospital, situated on the eastern side of the city, was attacked by a band of robbers. The aged inmates, whose infirmities and poverty should have protected them from such calamities, were plundered of goods to the value of fifty dollars, with which the bandits made off. One of the old almsmen was severely injured by the robbers, whose proceedings he ventured to dispute. The affair has been reported to the authorities, but nothing more will be heard of it in all probability.

CANTON, JUNE 22, 1877.

In one of my recent contributions to your journal I informed you that sixteen literati, natives of this province—Kwang-tuung—had succeeded in taking the third literary degree at Peking. News has now come to hand from the Imperial capital to the effect that of the sixteen graduates in question eight have obtained the still higher degree of Han-lin or Doctor of Laws. The names of these successful candidates for the highest literary honours which China can confer upon her sons are being proclaimed daily by itinerant news-venders not only from end to end of this great city, but also throughout the vast province of which it is the capital. The Cantonese are, as you may well imagine, highly delighted with the success which has crowned the literary labours of their fellow provincial men.

A few days ago a Tartar officer of high rank arrived here. He is surnamed Khat, and has been installed, in obedience to Imperial commands, as Brigadier Tartar General. It is said that he is an officer of great promise.

We have received further reports of most serious disasters arising from floods. Thus, for example, the prefectural city of Ling-Chow-Foo in this province, and which is situated at a distance of fifteen days' journey, by boat, from this place, has been literally destroyed by water. It appears that one of the great artificial embankments by which the river (on which the city in question stands) was enclosed, suddenly gave way, and the waters having now a free course, actually flowed, at a depth of several feet, throughout the length and breadth of the city and its environs. It is said, and apparently with great truth, that upwards of ten thousand persons have perished on this occasion. The Deputy Literary Chancellor of this great province, who was at Ling-Chow, conducting the examination of candidates for the first, or Bachelor of Arts, degree, was swept away with many others. His body, to the great grief of his relatives, who reside in this neighbourhood, has not yet been recovered from the waters. He was named Hong-Chan-Sow, and being a ripe scholar, was highly esteemed by a large circle of literary friends.

On the 15th inst. the Dragon-Boat Festival was celebrated, as usual, by the Chinese. The gathering, however, of dragon-boats and spectators was not so great on this, as on former occasions. This circumstance is attributed by many to the flooded state of the river. The few boats which did come to the front in order to do honour to the festival, and each of which was of great length, and constructed so as to resemble a dragon, were gaily decorated with flags, and well-manned. Their paddles, too, kept excellent time to the sound of drums and gongs. This festival was instituted several centuries before the Christian era, in honour of a highly popular Minister of State named Wat-uen. It appears that this official being grieved at the profligate conduct of his Sovereign, whom, after repeated attempts, he had utterly failed to reclaim from the error of his ways, resolved to commit suicide. This resolution he carried into effect by leaping headlong into the river Meiklo. This rash act on the part of this much-beloved minister was witnessed by several fishermen, who quickly rowed to the place, with the view of recovering, and, if possible, resuscitating his body. All their endeavours, however, in this direction proved futile. The people, nevertheless, with the view of showing their just appreciation of the memory of one who for his many virtues was so dearly beloved, went, as it were, in search of the missing body once annually—a custom which has been handed down to the present days. On the 18th inst. a festival in honour of Luung-moo, or the dragon's mother, was observed. On the day in question several of the principal inhabitants of this city repaired to a temple which is erected in honour of this goddess on the outskirts of the village of Hwang-Chukee, where, by prayer and offerings, they sought to ingratiate themselves into her good graces. This goddess, who flourished about the middle of the 14th century, is held in high esteem by the superstitious Chinese. Yesterday the Ha-chi, or festival of the Midsummer Solstice, was duly celebrated. At this celebration, restaurants in which, by visitors or guests, no other food than the flesh of dogs and cats is eaten, are very much frequented by men in all ranks and conditions of life. A dinner of dog's flesh on this auspicious day is supposed by the Chinese to promote health.

MANILA.

Advices from Sooloo to the 23rd of May have been received. The Diario of the 5th June state that shortly the fortifications, military quarters, and other works designed for the improvement of the sanitary condition of the new Settlement there will be completed. After their completion the forts will be garrisoned by 300 men. The only allusion to the Moros in the published correspondents' letters states that it was dangerous to go beyond the Spanish lines unless a good watch was kept two uckless soldiers having been found beheaded on the 15th April, uch crimes being committed by cowardly and treacherous Moros upon isolated, helpless, and defenceless people. Another soldier was also found wounded.

Locusts have reappeared near several villages in Ilo Ilo, and were being given chase to by the labourers to free their fields from these voracious insects. By last accounts they had not done much harm there, and were pursued unceasingly. The sugar canes were looking exceeding well, notwithstanding the severe drought that had been prevailing.

Counterfeit Mexican dollars are circulating at Manila; they are lighter, rougher, and more coarsely made than the genuine article.

Small-pox had almost disappeared from Manila, the cases reported being very few.

On the 2nd, 6th, and 11th June, slight shocks of earthquake were felt at Manila and in several of the neighbouring provinces.

BATAVIA.

The Handelsblad of the 18th June says:—Trade continues dull. Manufactures are depressed, owing to over great stocks and want of markets, chiefly in consequence of the insolidity of retail dealers; but the natives also appear not to have money enough to spend much on clothing, so that Chinese dealers find no placing for their goods. In produce there has also been but little business done.

The Javasche Courant states that Major General Diemont, the civil and military commanding officer at Atchin, had, owing to ill-health, been granted three months' leave of absence, and that Colonel Van der Heyden had been charged with the functions of General Diemont. No other news has since been received from Atchin.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 30th June; no later mail from London had been received. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

On June 20 there died, at his patrimonial territory on Muar river, Johore, his Highness Sultan Alli Iskander Shah, Bin Sultan Hussain Mahomed Shah, aged about fifty-three years. Sultan Alli was, we believe, the eldest son of his Highness Sultan Hussain Mahomed Shah, with whom and with his Highness Datu Tumongong Daing Ibrahim Sri Maharajah the final Treaty for the absolute cession of Singapore in full sovereignty was negotiated by Mr. John Crawfurd, on August 2, 1824. In 1840 Sultan Alli was recognised by the British Government as the successor of his father, Sultan Hussain Mahomed Shah, and entitled to all the late Sultan's property in Campong Glam, as well as other property and rights. Owing to differences between Sultan Alli and the then Tumongong of Johore, Daing Ibrahim, as to their respective claims to the revenue of Johore, it was considered advisable by the Straits Government that the Sovereignty of Johore should be vested in the hands of one Chief, who should exercise undivided authority over the whole country, and the Tumongong having been selected for the purpose, with the consent of the Governor-General of India, in March, 1855, a Treaty was arranged by Mr. Butterworth, Governor of the Straits Settlements, between the Tumongong and the Sultan, under the terms of which the latter, in consideration of the sum of $5,000, and a monthly pension of $500, ceded to the Tumongong absolute sovereigty over Johore. Since that date his Highness has lived a quiet life, sometimes in Singapore and sometimes in his territory of Kessang or Moar.

An attempt, which happily failed, has been made to pass some 1,200 spurious dollars at the Chartered Mercantile Bank. It seems two Chinese women presented themselves and asked for a draft on Hong Kong for the above amount, tendering the spurious coin in payment. The dollars looked quite right, but the practised ear of the Shroff at once detected a slight difference in the ring. Two hundred dollars were piled on the bank counter, and pronounced by the Shroff to be all bad. Upon hearing this the women at once decamped in a hack gharry in which they came, before they could be seized, or rather perhaps before it was realised that they had deliberately attempted to pass forged dollars. It is satisfactory to be able to state that they were followed without delay, and that they were seized. They are now in custody with all the dollars, awaiting examination. The counterfeit coin consists of American Trade and Mexican dollars, and the imitation is simply perfect; in fact, were it not for the "ring," detection would be almost impossible.

Salangore, it is satisfactory to learn, continues to progress in its course of financial prosperity. Captain Douglas has made good his promise of some months ago about the issue of Bonds for the outstanding State Debt. The interest on the Salangore State Debt, at the rate of 3 per cent. for the current half-year, will be paid by the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, on or after the 2nd July, and double that amount will be available towards the Sinking Fund, to pay off the principal of the Debt, as was explained in the Financial statement regarding the Native States laid before the Legislative Council some time ago.

The following acting appointments in the Medical Department are gazetted :—Dr. T. I. Rowell, as Principal Civil Medical Officer, Straits Settlements, from the 1st July ; Dr. M. F. Simon, Assistant Colonial Surgeon, Malacca, as Colonial Surgeon, Singapore, vice Dr. A. F. Anderson, absent on leave from the 5th July ; Army Surgeon W. J. Campbell, Army Medical Department, as Assistant Colonial Surgeon, Malacca, vice Dr. Simon, from the 5th July.

A match at bowls for a handsome silver cup, given by the Maharajah of Johore, has been played in the Tanglin Club. There were six competitors and the cup was won by Mr. C. Stringer, with a score of 977, the next highest score being 970, made by Mr. L. J. R. Glass.

His Siamese Majesty's steam corvette Siam Mongkut (Siamese Crown), Captain A. de Richelieu, from Penang, anchored in the roads on the 29th June, en route to Bangkok, with his Excellency Phrae Nai Wee, who commanded the Siamese forces lately sent to Tongkah to suppress the disturbances there.

The 28th June being the fortieth anniversary of Her Majesty's Coronation, was observed as a holiday at all the Government offices. The flagstaffs at Fort Canning and Mount Faber were gaily decorated with flags, with the Royal Standard at the main, and a Royal salute was fired from Fort Canning in honour of the day.

The report for 1876 of the Raffles Institution is a very satisfactory one, showing that the institution is in a fairly flourishing way, financially and otherwise.

SINGAPORE, JUNE 28, 1877.

Like most old residents (we have no "oldest inhabitants" here) I cannot help wondering how long the existing state of official chaos will last in this benighted colony. We have one judge (Acting Chief Justice) to do the work of three ; and he, it is more than rumoured will in a few days apply for leave to recruit energies which should never have been subjected to the strain put upon them. Really the neglect of the Colonial-office to send out—not to appoint—proper judges in these settlements is a crying shame, and I hope you will "telegraph" the authorities unmercifully until they see the error of their ways. Not that this is our only grievance. We labour here under what may be called the "acting" nightmare, except that there is no blessed waking to prove that it is all a dream. We have an acting Governor to begin with. Then we have an acting Inspector general of Police, an acting head of the P.W. Department, an acting Assistant Colonial Secretary, and up to a few days ago an acting Police Magistrate. Next we have an acting Protector and an acting Assistant Protector of Chinese Emigrants or Immigrants, while as regards junior appointments they are acting by the score. The only real fixture seems to be the Colonial Secretary, which, as he is a most able man, is fortunate for the Colony, but places him on such a pinnacle of unapproachable permanence as to make people somewhat unduly envious of his good fortune. "ACTA EST" should be the motto of the Straits Government, as the public at least are decidedly "done" by the way in which berths are filled. But how can you expect an "acting" man to take a real interest in his work ?

Grievance No. 101 (I allow 100 more or less for the appointments, as Penang and Malacca go snacks in the mal-arrangements referred to) is undoubtedly the water-works. How Singapore contrives to exist on its present supply without becoming the constant scene of battle on the part of the public, of murder as regards the officials responsible, and of sudden death on the part of two-thirds of the native inhabitants, passes my understanding. People tell me that if I have water enough for myself I should be contented. Precisely ! That's Singapore all over. "Each for himself, and"—but I won't finish the quotation. You cannot, I fear, help us in this matter. Its fetich, alias municipal, and all the newspapers in the world won't effect a municipal question. The worst of it is that nearly all our ill-administered municipal matters are "questions." Why are the streets allowed to be filthy ? is one. Why is the canal allowed to air its stenches daily ? is another. Why are the Chinese rascals who infest the Settlement allowed to neglect the commonest rules of hygiene ? is a third. I could easily fill a column with such questions; but cui bono ; not to yours or mine, so I subside.

What is the S. S. Association about ? people are asking, and the (Hibernian) echo persists in answering "Nothing !" Pray stir it up. You know best whether praise or blame is the proper dose. Perhaps crediting it with virtues it has not will rouse its members to exertion. Perhaps it requires a remonstrance à la Boatswain Chucks, beginning with studied politeness and ending with "damnatory clauses" enough to make its hair, metaphorically speaking, stand on end. At all events try something for your end of the line. Out here our lively evening sheet keeps the ball fairly well rolling, though it seldom succeeds in scoring a pin.

Our Mr. Reed, the Nestor, &c., &c., of Singapore, has gone home on a short visit. He is an able man, but has fright of the Chinese on the brain, and has done his best to defeat the most sensible piece of legislation yet introduced, the Immigrants Bill, which will, it is hoped, put a stop to abuses which only pass unnoticed because a certain few of the mercantile community persist in backing up the dirty, insolent, ill-dressed scamps who, if at home in China, would speedily be taught their proper places. Mind, I have nothing to say against the really respectable Chinese residents, except that they are inclined to what negroes call "sassiness" and persist in making themselves ridiculous by combining wide awakes with coolie jackets, which renders the pigtail a somewhat grotesque finish to what politeness bids us call a man and a brother. I see the Straits Times has taken up the subject in a rather trenchant way. Its audacity is to be commended. Meanwhile it is a pity that it has not commenced a crusade against the secret societies which the inconceivable weakness of former Governments has actually recognised, though they are alike opposed to the laws of China and those of Great Britain—their sole aim being to create an imperium in imperio, and to set the law at defiance. A good deal of nonsense is talked about what would happen if an abolition policy became the order of the day—those who so talk forgetting, or not knowing, that John Chinaman is like everybody else, and always gives way when he finds it is of no use to resist—only it must be quite clear that resistance is really useless. A strong Government could probably do more in the way of repressive measures with a Chinese population than with any other. I see that at Hong Kong even the lawyer, Mr. Ng. Achoy, is not exempted from the law which obliges every Chinaman to carry a pass and light after nine P.M. If that's not restrictive legislation, what is ? And yet we hear nothing of riots at a place where, if any, Chinese influence should be at its acmé.

People are wondering what the newly-appointed "Protectors" are going to do in this committee. At present they don't seem to be doing much that meets the public eye; but that may be an official virtue. No doubt a good deal will depend on their discretion ; but if they are to put down existing abuses they should be told to go ahead. Time, I suppose, will show if they are of any use.

The report of the Raffles Museum has just been published, and as it exists only by report—unless a few spears and geological specimens constitute a museum—that is all right. But it really seems a shame that at so admirable a centre for collection nothing should have been done. Somebody wants "stirring up" in this connection evidently.

Heavy rains having recently fallen, cholera has decreased in the native town, for which Heaven and not the municipality has to be thanked.

The following amusing article appears in the Singapore Times with reference to the ridiculous costumes affected by the Chinese, which I have mentioned above :—

As the Chinese community is the largest in the Settlements, we may perhaps usefully draw attention to a hint sent us by a correspondent regarding a minor but not quite unimportant matter affecting our Celestial fellow-colonists. "Why," he asks, "do the Chinese residents of Singapore, who possess so comfortable and respectable a national dress, persist in transfiguring themselves into the semblance of the simiæ who are to be found usually accompanying Italian organ-grinders at home ?" Without taking the responsibility of his uncomplimentary similé, we are willing to admit that the dress of the average well-to-do Singapore Chinaman is in the highest degree ridiculous. In place of the neat and graceful robe worn by every respectable Chinese in his native land when he makes his appearance in public the dress here adopted is a combination of that of the low caste servant and the European stable-boy. A coolie's short coat, no stockings, and a billy-cock hat form (especially when found in company with a styli-h equipage and a Havana cigar) about as absurd a costume as any which could be devised. And we can assure our Chinese friends that, although politeness leads Europeans to conceal the mirth which such a garb causes, the dress in question excites only the smile of the old inhabitant and the unbidden laughter of the new-comer.

There is no possible excuse for this voluntary self-degradation on the part of the Chinese, and it might be well that some of their leading men, who adhere to the becoming long robe and skull cap, which alone suits the native style of head-dress, should exert their influence in favour of reform. The matter is of course quite immaterial to us and to our European readers. But if the Chinese wish to be properly respected, they must respect themselves. It is, moreover, pretty well-known in the Straits that no servant would be allowed to enter the presence of his Chinese master on any formal occasion, such as the reception of friends, a dinner party, &c., dressed in the way in which the leading Chinese habitually appear, not only in public, but when calling on European friends. Their practice in this matter is, therefore, liable to misconstruction and might be termed insulting, though politeness to a guest does not allow a manifestation of annoyance. Moreover, no Chinese calls on his native friends in Singapore except in proper dress, and why this civility should not be shown to the ruling nationality it is hard to say. At present it is put down to an absence of good breeding, though most probably it arises from an idea that foreigners do not care about such matters. There is a proverb in most European languages that "the tailor makes the man," and, in China itself, a similar saying (as we learn from Scarborough's interesting work on Chinese proverbs) teaches that, "As a house needs man to set it off, so a man needs clothes." Another Chinese saying is, "Dress makes the gentleman or lady," while numerous others inculcate respect to constituted authority and politeness to acquaintances. When a large class of the community are habitually spoken of as "appearing like coolies," there is something wrong, and we, in common with all who wish to see our Chinese fellow residents enjoy reasonable respect and influence, think it only fair to them to point it out. They may rest assured that, unimportant as the matter seems, the existing disinclination to, in any way, recognise them as equals arises from this neglect of a rule of politeness which would in China itself stamp them as people unworthy of consideration.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

In the Manchester Market, with a limited inquiry and flat Cotton market, symptoms of weakness have appeared. Both manufacturers and spinners seem inclined to give buyers some advantage in price, and this is mostly apparent in regard to Yarns, but so far the possible concessions have not been tested, the few offers actually made being still on too low a scale for business to result.

The board of the Jinman Steam Shipping Company have agreed to an interim dividend of 6 per cent. for the past half-year; £2,000 is to be carried to boiler and renewal acounts, and the balance to the next account.

CASUALTIES.—The Ethan Allen, from Singapore, for New York, has put into Mauritius leaky. The cargo is slightly damaged, and is being discharged. Topsides require caulking.

THE Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Oceanic is reported to have been off Cape Santaro, Van Diemen's Straits, on the 25th ult., having lost propeller.

THE REV. CARSTAIRS DOUGLAS.—We regret to hear—by telegram from Amoy—of the death of this well-known missionary clergyman. In alluding to the sad event the Scotsman says:—An attack of cholera lasting a few hours terminated his useful life at the age of about fifty-five. Dr. Douglas was a ripe Oriental scholar, and has prepared a Chinese dictionary of great value. A man of much general culture, he was noted for the devotion with which, in association with his friend and compatriot the Rev. William Burns, who died some years ago, he devoted his life to the missionary cause. Dr. Douglas was the senior missionary in China of the Presbyterian Church of England, and a brother of Principal Douglas, of the Free Church College, Glasgow.

THE CHEFOO CONVENTION.—In the House of Commons on the 30th ult. Sir C. Dilke asked the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether he was now in a position to state to the House the decision which had been arrived at by Her Majesty's Government with regard to the ratification of the Chefoo Convention; and whether any further papers on this subject would be presented before Parliament rose. Mr. Bourke said Her Majesty's Government had at length received a report from Sir Thomas Wade upon the whole question of the Chefoo Convention, but it would be impossible to present it until the Government of India had had an opportunity of perusing it.

Captain C. J. Wilkinson has been appointed Superintendent at the P. and O. Company's establishment, Calcutta, in succession to the late Captain Lovell.

MR. JAMES ASHBURY, M.P., has left London for Constantinople and the seat of war.

LONDON: MONDAY, AUGUST 6, 1877.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

The present mail brings the satisfactory intelligence that the prospects of some severe epidemic breaking out in consequence of the misery induced by the late famine in the North are diminishing. By the latest accounts from Chefoo, fever was abating, and no bad cases had shown themselves of late. It appears, however, that matters were still of a critical character, and that great care will be required to avoid the future spread of fever. Over two hundred patients had been received into the hospital recently erected, and it had been necessary also to refuse admittance to a large number. Every precaution was, however, being taken to keep the worst cases apart in matsheds erected near the hospital, and it may be hoped that by these means the epidemic may be kept within limits and the people recover gradually from the sad and emaciated condition into which they had been reduced. From Canton, however, the news of disasters is even worse than what was known at the date of last mail's departure. Terrible accounts are given in all directions of the loss of life and property caused by the floods, and our correspondent at Canton states that at the city of Lingchowfoo one of the artificial embankments has given way, and that the irruption of the waters has caused the death of some ten thousand people. An extensive fire, causing the loss of several lives, has taken place at Nanking. The scourge of locusts is still continuing, and it is expected it will extend over a large portion of the Chekiang Province and Ngan-Hwai. Great anxiety prevails there, and the price of rice is rapidly rising. The letter from the Chinese Ministers, with reference to the aid afforded by foreigners to the sufferers from the famine, has been published, and affords very satisfactory evidence of the good feeling existing at Peking at the present time; and of the good effects which have been produced by this charitable action. Mr. Gill has proceeded to the neighbourhood of Cheng-tu, in Szechuen; the natives generally showed themselves of a friendly disposition. Missionaries in that province stated that an English expedition had left India for Lhassa. At Shanghai the question of establishing waterworks has again been brought forward. In Hong Kong the Companies' Ordinance which was some time back referred home has been passed, with the amendments suggested by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The news brought from Japan still represents matters connected with the rebellion as in a very undecided state. There have been reports of various disturbances in new districts, but they do not appear to have been verified. Enough, however, has come out to show that matters were far from being settled. Much disquietude was said to prevail at Tosa. A very severe thunderstorm has visited the neighbourhood of Shirayama, in the province of Mino; causing great damage. Peter Garhard Hansen, one of those concerned in the forgery some time back of Hong Kong and Shanghai bank notes, has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment with hard labour. Some of the papers are inclined to think the sentence too lenient.

From the Straits Settlements we learn that the appointment of Principal Civil Medical Officer, rendered vacant by the death of Dr. Randell, has been conferred upon Dr. T. J. Rowell. An attempt has been made to pass a large quantity of spurious dollars at the Singapore branch of the Chartered Mercantile Bank. The death is announced of H.H. Ali Iskander, ex-Sultan of Johore. From Manila it is announced that the buildings designed for the accommodation of the garrison at Sooloo are approaching completion. Some damage had been done in the sugar plantations of Ilo Ilo by locusts. Counterfeit Mexican dollars had been detected in circulation at Manila. Slight shocks of earthquake had been felt in several districts in the Philippines. The advices from Java report continued dulness of trade at Batavia. Major General Diemont, commander of the Dutch forces at Atchin, has been granted leave of absence, and is replaced temporarily by Colonel Van der Heyden.

CHINESE LOANS.

ACCORDING to the last advices from China the arrangements which have for some time past been spoken of with reference to a loan have been completed, or are on the eve of completion, and the terms have been settled for the total amount required, namely, Tls. 5,000,000, or say about £1,400,000. Should these figures be confirmed, the sum which is to be raised will not be very large as national loans go, nor is it likely to be burdensome to an Empire possessing so much wealth as China, provided, as will no doubt be the case, that due steps be taken for the proper administration of the finances as well as for specially providing for the interest on the loan itself. That it has been possible to effect an Imperial loan at all in China is a satisfactory evidence of progress in centralisation, and there can be no doubt that this is so far a step in the right direction and may probably open the door to a further adjustment of financial matters to the general benefit of the country. The great difficulty which China has always had to contend against has not been any want of resources but a want of the means of bringing them under the control of the Imperial Government. The wealth of the country is, beyond any question, enormous, and can, by a due development of the resources, be vastly increased. But the system under which provincial and even local officials exercise undivided authority has prevented the Central Government from obtaining anything like the full benefit of the taxation which the country has borne. To some degree this state of things has been ameliorated by the introduction of the Inspectorate of Maritime Customs, which has had the effect of placing the funds obtained from foreign trade, if not completely in the hands, at least under the control and direction, of the Peking authorities; and an extension of this system to inland taxation—a plan which has more than once been suggested, and will, it is to be hoped, in time be acted upon—would, there can be hardly any reasonable doubt, make China one of the most prosperous countries in the world in respect to national finance.

Some feeling of disappointment has been expressed that while China is entering upon a system of loans, she has not made a corresponding advance in material improvements; but we are disposed to think that these somewhat gloomy views are not in reality sustained by the actual facts. No doubt it is to be regretted in some points of view that material progress in China advances by somewhat slow degrees; and to a superficial observer there may appear to be reason for disappointment when we note the avidity with which Japan has of late years adopted European improvements of all kinds. But there is something more solid in the over-tardiness of China than in the over precipitateness of Japan. If she is slower, we cannot but feel that she is at the same time surer. That she has leaned somewhat more than might perhaps appear desirable to improvements in the direction of armaments connot be denied; but the necessity for such improvement apart from any question of external war is manifest; and the advantage which the Chinese Government will obtain in maintaining internal order by having stronger forces at its command must be apparent when the difficulties they have laboured under in this direction are borne in mind. It would be an error to imagine that the Chinese Government are not alive to the necessity of advancing and of adopting modern appliances; but they naturally wish to see clearly how to do so without running the risk of weakening their governing power; and are gradually feeling their way to introduce modern improvements in some manner that will prevent a violent disturbance of the existing order of things. Provided they can do this—and there can be no doubt that it is only a question of time—they will, in the opinion of those best able to judge, be willing to enter upon a course of material improvement, of the advantages of which they cannot at the present day fail to be convinced. There are already signs that China is no longer disposed to look with supercilious contempt upon all that is foreign; but that she is, on the other hand, determined to introduce foreign appliances, such as railways, only gradually, and only in such a way as will make it certain that she can control them. This fact in reality augurs favourably rather than otherwise for the stability of the Government, the consequent security of the loans which may be contracted, and for ultimate success in the introduction of such means of developing the vast mineral and other resources of the country which to the present day lie almost untouched.

DELAY upon delay appears to be the order of procedure adopted by the Government with reference to the Chefoo Convention. According to a statement made by the Under-Secretary of State, in reply to a question in the House of Commons on Monday last, it seems that now that Sir THOMAS WADE has at last sent in his memorandum, the matter is to be referred to the Indian Government, and "no decision can be arrived at until their opinion upon it is ascertained." How much further delay this may be considered to portend it is impossible to conceive; but although we are fully alive to the wisdom of not hurrying a Government as well as that of not hurrying a judge, we cannot but feel that the public generally, and especially those interested in China affairs, have just cause for complaint at the unprecedented delay which has occurred in this instance. It was certainly a sufficient trial of patience to have to wait for the memorandum of Sir THOMAS WADE, and this patience is to be further taxed while we now wait for the opinion of the Indian Government. This of course makes it impossible for the subject to be discussed this session, and we may therefore conclude that there will be at the very least another six or nine months' delay. After all this time the Convention ought assuredly to be little short of perfect.

A CORRESPONDENT at Singapore calls attention in an amusing but nevertheless thoughtful manner to the large number of "acting" officials in that Colony. The grievance is an old one, not only in Singapore but in Hong Kong and other colonies, where it seems to be the rule that every office shall be so constituted that the head of it may be away on long leave while his deputy does his own duty and that of the head as well, receiving half his own salary and half of his superior's, while the other half is paid to the head while away. The arrangement is thus calculated to suit everyone but the public, who have a right to object to it when absences are of such frequent occurrence. Leave of absence from time to time is of course a necessity, especially in tropical climates; but the principle is often carried beyond all reasonable bounds. It would certainly seem that there is something wrong in a Colony where all the officials are acting except one.

WE regret very much to notice that the question, which it was hoped some time back had been set at rest, of having the billiard-rooms at the Foochow Club open on Sunday has again been mooted, and we fully endorse the opinions on this subject expressed by a correspondent, whose letter we publish elsewhere. In addition to the reasons which he urges, the force of which will be felt by all who have had practical experience of what life in the Far East is, it should be borne in mind that it becomes Englishmen abroad to remember their national customs and to put into practice their national virtues. No doubt it may be argued that the action of a club is a private matter; but in a small place like Foochow "the Club" is only another name for the large majority of the community, and its action in a matter of this kind would influence almost every resident in the place. We trust, therefore, that the question may be now considered finally disposed of.

WE learn that the statement made in the China paper, a short time since to the effect that the second Chinese Envoy would probably be appointed to Germany is well founded, and that LIU-TAH JEN will shortly proceed to that country as Chinese Minister.

MR. J. B. PHEAR, late member of the High Court of Judicature, Calcutta, has been appointed to the Chief Justiceship of Ceylon, vacant by the death of Sir W. HACKETT. Mr. PHEAR is a member of the Inner Temple, and was called to the Bar in 1854.

THE CHINA TRADE.

The Report on the Trade at the Treaty Ports of China for the year 1875, which has recently been issued by the Inspector General of Maritime Customs, forms one of the most valuable series of papers which has been published on the subject. In addition to the usual statements from the different ports it contains an elaborate report from Mr. Kopsch, the officiating statistical secretary at Shanghai, on the whole trade, both home and foreign. This paper, which has been compiled with great care, gives in a small compass an excellent idea of the China trade, and will be found of great interest not only by them directly connected with China, but by all who desire to form an idea of the commerce carried on by that country. Mr. Kopsch states that the average value during the past ten years, 1866-1875, of the direct Foreign trade of China, as carried on at the treaty ports in Foreign bottoms and Chinese steamers registered at the Customs and restricted to trading to the open ports, amounted to Hk. Tls. 128,717,201; or Hk. Tls. 65,993,875 as the value of net imports, and Hk. Tls. 62,723,326 representing the value of exports to Foreign countries. Since 1866 the total value of the direct trade has fluctuated from Hk. Tls. 114,617,526, the lowest, in 1867, to Hk. Tls. 142,605,174 in 1872, but the latter figures have not since been equalled. During the year under review (1875), the total value of the direct Foreign trade amounted to Hk. Tls. 136,716,176 (£42,261,568), divided in nearly equal proportions between net imports, Hk. Tls. 67,803,247 (£20,959,272), and exports, Hk. Tls. 68,912,929 (£21,302,296).

The total Customs Revenue for the year 1875 amounted to Hk. Tls. 11,968,109, which is about Tls. 500,000 over that of the previous year. The above sum was collected in the following proportions from the different treaty ports, viz.:—The northern ports of Newchwang, Tientsin and Chefoo collected Hk. Tls. 861,577; the Yangtze ports of Hankow, Kiukiang and Chinkiang, Hk. Tls. 2,422,506; Shanghai and Ningpo, Hk. Tls. 4,102,620; the Formosan ports, Hk. Tls. 276,931, and the southern coast ports, Foochow, Amoy, Swatow and Canton, Hk. Tls. 4,304,474. The northern division appears to be declining as a collectorate. Ten years ago it collected Hk. Tls. 1,049,443, or 11·95 per cent. of the total revenue for 1866, while this year it has fallen to the figures above, or 7·20 per cent. of the year's collection. During the same period the Yangtsze ports have increased their receipts from Hk. Tls. 1,577,190, or 17·96 per cent. of the collection of 1866, to Hk. Tls. 2,422,506, or 20·24 per cent. of the annual revenue of 1875. After fluctuating 1 or 2 per cent. during the past decade, the percentage of Shanghai and Ningpo has risen from 30·19 per cent. in 1866 to 34·28 per cent in 1875, the receipts for the year under review being the largest ever made at the Central division. During the ten years, namely, from 1866 to 1875, total maritime customs revenue has risen from Tls. 8,781,875 to Tls. 11,968,109, thus showing an increase of Tls. 3,186,224.

In respect to the Import trade it is noticed that more than half the value of the Import trade, and the preponderance of the Export trade is monopolised by Shanghai, where the shipping trade of China is concentrated, which naturally has the effect of augmenting the value of the Shanghai trade, although in reality the port is not as large a producer or consumer as some of the others which are specified. Next in importance as regards imports come Canton, Swatow and Amoy, which draw their supplies chiefly from Hong Kong, a British possession, and consequently treated in the Returns as a Foreign country. The Straits also contributed to their Foreign trade. In explanation of the absence of direct Foreign import trade at the Yangtsze ports, it is merely necessary to observe that these ports draw their supplies of Foreign goods from Shanghai, which are conveyed there by the river steamers, and that the few direct imports noticed against Hankow represent part of original cargo taken up by the ocean steamers which repair to that port to load with the new season's teas.

Passing to the Export trade, we find that of the Hk. Tls. 68,912,929 which represents the value of China's export trade to foreign countries during 1875, tea contributed 53·87 per cent., or a little above the average of the last five years, 53·32 per cent.; silks of all kinds contributed 35·68 per cent.; sugar, 2·33 per cent., and sundries, chiefly cassia lignea, chinaware, &c., as enumerated above, 8·73 per cent. Thus it will be seen that, excluding tea and silk, the remaining articles which appear as exports contribute little to the value of the trade or revenue. Of these staple articles there were exported 1,818,387 piculs of tea, of which 1,382,399 piculs went to Great Britain and her possessions, the balance, 425,988 piculs, being distributed between the United States, Russia, the Continent and Java. Of silk there were 99,566 piculs shipped abroad, and of sugar 593,011 piculs. The sundries are chiefly comprised of the articles specified above under the value of exports; and cassia lignea, camphor, fire crackers, mats and matting, straw braid—which goes to the United States and England—excepted, there are few commodities in which foreign merchants invest much capital.

A table, giving the value of the trade conducted by the different foreign countries with China, shows that Great Britain and her possessions enjoys 79·29 per cent. of the trade with China; the continent of Europe, excluding Russia, 7·10 per cent.; North and South America, chiefly the United States, 6·29 per cent. ; Russia (Odessa) and her Asiatic possessions, 2·91 per cent.; Japan, 3·19 per cent.; and the Philippines, Cochin China, Siam, Java, &c., 1·22 per cent. between them.

Speaking of the trade conducted by foreign built vessels under Chinese flag, Mr. Kopsch says that as yet the Chinese vessels of foreign type, owned by the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, have not often extended their voyages to foreign countries. Only four, of 2,628 tons, entered either from Hong Kong or Japan during 1875, and eight, of 6,113 tons, cleared for the same destinations. They have monopolised a large share in the coasting trade, and there can be little doubt that in the course of a few years the Chinese flag is destined to share a good portion of the carrying trade between China and the foreign countries where Chinese colonists reside in any number. A large Chinese trade exists between the Straits, Siam, Australia, California, and China, employing considerable Chinese capital, which will doubtless be conducted under the Chinese flag.

In the returns of the Revenue above detailed a convincing and satisfactory proof is appended of the steady development of Formosa. The receipts at the two open ports have more than doubled during the past ten years, being now Tls. 276,930, as against Tls. 106,187 in 1866.

An interesting return is given of the number of foreign firms established at the various treaty ports. The total number of firms is 343, and of residents 3,579 :—namely, British 211 firms, 1,611 residents ; American 46 firms, 541 residents ; German 52 firms, 367 residents ; French 6 firms, 311 residents ; Dutch 1 firm, 28 residents ; Danish 4 firms, 66 residents ; Spanish 1 firm, 103 residents ; Swedish and Norwegian 2 firms, 33 residents ; Russian 12 firms, 55 residents ; Austrian no firms, 36 residents ; Belgian no firms, 11 residents ; Italian 2 firms, 28 residents ; Japanese 1 firm, 26 residents ; Non Treaty Powers 5 firms, 365 residents.

The returns of the imports of cotton and woollen goods show no permanent increase since 1871. Mr. Kopsch does not consider that this is attributable to the internal dues ; but to the fact that the goods are really not wanted, so that free ingress into the interior could not create a market for them. It may be observed, however, in respect to this that this argument has been repeatedly advanced ; but wherever it has been submitted to the test of fact, it has been found fallacious, that is whenever we have been able to do away with any set of known barrier dues (such as those at the celebrated Wei-Quan barrier near Yangchow) we have found a large trade at once spring up.

Mr. Kopsch says that at Chefoo and the other Northern ports native opium is rapidly appearing as a competitor with the Indian drug. It is also stated by Mr. Holwill in his report on the trade of Chefoo for 1875 that "not only is native opium brought to this province from Shansi, Szechuen and Kwantung, but the poppy is now grown in Shantung to a large extent ; and within a few miles of Chefoo it may be seen cultivated in the valleys. There is no doubt whatever that the consumption of Native Opium is increasing. It is not only cheaper, but the Chinaman thinks it is much less injurious in its effect than the Indian product. At all events, native opium threatens a most serious competition, and during the past year has made greater strides than in any corresponding period towards the expulsion of its rival from the field of trade." At Hankow also, the import of foreign opium having fallen off, it is inferred that the consumption of the native drug is on the increase, and the returns show that Szechuen and other native drug is finding its way to Shanghai in large quantities, and that although the inference is that the growth of native drug has so far only increased the consumption, it can hardly have that effect much longer ; for, as supply outstrips the newly created demand it must finally decrease the sale of the imported article, unless the value of the latter is greatly reduced, which of course it can be by a reduction in the high duty charged in India.

Commenting upon the above facts Mr. Kopsch says :—

By the Indian purveyors of opium the rapid increase in the manufacture of native drug cannot be viewed without apprehension. "The argument of the supporters of the monopoly is that the artificially high price which the monopoly causes tends to largely restrict the consumption in China. It is believed that a careful study of the question in all its bearings would show that just the reverse is the result. It is the high price at which Indian opium is sold in China which has so greatly stimulated the cultivation among the Chinese. They have found that they can sell opium of their own growth at figures considerably below the price charged for Indian drug, and yet make enormous profits." The profits thus gained stimulate the extension of cultivation ; and although we do not find it has yet affected the supply from India, it cannot be long before the effects will become apparent. As regards power and cost of production, there is no reason, as far as cheapness of labour or available land is concerned, why opium could not be raised as cheaply here as in India. The imposition of a heavy import duty appears to be the only measure likely to induce China to rigidly prohibit the growth of Opium, by no means an easy or costless task in this vast empire. But if the revenue depended on it, rigorous and effective measures for its suppression would doubtless be adopted. This also appears to be the only solution of the question as to how India shall preserve the revenue, and yet see the growth of Opium prohibited in China. As Sir Rutherford Alcock sagely remarked in reference to the proposed increase in the import duty on Opium in China :—"Indeed, in the interest of India and our Indian revenue, anything calculated to give the Chinese Government an interest in the importation of the Foreign article is by so much an advantage to the trade, as supplying a motive for checking the growing of the Native produce, which has recently extended so greatly as to threaten the whole Indian trade."

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

During the past week the Chinese Envoys have visited the Alexandra Palace, and have also been to Wood Green, to the house of Mr. T. B. Smithies, the Editor of the British Workman, where they met many members of the Society of Friends, among them Mr. Thomas Hanbury, formerly of China. They were shown the prints and engravings for the British Workman and other philanthropic papers, and they evinced the interest in literary matters characteristic of Chinese. The works were presented to the Envoys and their suite by Mr. von Bunsen, the son of Baron von Bunsen, some years ago the Prussian Ambassador in London. Mr. Smithies stated that he felt he could not do better than select Mr. von Bunsen to hand the works to the Envoys as an acknowledgment of the manner in which the late Baron von Bunsen had assisted in establishing the papers for the benefit of the working classes. The Envoys expressed themselves much pleased with the visit, and appear to be taking a general interest in all matters illustrative of our ways and customs, and to be desirous not only of seeing our more prominent institutions, but of gaining an insight into the various phases of English life.

TESTIMONIAL TO CAPTAIN GULLAND, OF THE S.S. "GLENARTNEY."

On the 2nd inst. a graceful act was performed on board the steamer Glenartney, in the presentation by the representative of the Messageries Company of a testimonial, consisting of a handsome and valuable chronometer, to the captain, and a pair of binoculars, to the chief officer, in acknowledgment of their gallantry in connection with the recent wreck of the Meikong. The chair was taken by Mr. McGregor, of McGregor, Gow, and Co., the owners of the steamer, and among those present were M. G. Brennier, the London representative of the M. M. Company, Mr. Gellatley, Mr. Toole, of the East and West India Docks, Mr. Michael Boyton, &c. After an excellent lunch had been partaken of the testimonials were presented by Mr. Bremer to Captain Gulland and Mr. K. J. Gasson (now captain of the Glenearn) respectively, with expressions on behalf of the M. M. Company of the warmest appreciation of the manner in which they had acted ; and the compliment was heartily acknowledged by both gentlemen. Mr. Gellatley, in proposing the health of Mr. McGregor, mentioned that the owners had refused to accept any pecuniary recognition for the services rendered, and in replying, that gentleman stated that the Messageries Maritimes Company had insisted on their agreeing to distribute a sum of £200 among the crew. Several complimentary toasts were proposed, among them the health of Mr. Toole, of the East and West India Dock Company, who, in responding, spoke very warmly of the conduct both of Captain Gulland and his officers, and also of the Messageries Maritimes Company.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION TO QUEENSLAND.

The Vice-President of the Executive Council of Queensland has addressed to the Agent-General in London for Queensland a letter covering a circular notification to the chief secretaries of New South Wales, Victoria, Tasmania, South Australia, and New Zealand, as to the present position of the Chinese question as affecting that Government, and requests him to bring the matter under the notice of Her Majesty's Government. The people, he writes, had succeeded by their own efforts in founding a prosperous and well-ordered State. They were now threatened with a large and unrestricted Chinese immigration, and he did not hesitate to say that the consequences of this immigration were contemplated with serious misgivings by all classes. Industrious, frugal, and law-abiding as the Chinese people might be, they were not colonists in the best sense of the term. It was possible, indeed, that their presence there in large numbers might produce an industrial activity of a certain kind ; but it would be of a kind different from that which had hitherto contributed to their prosperity. The probability was that, in a country so sparsely populated as Queensland now is, it would entirely supplant European labour ; and the creation of a large, intelligent, docile, but servile class would, he did not doubt, seriously affect and change the conditions upon which the political system of Queensland was founded. But whether the unrestricted introduction of Chinese be in itself a good thing or a bad thing, he begged that the Agent-General would impress upon Lord Carnarvon that in this choice the Executive Council should not be constrained by any forced interpretation of international obligations. As British subjects, they valued the privilege they possessed, but if they were to be called upon to sacrifice their hopes of perfecting a community which had been founded on principles of social and political equality, they were not content to do so without a most earnest effort to avert such a calamity. He hoped, therefore, that the Agent-General would very frankly explain to Lord Carnarvon that the people were most anxious to be allowed to grow in their own way; that they should, in fact, be permitted to encourage or discourage Chinese immigration as they pleased, and that the existence of international obligations between Great Britain and the Empire of China should not be allowed to be a pretext for forcing upon them a Chinese population against their wishes or their interests. In the circular notification the Vice-President says :—

"We fear that both our rights and our civilisation may be compromised, and that our social and political systems may be imperilled, if, on any plea whatever, a Chinese immigration is forced upon us against our wishes and against our interests. The people of this portion of Australia will be the first to feel the change and its consequences, but I deem it to be my duty on the part of this Government to point out to you that it will not be confined to them alone."

Monetary and Commercial.

The London agent of the China Traders' Insurance Company, Limited, has received a telegram from the head office, Hong Kong, announcing a general dividend for the year ending 30th April last of $180 per share, a bonus of 10 per cent. on business contributed, and a sum of $125,000 carried to reserve. We understand that a consulting committee has been formed in England, consisting of Messrs. J. A Maitland, Alex. Michie, London, and John Thomson, Manchester.

During the week more steadiness has been perceptible in our Tea market. Importers, strengthened by telegrams of diminished export from China—the deficiency being to the end of July nearly 8,000,000 lbs., as compared with last year, have supported the value of all teas over 1s. 4d. and specially of those from 1s. 10d. upwards. Below the former figure, however, great irregularity in prices still prevails, whilst any parcels worth 11d. and under are little better than a drug, owing to the quantity offering and the well grounded apprehensions of superfluous supplies of these again swelling the export hither to most unwelcome dimensions. There seems, indeed, but slight prospect of amelioration in this class of tea, so long as the present system continues; as the dealers can have but little inducement to pay higher prices, while they can rely upon supplying their wants without difficulty in small parcels as they arise. The usual unreserved auction yesterday went off somewhat at a shade firmer rates generally, although the quantity put up was somewhat larger than usual.

During the week ended with July 28 there was a falling off of about 13¼ per cent. in the quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London, the total being 3,596,215 lb., of which 2,306,210 lb. was for home consumption, 653,388 lb. was removed coastwise, 604,401 lb. was exported, 28,034 lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 4,182 lb. was for ships' stores. The duty received amounted to £57,655, or rather more than 2¾ per cent. less than in the preceding week.

The Silk market continues in the same dull, lagging and unsatisfactory condition which we have had to record for some weeks past. The first Canton silks have scarcely attracted any attention, and notwithstanding the fact that, in consequence of the very small settlements in China, there can be no arrivals of importance for the next two months, the slight tendency to a rise which was recently shown has been barely maintained. Advices from Lyons state that the consumption there has run almost entirely upon medium and common kinds, the prices of which have been approaching those of the better class. The manufacturers generally appear to be giving more time and attention to working inferior silks.

In the Produce Markets there has been little variation from the dulness previously apparent, Rice being the only article for which any speculative demand is shown. Tea is without material alteration. The dulness in Silk continues, but quotations are unaltered, except for Japans, which are lower. Coffee exhibits a slight decline for both Plantation and Native Ceylon. The market for Sugar is still depressed, and China, Penang, and Manila have been sold at reduced values. Rice is in active demand, and numerous floating cargoes have been sold on higher terms. Nutmegs show a slight improvement, but other Spices are dull. Pepper continues quiet, with a declining tendency. A small business has been done in Cutch, Gambier, Sago, and Tapioca, at about previously ruling rates. Tin has sustained a further decline, Straits being quoted £66 to £66 5s., Banca, £70 to £71 per ton.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of July amounted to £42,713, and to £31,076 in the corresponding period of 1876. The Eastern Extension Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of July amounted to £22,224, and to £12,251 for the corresponding period of 1876.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—Our market shows no material alteration this week, but the quantity of samples offering has been larger, owing to heavy arrivals, especially of black-leaf kinds. The trade have been buyers of the more desirable parcels at about previous prices, but the common to medium kinds have been less readily saleable, and prices show ¼d. to ½d. per lb. decline. The public sales have been small until to-day, when over 1,000 packages have been sold without reserve, half being old season's and the other half new.

Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings have sold about ¼d. per lb. lower; common to fair kinds of old-season show no improvement. New also are dull of sale, but the few parcels sold at auction show no change in prices. Medium Saryune kinds have been firm; also good to fine both of Saryune and Kaisow. Ching Wo's have not been so readily taken, except the finer kinds. Finest Kaisows remain firm. Pak Lin kinds have been saleable at last week's prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair of old season are only saleable at low rates. New season's sell slowly at the decline recently established; fair to good medium kinds have sold ¼d. to ½d. per lb. lower; but good to fine and finest remain steady at fully previous rates. New-make kinds show no material alteration, the finer kinds being most wanted. Oolongs have been in full supply and difficult of sale from 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 3d. for fair kinds, and 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. for good to fine. Finest are inquired for, being scarce. There have been no new season's Souchongs on offer as yet. In old, sales are difficult to make. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Fresh supplies have been on the market; common to fair kinds have sold rather lower, but good to fine sell at full prices. Orange Pekoes have sold at about former rates, fine kinds meeting most attention. Foo Chow Orange Pekoes have sold at rather lower prices. Green Teas: Business has been limited, and prices remain much as before, the low rates current not increasing the demand. The public sales have comprised 17,258 packages, of which nearly the whole were sold without reserve.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says :—Business throughout the past month has been comparatively quiet and unexcitable, importers not now being such anxious sellers as was the case with the first arrivals; the consequence is, that the tone of the market has improved, and all good and fine teas must now be quoted firmer. The arrivals of New Season's Teas to date is estimated at for Hankow, 25,000,000 and Foochow, 9,000,000: total, 34,000,000 lbs. Clearances from 1st January to 31st July, inclusive :—

The above figures exhibit the following results, as compared with same date last year, viz.: Home Use, decrease, 2,574,935 lbs.; export, increase, 9,328,307 lbs.; the great excess in the latter is accountable to the fact of there being no direct importations to the Continent, so far, this season.

SILK.

The Silk market has been very quiet during the week, but with the exception of Japans there is no material alteration in value.

Messrs. John Kershaw, Kilburn and Co.'s Circular says :—There was no animation in the Silk market during July, and only a small daily business for actual wants was done, principally in Tsatlees from 16s. to 17s. Taysaams have latterly commanded some little attention, owing to their being relatively cheap ; but as holders are, as a rule, unwilling to sell at present ruling rates, business is restricted. The deliveries last month were again small, in total only 2,502 bales, but as the importations were only 649 bales the Stocks show a reduction. The advices from Shanghai continue to report insignificant settlements, so that we shall be a long time without any quantity of new Silk.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Monthly Circular says :—We have to report a month of very small doings in Silk. In the earlier days of the month some little business was done with the appearance of a hardening tendency in prices, but during the last two or three weeks transactions have been extremely limited. It is not a period of the year in which there is usually much to induce business, but the continued absence of settlements in China, and the knowledge that consequently we can have no arrivals of new Silk of any importance for at least two months, might have been expected to produce some effect, but none such appears at present. In the meanwhile the deliveries, although they may possibly continue on the small scale of the last few months, must be almost entirely in diminution of stock. The first unloading of Canton Silk, about 270 bales, took place a few days since, but has not attracted any attention.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son's New York Circular dated July 18th says :—The business of the last month in raw silk has been very light, owing in a great measure to the strike of the silk weavers in Paterson and New York. Many of the large concerns being closed, they have no need of silk, and of course buy none. The improvement in prices noted in our last has been well maintained, as stocks are small, arrivals light, and there being no promise of cheap silk from China. Latest advices are of small settlements, full prices, and firmness on the part of holders.

BANK BUILDINGS, HONG KONG.
ESTABLISHED 1859.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 20th June, and we have advices via San Francisco eight days later, viz., to the 28th June. The French mail from London, May 4, arrived out on the 18th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 11 was received on the 23rd June.

The Yokohama papers contain a large mass of detailed telegrams concerning particular incidents connected with the civil war; but of the general drift of matters there appears still to be the same vagueness which has been complained of from the outbreak of the war, in consequence of the Government keeping back authentic intelligence. The Japan Herald says that little is known respecting the further progress of the insurrection. The Government telegrams report daily victories, but as these are all gained with a loss of one or two wounded on the side of the Imperialists they inspire very grave doubts as to their correctness; but victories with such small losses must be very unimportant affairs. Continued demands for more men arrive from the commanders at the seat of war, and the Government is using every effort to despatch the requisite reinforcements. To do this, however, they are obliged to violate their policy, which has been to render themselves independent of the power of the daimio and shizoku, and with this particular object in view, the degradation of the samurai from their position as the sole military caste in Japan was decreed, and the army was formed by a conscription amongst the heimin class. This army was all very well for show, but it was soon found that the men who composed it were unfitted to cope with the warlike insurgents, and in consequence the police force throughout the empire (which is chiefly composed of samurai) was sent to the seat of war, and its members turned into soldiers. Even this had, however, been found insufficient, and in its extremity the Government had been compelled to turn to the samurai for help. An effort is being made to raise 15,000 extra men of that class, and at the same time, Iwakura (the Minister next in rank to the Prime Minister) has called together the kwazoku (the former daimio) and begged them to raise 10,000 soldiers amongst their whilom clansmen. The straits to which the Government is reduced may be imagined when it is stated that Iwakura, in his address to those nobles, said "it is impossible to sit quietly, and look on, while the existence or destruction of the Government is pending."

Upon the manner in which news has been suppressed in official quarters the above-named paper remarks that the alacrity of the Government in sending telegrams of questionable veracity for publication abroad in The Times and other newspapers contrasts very forcibly with its anxious repression of news here. Remote Europe and America cannot discount deceptive telegrams so readily as we in Japan can do, and people abroad are consequently more easy to be imposed on, but when it comes to be discovered that their confidence in the integrity of Government telegrams has been betrayed,—as discovered it will be in the end, when the local newspapers are received from here,—a feeling of distrust will be engendered which will not be readily allayed. As a sample of the sort of thing which is being done, we find the Secretary of the Japanese Legation in London communicating to The Times, on the 18th April, an official telegram about the insurrection in Kiushiu, stating that "all will soon be over." It is now nearly two months since that telegram was sent, and the war is still raging with unsubdued violence, with no immediate prospect of terminating. From information which the Government possessed at the time, as to the extent and very formidable character of the insurrection with which they had to deal, the statement that "all would soon be over" was unwarranted, as has been amply demonstrated by what has since transpired. If the object of sending these delusive telegrams abroad, with the object of getting them published in the foreign press, be to sustain Japanese credit, such a course of proceedure will in the end be found to be nugatory when it is discovered that these official telegrams, authorised and sent by the Government, are unreliable. The credit of a Government is based not alone on what it does, but also on what it says. A character for integrity is acquired in various ways, and whilst it is mostly obtained with difficulty, it is easily lost. If the Government wishes itself and the country under its rule to stand well abroad, as undoubtedly it does and ought, it must be careful not to do acts which will inevitably destroy faith in its assertions and representations.

Another serious collision between the sailors on board of men-of-war has occurred in Yokohama, resulting in one killed, one dangerously, and some of the others slightly wounded. It would appear that part of the crew of the German frigate Elizabeth, when in Takashimacho, received what they considered a provocation from some sailors belonging to the French ironclad Atalante, and in consequence the men from the Elizabeth mustered to the number of more than sixty in Takashimacho, and armed with bamboo sticks, bottles, and knives, they attacked the few men from the Atalante, whom they happened to discover. In an eating house half-a-dozen Frenchmen, belonging to the band of the Atalante, were at table, when their room was invaded by the German sailors, who routed them, and wounded two of them in the head with bottles. Five or six French sailors, among whom was a quartermaster, were attacked in the street by a largely superior number of Germans; one of them was struck down with not less than six knife wounds, partly in the body, partly in the face, besides wounds on the skull from a bludgeon. The quartermaster was pursued up a small alley— a cul de sac—and there he was stabbed twice in the throat, and a third wound direct through the heart. The Municipal police, an employé of the French Consulate, and officers from the German man-of-war were soon on the spot, but not in time to prevent the fatal mischief being done. The corpse, and the severely wounded man were conveyed to the police-station, where the cuts of the latter received their first dressings from the hands of Dr. Eldridge and a surgeon from the Elizabeth. There was a post mortem examintion of the corpse at the General Hospital. The wounded Frenchman was taken to the General Hospital in a very precarious state; one of his lungs is perforated, and the membrane covering the intestines has been cut, and was protruding from a wound in the abdomen. He was conscious, and said that he remembered being knocked down by blows from clubs, but was not aware that he had received any knife wounds. By last accounts, however, he was considered to be out of danger. The German frigate Elizabeth left on June 13 for Nagasaki. The preliminary inquiry into the affair was concluded, and resulted in four men being committed as implicated in the stabbing of the two Frenchmen. As their crime exceeds the jurisdiction of the commander, the offenders will be sent home for trial.

We take the following from the Herald:—

The petitions from the Risshin-sha and Seikensha (two of the societies in Tosa) have been presented, and summaries of their demands, which appear to be very moderate, have been published in the native newspapers. What ulterior steps will be taken respecting them is, as yet, unknown, but it is said that the Government has rejected them.

The Mitsu Bishi M.S.S. Co. have lately made several purchases of steamers, the Candia and Gadshill having changed hands, and the Duna is also announced as having been sold. The first-named vessel, has, however, run on a rock on her first voyage, and has sustained serious damage. She is now in dock repairing.

On the 17th June a severe gale of wind was experienced here, which caused H.M.S. Audacious to drag her anchor, and do some damage to the M.B. Co.'s steamer Chiri Maru. Whilst the vessels were in collision, the carpenter of the Audacious unfortunately met his death, having been crushed by an anchor which was thrown inboard. A very successful performance has been given at the theatre by the Dramatic Club of the ship, for the benefit of the family of the deceased.

The half-yearly meeting of the Tir Suisse was held on the 16th June.

Intelligence has been received here of the intended closing of the Yokohama Agency of the Comptoir d'Escompte.

It may be remembered that a claim for damages arising from the paper hunts last winter was made to the English Consul here. A considerable sum of money had been subscribed by the members of the hunt to defray any damage, as, although paper hunting had gone on for years without any claims arising therefrom, it was felt that it was only justice that the farmers should not suffer from the amusements of foreigners. The claims sent in, at first moderate, increased, however, at such a preposterously absurd ratio that it was felt necessary to make a stand against them, and eventually, as will be seen by the following letter, were settled for a much smaller sum. In the face of the advice, or we might say warning, conveyed in the Consul's letter, it would, however, be folly to attempt to carry on paper hunts next winter, and the institution, if such it may be called, will, after many years' existence, fall to the ground. We regret this, as we think that arrangements, satisfactory to both foreigners and to the farmers, might have been made had the latter been a little more reasonable in their demands; as, however, this appears to be impossible, the paper hunts must give way. Meanwhile it has been suggested that it may be possible to pick out a line of country on which steeple-chases might be run, of course with the permission of the owners, making an agreement with them as to the amount to be paid for each day's run. If this could be arranged, and a suitable piece of ground procured, it would, we should think, be acceptable to the members of the hunt.

British Consulate,
Kanagawa, June 11, 1877.

SIR,—With reference to previous correspondence, I beg to inform you that I have received a further communication from the Kenrei on the subject of the paper hunts, and the alleged damage to the crops in this neighbourhood. The last sum of 65 yen 76 sen paid by you through me is now received, together with the 34 yen 24 sen already paid in satisfaction of the three claims made in respect to paper hunts held during the season 1876-1877. The Kenrei, in writing to me, says that "though this amount is short of the sum sought in compensation, the claim is abandoned, and the balance no longer claimed." He goes on to say, however, that it is earnestly requested that in future no injury may be done to cultivated land, and that the members of the hunt be requested to abstain altogether from riding across cultivated land.

In view of the persistent opposition to the paper hunts, and the Kenrei's appeal to me in support of the representations of the farmers, it is my duty to caution you and others of the paper hunt club, being British subjects, against giving further cause of complaint by farmers or private individuals owning ground in the neighbourhood. Not only will the Japanese seek their remedy, if the offence is repeated, by actions for trespass, but they may be prompted to forcibly resist any intrusion on their grounds, not to mention the ill-feeling created, and which I am by all means desirous of avoiding its being directed against my own countrymen.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

F. A. Cope, Esq. RUSSELL ROBERTSON, Consul.

A fire broke out on the 20th June, about 9 P.M., in the malting house of Messrs. Copeland and Wiegand, on lot No. 68 Bluff, formerly "Hegt's Brewery." Malting was going on at the time, and through the negligence of the watchman the malt caught fire, but an alarm was quickly given, and the fire would probably have been scon extinguished if the pump of the deep well on the premises had not broken down at the very first attempt to draw water by it. To obtain water, it therefore became necessary to post engines half way down the hill to Messrs. Copeland and Wiegand's brewery in order to pump water from their pond up to the burning house. Thus the fire had time to spread, which, however, thanks to the wood-work being saturated with steam from the malting process, it did but slowly. The combined efforts of the native fire brigades, of some of the foreign firemen, and of a detachment of sailors from the Audacious, succeeded in confining the fire to the malting house and the large adjoining building, the roof of which was much damaged. The fire was entirely extinguished about eleven o'clock. The property belongs to Mr. Hegt, and is insured, under certain conditions, in the Staffordshire Fire Insurance Company. The damage, in any case, is not expected to exceed more than $1,000 or $1,200.

On the 27th June a petition to H.B.M.'s Court, Kanagawa, from Mr. Iwasaki Yataro, Director of the M.B.M.S.S. Company, claiming $7,000 damages for injuries sustained by the company's steamer Chiri Maru in Yokohama harbour on the 11th of that month, was served upon Captain Colomb, commander of H.M.'s ship Audacious. The case came on before Mr. Acting Law Secretary Wilkinson, and the Court was occupied for some time with some lengthened arguments upon demurrer, on the grounds—first, that the petition did not specify any particular act or acts of negligence or mismanagement; and second, that the Court had no jurisdiction over the defendant in respect of the matters alleged in the petition. The demurrers were, however, overruled, and the case was proceeding when the mail left.

With reference to the Silk market a correspondent writes:—The new season opened on the 18th June with the arrival of forty-five bales hanks. The quality is decidedly better than the silk of last year, and much greater care has been bestowed upon its manipulation. This parcel of forty-five bales was at once disposed of at $550 to $570, prices somewhat in excess of the anticipations of the producers. A further supply of about 160 bales has since arrived, confirming the estimate of quality; but the very discouraging news from Europe prevented any movement in the market except at a material reduction on the prices paid for first parcel; dealers finding foreigners indisposed to continue business unless at a reduction, held off for a day or two, but eventually yielded, and the balance of 160 bales was sold on the 27th at a decline of about $60 to 70 per picul. The quantity of the new crop will depend entirely upon the price and demand. All accounts agree in stating the cocoons to be plentiful; but that the quantity of silk will not be so large in proportion to the yield of last year. If prices continue on their present basis natives will consume a quantity of silk for home purposes, and so reduce the marketable supply. About 1,350 bales of old silk remain unsold, and of new a further lot may arrive at any moment. The requirements of the people for imported goods are pressing; but as they depend upon the proceeds of silk to enable them to make purchases it is not at all improbable a further fall in silk quotations will take place during the next few weeks, unless an encouraging telegram should arrive from London or Lyons, in which case a sudden advance would be inevitable.

TOKIO.

The Tokio Times has the following comments upon the aspect of the civil war. They are of the more significance in a paper which is known to lean strongly towards the Government:—

That the protracted conflict in Kiusiu has severely taxed the resources and the energies of the Government no person affects to doubt. That it will continue to cause untold hardships and embarrassments for some time to come is equally apparent. The unexpectedness of the outbreak, the treacherous ingenuity with which it had been secretly organised, and the shameful falsehoods by which its leader had diverted attention from his sanguinary designs all combined to render the task of the constituted authorities one of singular and painful difficulty. It is freely confessed that they were not prepared for the catastrophe. Sharing the misplaced confidence of nearly the whole nation, they had never believed it possible that the man whose name had been identified with the highest principles of loyalty and honour could be engaged in a traitor's despicable work. The cunning of conspiracy and low intrigue was believed to be wholly foreign to his nature. His plans were laid with all the advantage of absolute immunity from suspicion. He knew that his strength rested in the reputation for purity and integrity which he had fraudulently worn for years, with the sole view of turning it to base uses at the end. There was never a Government more completely misled and deceived. Taken by surprise, they found themselves confronted by a danger never contemplated, to oppose which no ordinary exertions would suffice. As soon as the situation was fairly realised, they sprang to meet it with spirit and alacrity. The sacrifices imposed upon them have been great, but not greater than the necessities of the occasion demanded, and the untiring labour of three months has been required to throw the rebel organisation into the condition of confusion in which it now stands, and from which it cannot hope to recover.

From first to last there has fortunately been no sense of insecurity and no doubt as to the final triumph of order on the part of the national rulers. Notwithstanding the scores of calumnies that have been circulated to the contrary, there has not been a moment of irresolution. The duty of the Government, however difficult, was plain. To have wavered for an instant would have been to throw the empire into anarchy. It was imperative that no cost and no amount of sacrifice should be shrunk from to quell this latest and most formidable endeavour to destroy the peace and prosperity of the land. Better the loss of myriads of lives and the outflow of every fragment of treasure than a relapse into the national degradation that a successful rebellion would bring. Suffering, devastation and penury might come, but the dignity and independence of the empire should be preserved. But with a surrender to the menaces of an army of banditti, the last pages of Japan's history would be turned. It was a question of the life or death of the nation.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Hiogo News says:—

Perhaps not the smallest of the evils for which the present rebellion has to be thanked is the cessation—temporary only, no doubt—of railway construction, more particularly the postponement of the short extension, so much desired, between Kioto and Otsu. It would seem, however, that long before this rebellion broke out and brought that, amongst other consequences in its train, the authorities of Kioto Fu and Shiga Ken must have decided upon making a really good road from Kioto to the shores of Lake Biwa, for on walking between Kioto and Otsu we found that what used to be, proportionately to the amount of traffic it had to carry, the worst road probably in Japan, had been converted into what we have little doubt is one of the very best. The only road that we have seen of the same quality is the new road to the Ikuno silver mines, and that is only eighteen feet wide throughout, whereas the Ostu road, we should say, is at no point less than that, and is oftener thirty feet, particularly at the Kioto end of it. Inquiries we have since made have elicited that the steepest gradient is now 1 in 30, which has been obtained by making a cutting twelve feet deep where the road used to be the steepest. Six thousand yards of the Kioto end have been made at the sole expense of the Kioto Fu, and have cost about yen 35,000—or rather will have cost that when completely finished, as yen 29,500 have been already spent, and there is work yet to be done which will cost about yen 5,000 more. This section has been principally under the direction of two young men who were educated at the Government expense, one in England and the other in America, and is, as far as we may judge, a fine piece of work. The Otsu section has been done at the expense of the Shiga Ken, but the only special information we have about it is that more clay and less stone has been used in its construction than in that of the other part. It is much the pleasanter travelling of the two at present, as the stones used for macadamising by the Kioto people have been in some instances too large, and we doubt whether those portions of the road will ever present the surface that they ought until they have had another top-dressing. We understand that a tax will be levied on all vehicles to cover expenses. It is quite clear that within the last few years intelligent men of Japan have recognised the enormous advantages, commercially and politically, of good roads over bad ones; and we hope that before long the Ikuno and Otsu enterprises will prove to have been but the first steps in a system which shall gradually embrace the whole empire.

A case of assault took place on the Concession, which is worth recording as the first instance of Japanese attacking a Chinese policeman since the latter have been employed by the Municipal Council. Four men, who had apparently been employed on the new building on No. 4, were out in the street, perfectly naked, when one of the Chinese constables moved along to the gate of the public park to see, as usual, that the tea-firing people on leaving work did not convert that place into a robing ground. The four men came out at the same time, and attacked the constable, who, notwithstanding that a foreigner was able to render some assistance, was rather roughly handled, but succeeded in arresting one of the four, who was immediately handed over to the Japanese police. We most sincerely trust the native authorities will see the advisability of administering some very sharp punishment in the case, as this kind of thing—open and premeditated defiance of the law—must be put a stop to at once.

CHINA.

CHEFOO.

The North China Herald publishes the following extract from a letter lately addressed by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Shantung to his Superior in Rome, acknowledging the aid which has been sent by the foreign residents in China for the famine stricken population. The letter is addressed to the Superior-General of the Franciscans, to which Order the Roman Missionaries in Shantung belong.

After describing the ravages caused by the famine, Bishop Cosi writes:—

"In the midst of such harrowing trials God never fails to help and console those who trust in him. Really, when we found ourselves in the greatest misery, and when we had no other means to help the famished but the trust in God, on a sudden his providence came to our relief. Generous Englishmen and others in the seaports, knowing the great distress of the Shantung people, by the means of the Press, appealed so warmly, so earnestly to the public generosity that abundant alms came pouring in. Of these, the Shanghai Relief Committee, through the English and French Consuls at Chefoo, and Messrs. Fergusson and Cornabè, assigned a good part to be distributed to the famished by me and my priests.

"I have received several letters from the Missionaries giving me the consoling news that, with the generous alms sent by the Europeans from the seaports, not only the Christians, but many pagans also have been, and are daily, saved from death by starvation.

"I cannot adequately praise the good heart of Englishmen. Certainly, on account of their Christian philanthropy, they have a great merit before God. I beg of you to unite your prayers with ours that the Almighty may send down abundant blessings over our great benefactors."

HANKOW.

The Shanghai Courier hears from Wuchang that the authorities are employing the soldiers during their leisure in constructing a harbour of refuge for junks on the side of the river opposite to the Hankow settlement. If this work is not slurred over, as too many public works in China are apt to be, it will prove a great boon to the boating population during the summer months, when, owing to the frequent freshets and the violence of the current, the mouth of the Han river becomes a very dangerous anchorage.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 24th June; the French mail from London, May 4, was received on the 17th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 11 arrived out on the 20th June.

A very important letter has been addressed by Mr. F. B. Johnson, Chairman of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, to Messrs. A. Michie, J. Swire, and F. D. Barnes (who represent the Chamber here), embodying the views which the Committee in Shanghai entertain with respect to the Chefoo Convention. The letter states:—

The Convention is divided into three sections relating to—

First.—A settlement of the Yunnan case.

Secondly—Official intercourse.

Thirdly—Trade.

Yunnan Outrage.—With the purely political part of the Convention comprised within the first and second sections, the settlement of which must have been governed by considerations with which the Committee is of necessity imperfectly acquainted, I do not propose to deal. I may, however, when expressing the extreme regret of the Committee that it has not been deemed politic to insist upon the punishment of those concerned in the murder of the late Mr. Margary, take occasion to remark that, as the persons responsible for that foul outrage are understood to be officials in high place, this illustration of the perfidious character of the Chinese Government fully justifies the objection which this Chamber has invariably urged to any reliance being placed on the assurances and engagements of the native authorities unless accompanied by substantial guarantees.

Indemnity.—The fifth clause of the first section fixes the amount of indemnity to the families of the officers killed in Yunnan, and "on account of claims of British merchants arising out of the action of officers of the Chinese Government up to the commencement of the present year, at Tls. 200,000."

The Committee being unable to form an estimate of the amount of the private claims preferred by British merchants and registered in the various Consulates, is not in a position to say whether or not the money agreed to be paid will cover such claims.

If, however, the payment of the indemnity is understood, as the clause referring to it may be taken to mean, to be a condonation for, and satisfaction of, all illegal imposts upon British trade from the commencement of intercourse until now, and to be a bar politically to any complaints against the Chinese Government in respect to such imposts, then I feel no hesitation on behalf of the Chamber in entering a protest against the altogether inadequate and unsatisfactory character of the proposed settlement.

Administration of Justice.—The second section, although headed "official intercourse," deals in its 2nd and 3rd clauses with the far more serious question of the administration of justice. The Committee fears that the subsidiary manner in which the clauses relating to the measures needed for the reform of the Mixed Courts are introduced into this section will lead the natives to believe that the tendency of the Chinese mind to regard a breach of ceremonial as a matter of greater concern than a miscarriage of justice is in harmony with Western ideas. . .

In place of a vague engagement, not binding in point of time, on the part of the Tsung-li Yamên, to discuss the necessary measures to be adopted, the Committee would have been pleased to see a definite agreement arrived at with regard to the character of the reforms to be instituted—to find, in fact, provision made as well for the promulgation of a Code of Rules to govern the practice in the Mixed Courts as for the appointment of native functionaries, furnished with powers of independent jurisdiction to preside over them. The Committee believes that elaborate proposals of this nature for Sir Thomas Wade's consideration have been ready to his hand in the portfolios of more than one of the able Consular Assessors who have had wide experience of the evils of the present system.

Trade.—The third section relates to Trade; and is chiefly concerned with arrangements for opening new ports, and the settlement of the long vexed question of Inland Taxation.

Opening of New Ports.—With regard to the arrangement for the opening of two ports on the Yangtsze, two on the coast, and certain points for landing cargo on the Great River, which in the opinion of the Committee forms the one valuable stipulation of the whole Convention, I have to remark that this measure involves a renunciation and practical condemnation of the policy towards China announced some years ago by H.B.M. Government.

In a minute on the subject of the revision of the Tientsin Treaty, published about the year 1868, the Board of Trade declared that H.M. Government did not want any more ports opened, and confirmed the opinion expressed some time previously by Lord Russell, when Foreign Secretary, that it was desirable to diminish the points of contact between Chinese and foreigners.

The Committee welcomes with great satisfaction the retractation of an ill-advised policy, which it believes has been in no small degree responsible for the troubles and disasters which have occurred in the relations between foreigners and Chinese during late years. Instead of assuming that foreign intercourse with China is an evil which requires to be guarded against, the Convention now virtually acknowledges that it is a good which requires to be cultivated, and the Committee considers that the recognition of this principle is a great step gained.

The Committee, however, is of opinion that it would have been a much more convenient arrangement if, in addition to the clauses providing for the opening of special ports, a stipulation had been made under which, in future, foreign trade might be admitted to any ports and places at which, by common consent, the respective Governments would arrange to appoint Consular and Custom House officials.

Inland Taxation.—The question of Inland Taxation is one which has been discussed for many years past without being brought to a satisfactory conclusion, and I must be pardoned for entering at some length into a consideration of its difficulties.

Imports.—The Tientsin Treaty secures the right of British goods, as such, to exemption from inland taxation on payment of a fixed charge in addition to the import dues, but the regulations provided by Rule 7 of the "Tariff Rules" attached to the Treaty, under which exemption certificates are issued, are incomplete, and are specially defective in making provision for British subjects only to avail themselves of the privilege.

The Chinese authorities were led by this defect to draw a distinction between foreign goods the property of British subjects and goods which, though of foreign origin, have passed into the hands of the Chinese. The whole inland trade being practically under native control, the transit clauses of the Treaty became thus for a lengthened period nearly a dead letter, excepting at places where foreigners were found to make false declarations as to the ownership of goods, in consideration of small fees.

Lekin.—Referring to the difficulties which have also arisen with regard to the levy of Lekin, after explaining the nature of the tax the Chairman observes that it is clear that the tax is either an additional import duty, in which case, as regards goods of foreign origin, it is illegal; or it is an inland duty, and in that case comes within the scope of the commutation clause of the Treaty.

He goes on to say:—

The committee sees no insuperable difficulty in framing rules which would at once protect the revenue and promote the interests of trade if only the principle laid down by Art. 28 of the Treaty of Tientsin be frankly recognised by the Imperia Government.

That principle involved—

1st.—The freedom from further taxation of goods of foreign origin on payment at the time of importation of the tariff import duty, and, on being passed into the interior, of a commutation of all inland dues fixed at one-half the import duty.

2nd.—The right of foreign merchants to bring down from the interior produce intended for exportation, on payment of a commutation tax (fixed at one-half the export duty), and the export duty.

With regard to the 1st proposition, it may be remarked:—

(a)—It was obviously intended by the Treaty that the freedom from taxation stipulated for should apply to the goods, not to the ownership of them. This principle has been accepted by the Chefoo Convention.

(b)—The settlement by treaty of a fixed import duty implies that no further duty shall be levied at the port of importation.

The Convention however limits the area of immunity to the foreign settlement at each port, and by thus virtually acknowledging the right of the authorities to tax the goods after they have left the importers' hands, and while they remain in the port, leaves the operation of the exemption clause of the Treaty incomplete, and to a great extent renders it ineffective.

(c)—The goods being freed from further impost at the port of entry, all inland dues may be commuted by a fixed payment. This privilege must be understood to be subject to reasonable limitations. Immunity from taxation under it seems naturally to cease when the goods become separated from the transit pass which is the evidence that the commutation tax has been paid. That is to say, so long as the transit pass attaches to the goods, no matter where found, or in whosesoever hands they may be, they are freed from taxation. Deprived of the protection of the pass by distribution, the several packages, or contents of one package, as the case may be, become liable to ordinary local dues.

Neither the Treaty nor the Convention defines the limits of the operation of exemption certificates, and they are in that respect incomplete documents.

As regards the second proposition:—

(a)—It is most desirable that the principle should be recognised in the case of exports as well as of imports, that it is to the trade and not to any special class of traders that privileges of exemption from taxation should be accorded. Natives and foreigners alike should have the right to bring down from the interior produce intended for exportation, on payment of a fixed commutation tax.

The Treaty unfortunately limits the privilege to British subjects, and the Convention confirms this invidious distinction.

(b)—As security for the revenue that the produce brought down under transit pass will be exported, it is only necessary to provide that payment of transit duty and export duty be made together, or bonds for the same be taken, when exemption certificates are applied for.

To render the rules effective, it is indispensable that they be enforced by an Imperial notification couched in precise and unambiguous terms.

With reference to opium the letter says :—The 3rd clause of section 3 in the Convention deals with inland taxation on opium, and it is necessary that the committee should point out clearly the serious consequences which the acceptance by the British Government of the concession proposed by this clause would involve.

By the Treaty of Tientsin opium is specially excepted from the benefit of the arrangement under which inland taxation on imports generally may be commuted by a fixed payment. After the opium leaves the possession of the importer, the Chinese Government in theory are at liberty to tax it to any extent they please. But in practice the power to impose inland duties is limited by the operations of the native smuggler, and the higher the tax the greater the premium upon evasion.

Clause 3, which is intended to enable the Chinese Government to levy, before the opium is removed from the control of the Customs, and without limit, inland dues as an addition to the tariff import duty, would prevent evasion, and virtually place in a very large measure the control of the Indian opium revenue in the hands of the Chinese.

This is not a question which concerns the cause of temperance, but is simply one as to whether the production of opium in India shall be discouraged by a premium being offered for the growth of the poppy plant in this country over which its cultivation is rapidly extending.

If this clause be agreed to, the Chinese will have it in their power by the imposition of heavy duties to extinguish the Indian trade, and it is for H.M. Government to decide whether they will permit the Tientsin Treaty to be modified in order to promote such a result.

The letter concludes by suggesting that the convention should have made some stipulations with regard to the establishment of bonded warehouses ; the introduction of a Chinese currency and the conservancy of the rivers and harbours.

Beyond this there is but little local news in the Shanghai papers by the present mail. The most interesting item is with reference to the waterworks scheme, in regard to which the Municipal Ministers mention that the Health Officer has been asked to report again upon the water at the various sources from which it has been suggested to draw supplies. In regard to this the Daily News says :—We hardly imagine that any very serious alteration can have taken place since the last reports were obtained ; but the matter has been pending so long that we presume the Council think it well to start afresh.

With reference to the Report lately drawn up regarding the means of egress from public buildings in Shanghai, the Temperance Society have stated their willingness to avail themselves of the suggestions in regard to their Hall. It is, however, in the native theatres that the chief danger lies.

The Herald prints a rather curious document, of which a correspondent has sent a translation. It is a report by a late Taoutai of a treaty port, of an interview with the two Empresses, written down immediately after the event. The Empress mother appears to have been the questioner, and displays a shrewd knowledge of current events. It is gratifying to learn that the foreigners at —— are reasonable, and that there is at least one district in China where no tail-cutting took place, and where the prefects and magistrates act uprightly and obey the law. The Empress evidently acquaints herself beforehand with the personal career of those who are about to be presented, or she would not have known how to put the questions she did about her present visitor's services. Her asking about foreigners immediately after she had been asking about "sectarian" rebels seems to show some association in the Imperial mind between the two ; and the use of the word "sectarian," with the Taoutai's reply, shows that the late paper-man mania was regarded as connected with some religious sect.

The Courier says :—

We learn that a woman has been recently exposed in a cangue at the Mixed Court for a breach of Municipal regulations. Without calling in question the wisdom of the regulation we need only say that the subject has been one of much comment amongst the native population, to whom such a sight is apparently unprecedented—Chinese practice in this matter at least protecting the weaker sex.

NINGPO.

The celebrated bridge of boats has been sold to the Chinese Government for Tls. 16,000. The money had not been paid, but it was expected the matter would be settled on the return of the Taoutai in a few days.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald gives the following news :—

It is rumoured that the two disgraced members of the local Foreign Board who were convicted of having entered into fraudulent contracts on account of the Provincial Government are about to be executed ; the Peking authorities—to whom the case was referred on appeal—having decided that the capital punishment adjudged shall be enforced.

Chen Taoutai, late President of the Tung Shlang-chu, and the officials chiefly concerned in the recent arrest of ex-pilot Porter, has, we hear, rather spoilt his case against "Po, the great American Police Superintendent." Porter was charged, it will be remembered, amongst other alleged offences, with having extorted money from the inhabitants of several fishing villages. It seems that these villagers sent a petition to Chen Taoutai shortly after Porter's arrest, in which they clearly exonerated Porter from the charge of having levied black mail on their fishing-grounds. We now learn that this petition was pigeon-holed by the worthy Taoutai for several weeks, until at last, Porter having been discharged, nothing could be gained by a continued suppression of the document.

On the 20th inst. a public meeting was held at the Club, "to consider the best steps to be taken to induce the native authorities to dredge the river, stop the discharge of ballast from junks, and other precautions towards keeping the channel of the river clear. Mr. W. Paterson occupied the chair, and in the course of a few introductory remarks reminded the meeting that the present was a most appropriate time to again bring forward this important and ever-recurring question. They had all witnessed the havoc caused by the inundation then subsiding. Some of them had suffered losses in consequence, while all had experienced great inconvenience. Ting Futai would, he had no doubt, be ready to consider any practical suggestions they might be prepared to offer through their Consuls ; and if his Excellency would not take the matter in hand, there was scarcely a Chinese official in the Empire that would lend an ear to the matter. The Chairman concluded by suggesting the election of a committee, to be empowered to inquire into the condition of the river, the causes of these annual floods, and to prepare a memorial on behalf of the foreign community for presentation to the Chinese Authorities through the Foreign Consuls. A committee of six was accordingly appointed ; and the meeting terminated with the usual vote of thanks to the Chairman.

A meeting of the Foreign Community was convened by the Consuls on the 19th June—"to consider the expediency of inaugurating measures for the temporary relief of natives suffering from the inundation." The meeting was held at the Club, and Mr. Sinclair, H.B.M.'s Consul, occupied the chair. The Chairman, after setting forth the object of the meeting, briefly stated that he had that day received information from the Chinese authorities to the effect that there was great distress in the city and suburbs ; but that beyond this bare fact he was not advised. The Chairman concluded by calling upon the Rev. S. L. Baldwin to address the meeting. Mr. Baldwin said that he had that day traversed the southern suburb and the neighbourhood of the South Gate of the city, and could testify to the existence of great misery and suffering. Thousands of people were reduced to absolute poverty and starvation, and while the Chinese authorities were doing all that they could towards the relief of the sufferers, he felt assured that much might be done through the aid of the foreign community. Mr. Galton then proposed that a committee, consisting of Messrs. Sinclair, De Lano, Ristelhueber, Leith, Young, and Dr. Osgood, be appointed to inquire into the subject, and to devise such measures as might seem advisable. Dr. Beaumont suggested that delay in such a case would be undesirable—while the Committee were deliberating, people might be starving, and it would therefore be better, he thought, to start a subscription in the room, and commence administering relief at once. Mr. Sheppard was of the same opinion, and this amendment was finally incorporated with the original proposition. The meeting separated after a vote of thanks to the chairman.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 30th June ; the French mail from London, May 18, arrived out on the 24th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 25 was received on the 29th June.

There has not been much news of general interest since the departure of the last mail. The public are apparently still somewhat impatient at the suspension by the Governor of the sentence of flogging a Wongapo, who has again brought himself into notice by giving great trouble to the Jail authorities. As is natural to a scoundrel of the Apo class, he waxes fat and kicks in return for lenience displayed towards him. This worthy nearly succeeded in breaking out of his cell ; and it has been found advisable to appoint a Commission (consisting of Messrs. Russell and Stewart) to inquire into the circumstances of the affair. The prisoner complained of continual ill-treatment in Jail.

A portrait of the late Governor, Sir Arthur Kennedy, has been painted by a local amateur, Mr. J. B. Coughtrie, and a subscription list opened in order to secure it and place it in the Town Hall was rapidly filled up. The list embraces names from nearly all the various classes of society, as well as several nationalities which make up this cosmopolitan community ; and the impromptu manner in which the idea suggested by the local journals was acted upon, together with the rapidity with which the subscription list was filled up, show the friendly remembrance which is generally entertained towards Sir Arthur, the late Governor.

From the China Mail we take the following items :—The recent arrival in Hong Kong of an Annamese gun-vessel, with a large sum of money and a valuable cargo, is by no means an insignificant sign of enterprise on the part of those concerned ; and it would not be objected to, we fancy, were the King of Annam to favour our port with a monthly or quarterly experiment of a like kind. It would tend to bring "grist to the mill," at all events ; and the machinery, &c., required by his Majesty might be supplied from this port. A contract has, indeed, been made between the King of Annam and Mr. Dunphy (formerly of the Novelty Iron Works, New York and Hong Kong), for the construction of a marine boiler for one of the Annamese gun-vessels ; and we trust this is only the commencement of a considerable business connection between Hong Kong and Annam.

A complicated question of international law cropped up at the Police Court in reference to the quasi man-of-war character of the Annamese vessel now in the harbour of this colony. A Chinaman applied for a summons for assault against an Annamese on board, and it was granted, owing partly to some misunderstanding. The complainant was erroneously understood to have applied against a Chinaman who did not belong to the vessel, but who happened to be on board. The man went on board to buy cow-hides, and a dispute arose as to price, which led to the assault. The vessel is a Government vessel ; but she came here on a commercial expedition, bringing cargo here to sell and taking back imports to Annam. Under these circumstances, the Magistrate granted the summons, but although service was duly made, the defendant did not appear. The Magistrate hesitated now to take further proceedings until the question of the vessel's status was settled by the Government, to whom the matter had been reported. This reference would have been unnecessary had the case of "Landstein v. the King of Annam" been allowed to proceed to its legitimate end, instead of being compromised, for the Dang Wee formed the bone of contention in that famous suit.

The s.s. Sunda, which arrived here on 28th June with the mails from Yokohama, was caught in a typhoon on the 24th. She left Yokohama on the 20th, and experienced moderate and fine weather up to noon of the 23rd, when the sky became overcast, with rain, and a light E.S.S., breeze. The wind gradually increased, and at 4 P.M. it was blowing a strong breeze with a high confused swell. At half-past nine heavy rollers were observed coming up from S.S.E., and the weather was very ominous, everything indicating the approach of a typhoon from the S.E., travelling westward. The hatches were battened down and the boats cleared ready for lowering in case of need, the wind and sea rapidly increasing, with a rapidly falling barometer. At eleven P.M. the vessel was brought head to sea, and at midnight the barometer registered 29.59, still falling rapidly. The wind and sea continued to increase with violent gusts. At four A.M. the gale had visibly increased, the squalls being much more frequent, and the sea much more irregular and running at times in tremendous pyramidal masses. The Sunda behaved admirably, and although heeling over considerably during the strength of the squalls, she shipped very little heavy water, but was enveloped in a continuous sheet of blinding spray. The gale had reached its height between 6 and 8 A.M. of the 24th, the reading of the barometer then being 29.00, but at nine o'clock it had risen four tenths. The centre of the gale was supposed to have passed the Sunda at 6 A.M. Shortly before noon, owing to the heavy seas repeatedly striking the port davits, they unshipped, and the boat was smashed to pieces and washed away. At noon the weather showed signs of moderating, and at midnight the weather was again fine with a fresh breeze blowing. The Sunda's position at noon of the 23rd (by account) was lat. 29° 50′ N. and long. 126° 47′ E., and at noon of the 24th (also by account) lat. 29° 17′ N. and long 125° 25′ E., Turnabout Island bearing S. 51° W. 370 miles. Although the Sunda has escaped any serious damage we shall not be surprised to learn that others have been less fortunate.

The promoters of the Anti-Opium Society will be glad to learn that the Emperor of China has issued an Edict prohibiting opium smoking throughout the country, particularly among officials, scholars and the soldiery. The Edict was issued at the instance of H.E. Kwoh Sung Tao and his colleague, Envoys to Great Britain. It commands Generals, Governors-General and Governors in the various provinces to draw up regulations, adapted to local circumstances, for carrying out this prohibition, which is to take effect three years hence ; meantime the smokers are, we suppose, expected to give up the bad habit. What practical effect this measure may have remains to be seen.

A Chinese giant, said to be taller than Chang, is now being exhibited in Hong Kong, and will shortly start on a tour round the world.

A correspondent writes as follows :—From all that I can see I cannot think that our new Governor is likely to give much satisfaction. The remarks made about him in Parliament and the manner in which the whole community here protested against the very suggestion of the changes which he is said to have proposed seem somewhat to have quieted him down, but I fear this will be only for a time. It must, however, in fairness, be borne in mind that he suffers somewhat from coming after so very popular a man as Sir Arthur Kennedy, as, certainly in my experience in China, with the exception of the late Vice-Consul Markham, of Shanghai, I have never known a public man so universally liked and respected as Sir Arthur Kennedy. That this was the case is sufficient in itself to show that a reasonable and fair desire to assist the native population, and to do ample justice to them will not give rise to any undue opposition on the part of the community here. Sir Arthur was eminently just in his instincts ; and, from his desire to deal in an even spirit with all classes of the community, he went, perhaps, farther, in many respects, than people out here were quite prepared to consider wise. But it was evident all through that he did so with the simple intention of doing what was right, and was not actuated by any strong preconceived opinions, such as seems to be the case with Mr. Pope Hennessy. This place is too small for any one to amuse himself by putting "hobbies" into execution, and the chief qualities really required in a governor are common-sense and moderation.

CANTON.

CANTON, JUNE 29, 1877.

It appears from the Peking Gazette, which has just reached my hands, that the Emperor has, during the past few weeks, being much occupied in calling several mandarins to account for their malpractices. Thus, on the 29th of April last he dismissed from his service not less than twenty-two officials of various grades of rank, on account of charges which had been preferred and proved against them. Of these twenty-two delinquents, four, at the time in question, were holding appointments under his Imperial Majesty in this southern province of Kwang-tuung, or Canton. Again, on the 5th ult., he sent into banishment two brigadier Tartar generals, who are named respectively Khat-i-huung-ngaak, and I-laak-woh-poo. These high military officers were, it appears, guilty of insubordination when at war with rebellious clans at Kom-suh. The former has been sent as an exile to the province of Tokien, and the latter in the same capacity to this province. These degraded officers have had tickets of leave granted to them. They dare not, however, on any account cross the frontiers of the provinces to which as exiles they have been sent. Moreover, they are obliged to report themselves at frequent intervals to the properly constituted authorities. Let me also add that criminals undergoing punishments of this nature, if without private means, have to work for or beg their daily bread. But again, a Mandarin named Weng-chaong, who was prefect of Fuung-tien-ye-chow, has been dismissed the Imperial service, and had all his property confiscated, owing to his having exacted from the people residing in his prefecture a higher rate of taxes than the law appointed. Moreover, his wife and children have been seized in obedience to Imperial commands, and will be held as hostages until a full restitution has been made to the injured inhabitants of the prefecture by their late rapacious and covetous ruler. Proclamations have recently been posted on the walls of the streets of Peking and Tien-tsin calling upon the people not to attend theatres or other places of amusement, as the days of mourning for the late Emperor have not yet been completed. These proclamations have been issued in the name of a high official, who is named Lau-sik-kum. It would appear from these official warnings that the citizens of the respective cities of Peking and Tien-tsin had entertained a desire to reopen their places of entertainment before the appointed time. At Canton the usual military examinations are now being held. The candidates for the first grade of military rank are numerous. Those who obtain the highest marks for their skill as "foot" or "horse" archers, and for the ease and grace with which they raise heavy weights from the ground, are admitted to the degree. In my last communication I informed you that the Cantonese had latterly been much occupied in celebrating certain important festivals, or anniversaries. On Saturday last, the 23rd instant, they were again similarly employed. The festival in question was in honour of Kwan-taai, the God of War, a deity who holds one of the most exalted positions in the Chinese Pantheon. On the morning of this anniversary at an early hour all the high civil and military authorities of the city, each wearing his robes of State, repaired to a Government temple, which stands in honour of Kwan-taai, in the street called Yuuk-in-fong, and there paid homage to the idol. Though there was not an entire suspension of business throughout the city, the shops being open, there was, nevertheless, on the part of the general public, much holiday-making. Indeed, it seems to me that the Chinese, though they have no weekly Sabbath, have more days of rest from labour than the inhabitants of any other country. This statement will, perhaps, become evident when I assert that their festivals are very numerous, and that on the occasion of their celebration there is, more or less, a great relaxation on the part of tradesmen and artificers of all kinds from ordinary toil. Few people know so well as the Chinese that or, in other words, that the thing which lacketh rest cannot endure.

Quod caret alterna requie, durabile non est ;

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 7th July; the French mail from London, June 1, was received on the 30th June, and the following P. and O. mail of 8th June arrived out on the 7th July. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The interval has been again a very quiet one, and there have been but few incidents to note in our small local affairs, and none of much importance.

Mr. Justice Lushington Phillips, C.M.G., arrived here on the 30th June, and has gone at once into harness as Acting Judge of the Supreme Court. His Honour leaves for Malacca immediately, and will thence proceed to Penang, to take up the threads of business there. Mr. Phillips, it is said, will not remain long in the Straits, and as Acting Chief Justice Mr. Ford's health is failing, and he only awaits the arrival of Sir Thomas Sidgreaves to go on leave, our prospects with regard to our Judges can hardly be said to be bright. There must be some evil influence at the Colonial-office which prevents permanent appointments from being made of three Judges, and it would be interesting to trace that influence to its source.

The Government Gazette contains a notification of the appointment of Mr. J. Swinburne Bond, one of the leading lawyers of the place, to be an Unofficial Member of the Legislative Council. The appointment is an undeniably good one, Mr. Bond being both popular for his courteous manner and respected for his ability, but the announcement was rather a surprise, partly and mainly on account of the secrecy about it, which is, however, characteristic of H.E. the Administrator, and partly from the general expectation that some of the old members of Council, two of whom are here at present, would have resumed office. Our Penang friends will, doubtless, be well-pleased, as their interests are sure to be well looked after by Mr. Bond, and Singapore is indebted to Mr. Bond for not allowing his professional avocations to interfere with his duties as a good citizen.

The Municipality has been strengthened by the appointment as Commissioner of Mr. M. F. DeSouza, an old and respected resident, who makes the place his home. In connection with Municipal matters also, it is so far satisfactory to be able to state that the Water Works have progressed so far that portions of the town are now supplied with water from the reservoir, the temporary pumping engine sending a supply as far as the Sepoy Lines, and at a pressure of 50 feet.

The result of two meetings of the Executive Council has been allowed to transpire. They were held on the 21st and 22nd June. At the first meeting amended Port Rules and Regulations were approved, and, amongst other matters, the fares for passenger boats plying in harbour, as well as cargo boats, were definitely fixed, as they have been in Penang for some time, but not here. This is a very useful executive measure, and one that has been long needed. At the second meeting some regulations were passed for the appointment of a Loan Committee in connection with the Savings Bank.

On the morning of the 3rd July the Siamese barque Soo Tek Seng, with some 200 Chinese passengers on board and a cargo of Mangrove bark and tin, was discovered to be on fire in the harbour. Happily, assistance was promptly rendered, the passengers were saved, and the barque was beached at Tanjong Rhoo, and the fire mastered. It is feared that her bulwarks are totally destroyed, but the cargo, it is believed, will not be materially damaged. The Soo Tek Seng belongs to a firm of Siamese merchants in Tongkah.

The Spanish steamer Gloria, of the Olano Larrinaga line, wrecked on one of the Natunas group of islands on the 30th May, has been abandoned as a total wreck, and on the 5th July the wreck was put up at auction here, when a Kongsee of speculators bought the hulk for $10,000 and the cargo for $2,100.

A good deal of rain has fallen during the fortnight, and the weather, although cool, has been rather unpleasant.

H.M.S. Growler has returned from her cruise to Labuan, and now represents H.M. Navy at this port.

The following new Notifications appear in the Government Gazette:—

Mr. C. W. Sneyd Kynnersley acts in Penang as Superintendent of Prisons, vice Hon. H. Plunket. Mr. A. P. Talbot acts as Assistant Superintendent of Police, Penang.

Mr. W. H. Wormsley, Deputy Coroner, has been appointed Coroner, Province Wellesley, vice Captain F. C. Annesley.

Dr. A. J. M. Bentley is to act as Colonial Surgeon, Singapore, in place of Dr. Hampshire, absent on leave.

Messrs. James Graham, Matthew Little, and H. W. Uloth, have become Trustees of the Savings Bank.

The average note circulation of the Banks in June was as follows:—Oriental Bank, $218,525; Chartered Bank, $576,200; Mercantile Bank, $403,015.

PENANG.

The present mail brings advices extending to the 9th July. The P. and O. mail from London June 8 arrived out on the 5th July.

We learn from the Penang Gazette that a meeting of the Penang Association was held on the 14th July, when there were present—Messrs. Vermont (Chairman), Gray, Nairne, L. C. Brown, Armstrong, Shaik Eusuff, V. Allen, Sattor Anthony, Petherbridge, J. Anthony, C. C. Wiget, Hill and Cullin. A letter from Mr. Murray resigning the Secretaryship, owing to his departure from the Settlement, was read, and on the proposition of Mr. L. C. Brown, seconded by Mr. Herwig, it was unanimously resolved. "That a letter be addressed to Mr. Murray accepting his resignation with regret, and thanking him for the valuable services he has rendered the Association hitherto." Mr. N. C. Robilliard was then elected Secretary in succession to Mr. Murray.

Mr. Biggs, the Chaplain of Malacca, it is reported, is to succeed Mr. Fearon, who left for Malta by the present mail steamer.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular of June 23 says:—For some little time after the last circular was issued business in Imports kept very languid, but latterly more demand has been apparent. Yarns, 16/24 and 28/32, showed, under these circumstances, some weakness, but have since recovered, and during the last few days fair sales have been made, more especially of the latter. Shirtings have improved, speculative purchases of 9lbs. having been made at an advance; but T-Cloths, 7lbs., have been sold on a lower basis. Indigo Shirtings are firmer; Turkey Reds and Lawns, on the other hand, show a reduction, the former being very difficult of sale. Velvets are in but little demand at present. As regards Woollens, the only features are more inquiry for Mousselines, at low rates, and a fair sale for Blankets, at somewhat higher prices; Italian Cloth keeps quiet. The market for Metals has continued extremely depressed and inactive. The business reported during the fortnight has been confined to a few small lots of Assorted Bars.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—The market has not shown any decided change during the month. At the close a higher exchange for Mexican Dollars renders purchasers slow in taking delivery of goods, and unwilling to enter into fresh operations. Cottons: There has been a somewhat better feeling in Gre

Shirtings, which has not, however, extended beyond the lower qualities. White Shirtings are in rather improved demand. Lower rates have been established for Drills, Chintz and Victoria Lawns. Woollens and Worsteds: Black Lastings are in a slightly better position. Mousselines de Laine have been sold to a considerable extent, at a shade under previous quotations. Some qualities of Cloth are wanted for Government use, and Blankets of suitable kinds are also inquired for in the same direction. Iron continues fairly saleable.

NAGASAKI.—Messrs. Holme, Ringer, and Co.'s Market Report says:—We have little change to report in Piece Goods. A fair business has been transacted in Cotton Yarn at an improvement of $5.00 to 6.00 per bale. Grey Shirtings have been in over supply, and sales have been difficult even at a slight decline. Turkey Reds, T-Cloths, and Lawns are without alteration. Drills have been sold at about fifteen cents per piece under former rates. Nail Rod Iron has been freely dealt in at higher prices. Heavy arrivals of Kerosine Oil have again weakened the market, and latest sales are fifty cents below our last quotation. A good inquiry exists for Sugar and Sugar Candy, and an advance of $1.00 per picul can be obtained. Quotations:—Cotton Yarn, 16/18 $93 to 97; Grey Shirtings, 7 lb. $1.50, 8¼ lb. $1.80; T-Cloths, 7 lb. $1.30; Turkey Reds, 3¼ lb. $2.10; Taffachelass, Single $1.75; Black Velvets, 22 inch $8.00; Lawns, $0.94; Drills, 14 lb. $2.50; Plain Black Orleans, 30 yards $4.85; Black Lastings, $12.00; Blankets, 7 lbs. $0.40 nominal; Nail Rod Iron, small sizes, $3.50 to 3.75.

HANKOW.—There had been no improvement in the market for Cotton Goods. A sale of 2,300 pieces 9lbs. 10oz. Grey Shirtings "Eagle" chop is the only one reported. There was very little inquiry for Lead, and value of LB quality remained unchanged at Tls. 5.90 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—In Piece Goods there had been more business doing in plain Cotton Goods at prices which for seasonable descriptions showed an advance on previous quotations. Of Grey Shirtings sales were upwards of 100,000 pieces, best at Tls. 1.85 to 1.88, the grade lower, still in most request, from Tls. 1.70 to 1.80 per piece, and other qualities from Tls. 1.35 to 1.65 per piece; below this range it had been difficult to effect sales especially as many importers were willing to realise at panic prices, and continued to force off common 8-4 lbs; Shirtings with little regard to value by public auction. In 7 lbs. and Heavy Cloths there was not much doing. T-Cloths of Mexican quality were wanted and an advance of 3 to 4 candareens had been established for good 8 lbs. makes. 7 lbs. for Tls. 1.20 to 1.38 per piece were in request and firmer in value, as also were best classes to a smaller extent. White Shirtings: good kinds 64 Reeds were in demand at an advance and sales are reported on the spot and to arrive for Tls. 1.92½ to 2 per piece for best chops. Drills were still asked for and quotation had advanced fully 5 candareens all round for English 14 lbs., the ordinary importation being quoted at Tls. 1.85 to 1.90 per piece. American PMCD Drills had advanced to Tls. 2.90 per piece and second rate chops to Tls. 2.85 per piece, with considerable sales. Fancy Cottons were without much change. Black Velvets were still enquired for at a small decline, but other fabrics under this head continued in very trifling request. Woollens were lower at auction with very few private transactions reported. Sales of all kinds of Metals had been small, and quotations were unchanged. No further transactions had taken place in Nail Rods; Lead was firm, but natives were only buying in small lots for actual use.

FOOCHOW.—The sales had been 1,500 pieces; 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings at $2.35; 500 pieces T-Cloths, 7 lbs., at $2.45; and 1,000 pieces do., 8 lbs., at $2.25.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co's Circular says:—Nos. 16 to 24 and 28 to 32 Cotton Yarn have been sparingly bought at nominally unchanged values: medium qualities of Nos. 38 to 42 have been enquired for and have been more freely taken than for some time past. Piece Goods: Inquiry for Grey Shirtings has been rather slack and values have ruled easier; White Shirtings have also been in less demand, but 7 lb. Mexican T-Cloths have been freely bought at well maintained prices. English Drills have been fairly taken at late rates, For American Cotton Goods there has been no inquiry whatever from native sources, and the only transactions in these Cottons have been by foreigners who have bought for transhipment to the northern markets. Of P. M. C. 15 lb. Drills, 2,650 pieces ex Highlander have been taken at $3.50 per piece and sent to Shanghai for sale; and our markets have been cleared of Sheetings by the shipment to the same quarter of the remaining small lots previously held here. Woollens: Lastings have met with some inquiry and values are maintained. Long Ells are neglected. Assorted Camlets are in some request, but Scarlet are not wanted. Common Blankets continue slow of sale. Metals: Lead is weaker and has been quitted at lower rates, but holders generally are not willing to accept the offers made by dealers. Tin Plates are slow of sale. Tin is in better request and has been fairly taken at about former figures. Receipts of Quicksilver have been small and the market closes firmer, at a moderate advance in quotations. Yellow Metal is attracting rather more attention. Coals: The arrivals have been 5,660 tons, comprising 4,810 tons of Cardiff, and 850 tons of Formosa. The only sale has been 100 tons of Cardiff at $10.50 per ton, ex ship. The demand for all kinds is slack and Cardiff Coals cannot now be placed at $10 per ton to arrive; Soft Australian kinds are still quoted at $8 per ton.

CANTON.—Lead: Prices were again lower, mixed brands being quoted at $8.5 to 8.15 per picul, and Hole Chop and WB at $8.15 to 8.20 per picul. Quicksilver was nominally worth $62.50 to 63 per picul; there had been no transactions. Ginseng: Clarified, No. 1, $385 to 435; No. 2, $235 to 285; No. 3, $135 to 195 per picul; Crude, No. 1, $380 to 430; No. 2, $230 to 270; No. 3, $130 to 180 per picul.

MANILA.—Unpropitious weather had prevailed, and had exercised a depressing influence on the Piece Goods market. Business had been very limited in extent, and prices had ruled generally in favour of buyers.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Cotton Goods had been quiet, business had been limited, rates were unchanged, but had barely been maintained. Grey Shirtings unchanged, the demand had been dull. T-Cloths had continued in moderate inquiry, 6 lbs. of good qualities mostly in demand, 7 lbs. selling slowly, the other weights dull. White Shirtings in less inquiry. Cambrics in fair request. Grey Yarns had met with a better demand, a fair business done in the lower numbers; No. 40s quiet. Dyed and Printed Goods unchanged. In Metals, Iron had been more active and a moderate business is reported large arrivals. Sheathing Metals quiet. The Coal Market had been quiet, and rates showed a weaker tendency.

PENANG.—The demand for Piece Goods during the fortnight had been very small, sales had been extremely limited, and quotations generally were unchanged. Iron: A sale of Govan Bar and Nail Rod to arrive, at $3.25. Cardiff and West Hartley Coals were being retailed to supply steamers at $10½ per ton f. o. b.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had shown great activity, settlements for the interval amounting to some 15,000 piculs, and arrivals to about the same quantity. From this reason prices had advanced, and a rise of at least $2 per picul had been established on Teas grading from good medium downwards. Fine Teas were firmer—of choice but little or none were offering. The s.s. State of Louisiana expected on the 28th June, would take freight for New York, via Kobe and Amoy, at £4 per 40 cubic feet, and had obtained a full cargo. No sailing vessel for New York direct had been circulated. Quotations:—Common, $14 to 15 per picul; good common, $16 to 17; medium, $18 to 20; good medium $22 to 24; fine, $25 to 27; finest, $28 to 32; choice, $35 to 38; choicest $40, upwards. Exports from 1st May to date:—

Total	2,385,462	2,322,263	1,924,263	2,057,493

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The market during the month had been very active and fairly steady. Teas from $20 to $30 had been in greatest demand, while choice and choicest grades, as well as common and medium sorts, had been scarcer and relatively dear. Settlements for the month had amounted to about 17,000 piculs, and to date, from the commencement of the season to 22,500 piculs, against 18,000 piculs for same period last year. Stocks were estimated at 1,000 piculs. Prices at the close were firm.

NAGASAKI.—Several parcels of new tea, suitable for mixing with China greens, had been shown, and a few had changed hands at about same prices as last year. Uncoloured kinds were not expected for at least another month from date. The continuous rains in the spring made the picking later than usual, and the teas were consequently much inferior to those of last season, the leaf being light and chaffy, and wanting in style. The natives reported that the yield of finer quality would not exceed thirty per cent. of former years, thus making a large increase of medium and common kinds. Settlements: 123 bales new, at $6.00 to $13.00; 871 bales old, at $2.50 to $6.00. Stocks: 165 bales new, and 3,070 bales old. Quotations: Common to medium, $4.50 to $7.00; medium to fine, $8 to $13. Export from May 1, 1877, to June 1, 1877:—To Shanghai, 100,983 lbs.; to Tientsin, 179,006 lbs.; to England, 26,498 lbs.; to America, 28,268 lbs. Total, 334,755 lbs. Total export from May 1, 1876, to May 1, 1877, 3,392,723 lbs.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Evans, Pugh, and Co.'s Report says:—During the fortnight which has elapsed since our last issue, this market has been abundantly supplied with further arrivals from the country, amounting to 78,000 chests against 44,000 chests in corresponding fortnight of last year, and the business has been proportionately large—87,000 chests against 32,000 chests in 1876. Settlements of Ningchows amount to 25,000 half-chests, and business in this kind of Tea may be considered as over for this season, so far as this port is concerned. Total arrivals are 25,000 chests over last season, and now about 10,0000 chests in excess of last year's first crop. Further supplies have yet to come down, so that we look for a surplus of about 20,000 to 30,000 chests to this point of the season. Shipments to Shanghai since beginning of the season amount to 34,000 chests, being 10,000 chests in excess of quantity sent to that market this time last year, these as usual consist almost entirely of common kinds. Prices for good quality chops have been firm, but commonish to fair Teas are lower. Bulk of the business has been in mixed Oanfa kinds at from Tls. 16 to 20=1/1¼ to 1/4½ per lb., and buyers have in many instances obtained good value at these quotations. Second crops are expected this week, conflicting accounts reach us as to quality, but the balance of opinion seems to point to inferiority, owing it is said to want of rain in the Tea districts for some time past. Quotations are:—For medium to fair Oopack, Tls. 12.25 to 26, against Tls. 15.75 to 24 at same date last season; medium to fair Oanfas, Tls. 14.50 to 27.50, against Tls. 19 to 26; Oonams, Tls. 9.50 to 15, against Tls. 12.50 to 18.25; medium to fair Ningchow, Tls. 15.50 to 30, against Tls 22 to 26. Settlements to date are 330,342 chests, against 321,533 chests in 1876; shipments on native account, 33,760 chests, against 23,762; contracts, nil, against 2,733; stock is estimated at 12,768, against 4,616.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A steady business had been transacted, at prices which showed but little change on those ruling at the opening of the market, with the exception of the common grades, which were quoted about one tael lower. The settlements for the fortnight had been 30,159 chests, and the stock was 46,630 chests. Green: The market for Pingsuey Teas was opened on the 16th June by the settlement of one chop at Tls. 33 per picul, since which time, ten chops had found buyers at Tls. 21½ to 38½; these prices, taking quality into consideration, showed a reduction of about seven taels on last season's opening rates. The quality of the crop appeared to be not quite so good as last season's; the infused leaf being as a rule dark, and the liquor rather coarse. The following were the settlements to date:—1,065 half-chests Pingsuey, at Tls. 21.50 to 38.50; 346 half-chests Pingsuey (common lines), at Tls. 13.50. Total, 4,311 half-chests. The stock amounted to 11,466 half-chests.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—Last week's report advised the rise of the river, and consequent cessation of all business. The inundation continued until on the morning of the 18th June the water stood no less than nine inches higher than at the highest point last season. All buying continued suspended until the 20th, since which date a fair amount of Tea has changed hands. The amount of Tea destroyed is estimated at 10,000 chests. Congous: Good medium kinds remain much as last quoted. A further decline has taken place in good common and flavoury kinds. Broken leaf and dust are without change. Souchongs: As usual, the first arrivals have attracted attention, but the quantity settled is much under last season. Oolongs have been dealt in at a decline of Tls. 1 to 2. Flowery Pekoes: Only 2 chops have changed hands. Scented Teas: Previous rates continue to be paid. Quotations are:—Congou: Fine to finest, 1s. 9⅛d. to 1s. 11d.; good medium to fine, 1s. 5⅞d. to 1s. 8⅛d.; medium to good medium, 1s. 2⅝d. to 1s. 5¼d.; flavoury to medium, 11½d. to 1s. 2¼d.; common to good common, 9½d. to 11½d.; dust and broken leaf, 7⅞d. to 8⅜d. Souchong: Choice, 2s. 0⅜d. to 2s. 4d.; finest to choice, 1s. 9½d. to 2s. 0¼d.; fair to fine, 1s. 2⅞d. to 1s. 8⅛d. Oolong: Fair to good, 1s. 1⅜d. to 1s. 3¾d. Flowery Pekoe: Finest to choice, 2s. 5d. to 3s. 3½d. Scented Orange Pekoe: Fine to finest, 1s. 9d. to 1s. 11½d. Scented Capper: Fine, 1s. 6d. The Export of Great Britain and the Continent of Europe amount to 9,302,073lbs., against 12,501,974 lbs. To America, 59,299 lbs., against 82,660 lbs. To the Colonies, 2,907,131 lbs., against nil, at the same period last year.

CANTON.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—There has been a good demand for Tea throughout the fortnight, and a steady business has transpired, settlements of Scented Teas being again considerable, and prices generally, quality considered, showing but little change. In Congous at this, very few fresh Teas have offered, settlements in consequence are but trifling; superior quality in little lots has realised Tls. 23 to 25; fair medium Tls. 18 to 20. At Macao purchases have been largely from common grades. Scented Teas: There has been a considerable demand for Capers for price, and large settlements have been made during the past week almost entirely of common grades to fair medium, the finer qualities being for the time neglected. We quote common to good common Tls. 15 to 17½, fair to good Tls. 18 to 20, fair medium Tls. 21 to 23. The second crop is as a whole very poor, the teas being badly made in leaf and generally thin in cup. Leaf prices, however, in the country are pretty well sustained, and teamen who hold stocks are fairly firm, especially for the better grades. Scented Orange Pekoes: Transactions in these kinds have been more moderate. We quote "long leaf" medium grades Tls. 23 to 26; fine to finest Tls. 28 to 31. Short leaf kinds are a little easier at Tls. 16.5 to 18.5. Small purchases of Green teas have been made for the Colonies. Settlements for the fortnight are given as follows:—Congou, 1,700 boxes at Tls. 16.00 to 25.00; Scented Caper, 50,000 boxes at Tls. 15.00 to 31.00; Scented Orange Pekoe, 8,000 boxes at Tls. 16.5 to 32.00; Gunpowder, 450 boxes at Tls. 21.00 to 27.00.

AMOY AND FORMOSA.—Advices from Tamsui report a moderate amount of business passing in the unfired leaf at full rates. The total export to Amoy at date, was 3,026,780 lbs., against 2,845,710 lbs. at same time last year. At Amoy settlements had amounted to 1,568 half-chests, consisting mostly of good cargo kinds at $29. DPd. and choice to extra choice, at $51 to 53 showing no change in value for the lower grade, but an advance of $2 to $3 per picul for the higher. Amoy Ooloongs: settlements had amounted to 910 half-chests, ranging from fair to superior cargo at previous rates.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been very little disposition shown to purchase from the stock of old Silk, and prices of all classes were nominal. The demand for native consumption had improved, and fairly large parcels of coarse Silk had been taken off the market. On the 18th June, new season's Silk arrived, and, on the whole, it compared favourably with the first Silks forward last year, being less mixed, though still of full size—the colour and quality being fair. Nearly the whole quantity, 30 bales, found buyers at $570 to $550 (21s. 2d. to 20s. 4d., or f.58.50 to f.56.50), but there had been no general disposition to buy, and a small parcel down, of even better Silk, was subsequently sold at $500 (18s. 8d., or f.51.50.) Exports from 1st July to date:—

	Current Season.	1875-6.	1874-5.
To England	... 10,736	4,809	5.207
„ France	... 9,577	8,208	6,230
„ United States	142	108	115
„ Other Countries	723	243	366
Total	 21,178	13,368	11,918

SHANGHAI.—The market for new Silk had not been opened, and transactions in old stock had been limited to the purchases of about 30 bales Rereels for America, and 20 to 30 bales of same description for Europe.

CANTON.—The continued receipt of unfavourable advices from Europe had caused buyers for those markets to entirely withdraw all offers likely to be accepted by the dealers. Prices had, however, been very well maintained, and until within two or three days of the mails leaving, had shown no signs of declining. It was said that the native demand had been large, and enabled holders in the country to dispose of their silk at prices the equivalent of last quotations. Holders were firm, and, although the stock was large, but little was on offer. There had been a good business done in Rereels during the early part of the fortnight. Owing to trouble with the workmen (reelers), the delivery of contracts had been delayed. The receipts of the second crop had been small, the silk being held back in the country. The stock was estimated at 700 bales Tsatlee, 30 bales Cumchook and Lacklow, and about 200 bales of inferior sorts

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—Current quotations were:—Camphor, $18 to $19; Rice, $2.60 to $2.65; Wax, $10.50 to $11; Tobacco, $8 to $12; Isinglass, $25 to $26.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Copper: Purchases to the extent of 1,100 piculs had been made, chiefly on Chinese account, at slightly lower rates. Camphor: Deliveries of 400 piculs reported, at about previous rates. Wax: There was but little doing in this article, and prices were nominally unchanged. Tobacco: Settlements 1,200 piculs, and for the better qualities higher prices had been paid.

NAGASAKI.—Messrs. Holme, Ringer, and Co.'s Circular says:—Tobacco: Small samples of new have been brought forward, and if we may judge from these the crop is an unusual fine one, the leaf being large and well-cured; as to quantity it is impossible to tell until the provinces are more settled. The Fiery Cross sailed for London on the 20th May, taking 905 bales = piculs 1,840, from this port. Wax: In the absence of buyers, is weaker, and holders would willingly submit to a reduction of 50 to 75 cents per picul. Settlements are 152 boxes for the Hong Kong market. Camphor: Remains without alteration; arrivals and sales 237 tubs. Rice: Owing to the speculative demand which usually exists at this time of the year (the rainy season), has advanced 50 cents per picul, but should we have the usual quantity of rain it will soon recede to its former value.

HANKOW.—Ox and Cow Hides had again declined, and were quoted Tls. 6 to 6.2; shipments 6,690 piculs. China Grass was quoted Tls. 8.3 to 11.2 for Oopack White, and Tls. 8.5 to 9 for Szechuen Green; a parcel of new crop had arrived. Rhubarb was quoted at Tls. 40 to 60 for Shensi, and Tls. 13 to 35 for Szechuen; shipments 228 piculs. Musk was quoted, Szechuen Tls. 83 to 84, Yunan Tls, 103 to 105 per catty. Cantharides were quoted Tls. 34 to 35. China Root Tls. 7.8 to 8.

HONG KONG.—Camphor had ruled slightly lower, and Japan had been taken in small lots at $21 to $20.75 per picul, which was the closing quotation. The Formosa article was held for $19 per picul, packed in cases. Gamboge was very scarce, and higher prices would be demanded for early arrivals. Vermillion could be bought at $32 per case. At Macao very little business had been done in Drugs, and were somewhat easier. Quotations:—Aniseed Oil, $180 to $181; Cassia Oil, $94 per picul, nominal; Aniseed Stars, $24.75 per picul.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market for Produce has been inactive, and prices have had a declining tendency. Freights and exchange have also given way. Sugar: Late telegrams are again unfavourable for the article, and very few buyers have come forward. On the other hand, dealers have shown more desire to sell, and the consequence has been that moderate sales of superior, of quality rather below D.S. No. 7, have been made at $6 per picul. At that price there are now no longer buyers, and for extra probably not more than $6.25 per picul would be given. Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to over 35,000 piculs, the whole of which quantity has been taken up at prices varying from $3.68¾ to $3.81¼ per picul. At the last named price there is still a fair demand, but supplies are now coming forward sparingly, and the ideas of holders are high. Ilo Ilo and Cebu advices extend to the 11th and 12th June respectively. In the former market price of superior, after having touched $7.87½ per picul, had dropped to $6.50 per picul, and in the latter market it was steady at $5.75 per picul. Current, in both markets, was in much request, and quotations were nearly nominal at from $4 to $4.50 per picul. Hemp: Quotation for current quality is down to $5.75 per picul (£24 2s. 6d.), and there is not much demand at that; price in Cebu was driven up to $7 per picul (£28 15s.), but it has again receded to $6.25 per picul (£25 19s. 6d.). Trifling quantities of Quilot have been sold at $6.25 per picul (£26 17s. 9d.).

SINGAPORE.—There had been little change in the values of the principal staples, the tendency of prices had been firmer, but business had been limited. Gambier was weaker in the early part of the fortnight, but afterwards a demand sprung up for immediate delivery, and higher rates were paid, but were not maintained; the market closed quiet. Black Pepper had been firmer, about 375 tons had been bought. White Pepper had continued in good demand, rates had slightly advanced. The Tin market opened weak, but rates had hardened, there having been a little more inquiry for the London market, and low rates of freight per steamers. Coffee was firm, a fair business had been done in Bully. Sago Flour was unchanged, the market was quieter. Pearl Sago continued steady. Tapioca was in good request.

PENANG.—Business in Tin had been very limited. A good business had been done in Black Pepper. Transactions in other goods had been small. Tin: The purchases had been mostly for China, from $18.90 to $19, closing firm at the latter rate. Black Pepper: There had been a good demand for England, and to a moderate extent for China. Transactions 14,600 piculs, from $6.95 to $7.30 Atchin, and $7.07½ to $7.40 West Coast. Prices firm at the higher rates. Stock 400 piculs West Coast, 500 piculs Atchin. White Pepper: Purchases at $12¾. Sugar: Small purchases of European manufacture for local consumption at $7¼ No. 1 and $5¼ No. 2. Small transactions in Basket Sugar at $4. Gutta Percha: No transactions.

A TELEGRAM has been transmitted by The Times correspondent in Shanghai to the effect that it has been decided by the Chinese Government to close the Woosung Railway in October. The intelligence is given in so specific a form that it would seem almost impossible to disbelieve it; but it will form matter both for surprise and regret, seeing that the line was working so favourably and was evidently so popular among the natives. We cannot but yet trust that the Chinese will, upon further consideration, stop short of so needless a piece of retrogression.

Literature, Science, &c.

The educational works, which are usually announced at this time of the year, are both numerous and varied; and generally speaking display a thoroughness and earnestness of purpose which such books have hitherto somewhat lacked. Among general publications there are few works of special interest noticed as forthcoming. The Marquis of Lorne has published through Macmillan and Co. "The Book of Psalms literally rendered in Verse," and Sir Travers Twiss is preparing a new edition of "Bracton de Legibus," at the request of the Master of the Rolls.

The Geographical Magazine for August contains an article, by Mr. R. H. Brunton, on "Affairs in Japan." He regards the present position of matters as somewhat critical, and in common with those best able to judge, attributes much of the discontent which has led to the rebellion to injudicious and arbitrary conduct on the part of the Government. Referring to the ill-feeling among the agricultural population, he says that the difficulty was not a question so much of justice as one of the absolute inability of the farmers to submit to these increased imposts. He concludes by expressing his opinion that the Government, with a most difficult task before it, has acted in a too precipitate and arbitrary manner; that it has, doubtless, been actuated by motives for the further advance and prosperity of the country; but its action has been characterised by the usual Asiatic cunning and want of candour, by no consideration for the old habits and tendencies of the people, and by an almost utter disregard of the rights of an acknowledged property.

The Friend of China (Organ of the Anti-Opium Society) notices the delay in the ratification of the Chefoo Convention, and expresses the hope that the Government will not lay itself open to a reproach for ill-faith similar to the one which Commissioner Lin wrote about the Opium trade. The present number of the above publication contains the translation of a reply from the Chinese Anti-Opium Society in Canton to an address sent to China by the Anti-Opium Society here.

Street Life in London. By J. Thompson. London: Sampson Low and Co.—The August number of this publication contains photographs of "Halfpenny Ices," "Black Jack," and "Cheap Fish in St. Giles's." They are all characteristic, and the letter-press explanatory of them is of much interest.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.—An estimate has been issued showing that £223,969 will have to be voted for the current financial year. It is made up of the following items:—Harbours, &c., under the Board of Trade, £5,969; public offices site, £16,000; Clockmill estate, £15,000; House of Lords offices, £2,914; Privy Council office and subordinate departments, £13,000; prison commission, £5,450, under consideration; learned societies, £3,000; Arctic expedition, £315; Board of Education, Scotland, £2,580; commutation of annuities, £3,500; savings banks and friendly societies deficiency, £126,689; Post-office, £30,272. The vote for harbours includes £5,000 for repairs of damage done to the Admiralty Pier at Dover. Sir John Hawkshaw estimates the total expense of restoring the superstructure destroyed, and strengthening the same, and removing débris of the pier thrown into the bay, at £41,000. A sum of £15,000 is required for the purchase of the Clockmill or Belleville Estate, immediately adjoining Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh, and carrying with it a right of way through the Queen's Park. The object of the purchase is to throw the property into the park, and prevent the erection upon it of buildings which would seriously injure both the park and the palace.

THE PROPOSED INDIAN MUSEUM.—The Bombay East India Association have addressed a petition to the House of Commons in support of the proposal to establish an Indian Museum in some central part of London. Admitting that in the present state of Indian finance it is impossible for the Government of India to undertake the carrying out of such a scheme, the petitioners urge that the cost should be borne by the United Kingdom.

INFORMATION having been sent to the P. and O. Company and the South-Western Railway Company that an attempt would be made to attack the train conveying the specie ex Kashgar, the necessary precautions were taken, and it will be forwarded by day instead of, as usual, by night train.

LONDON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1877.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

Somewhat late, but still it is to be hoped in time to be of value, the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce have put on record their views with reference t the Chefoo Convention. The present mail brings the te xt of a valuable letter on the subject from the pen of Mr. F. B. Johnson, the Chairman, and it is to be hoped that the delay which has occurred in connection with the ratification may at least be productive of some good by giving the Government an opportunity of taking into consideration the views of those fully competent to deal with the commercial bearing of the matter. The document does not contain much that is new at the present stage of the question. The failure to inculpate and secure the punishment of the in stigators of Margary's murder is regretted; and the inadequacy of the Tls. 200,000 which Sir Thomas Wade undertook to accept, apparently in full satisfaction of outstanding claims against the Chinese Government, is pointed out; while the injudiciousness of the phraseology by which the legality of lekin levies upon foreign goods in the interio r is inferentially recognised, is clearly set forth; and the restriction of the area of exemption to the foreign Settlement instead of to the whole "port" of entry, is with equal force condemned. It would appear from the letter that the Committee of the Shanghai Chamber have been holding back from expressing their opinion, in the hope of receiving a copy of Sir Thomas Wade's memorandum; but they reasonably enough observe that, "as the Chinese authorities on their side have already given effect to several of the provisions of the agreement, the Committee feels that prolonged silence on its part would be inconvenient and might be misunderstood." The latest news concerning the locusts in the neighbourhood of Chinkiang is very unsatisfactory. A correspondent says the pest is daily increasing, and the insects are so numerous that they present the appearance of a thick fog from a short distance.

The news from Japan by this mail represents matters in a more serious aspect than hitherto, although all along there has been only too good ground for believing that the Government had altogether under-estimated the difficulties with which they had to contend in connection with the rebellion. It is stated through a variety of agencies that the Government was anxiously endeavouring to recruit its greatly-thinned army, and were engaging men under the pretext that they were only to be policemen, but sending them off at once to the war on their arrival. It is stated that so disheartened were the raw levies sent down to Kiushiu by the boldness of the insurgents, that they had little or no stomach for fighting; they have no heart in the business, and the consequence of all this was numerous desertions, plenty of "malingering," and when they cannot succeed in running away from the enemy, they take the first opportunity of allowing themselves to be taken prisoners, so that by this means Saigo's forces get possession of continuous additional supplies of arms, and considerable quantities of unexpended ammunition, and other war material. The Mikado remained at Kioto, and M. Geoffrey, the newly-arrived French Minister, had been to that city to present his credentials. A serious disturbance between the sailors on board a German and a French man-of war has taken place. An action has been brought in the Yokohoma Court against the commander of H.M.S. Audacious for damage by collision to the H.B.M.S.S. Co.'s steamer Chiri Maru.

From the Straits Settlements there is very little news of importance. Mr. Lushington Phillips had arrived at Singapore, and had taken up the duties of his office as Acting Judge of the Supreme Court. Mr. I. S. Bond had been appointed a member of the Legislative Council, and Mr. De Souza one of the Municipal Commissioners. A Siamese barque caught fire in the harbour at Singapore on the 3rd ult., and sustained considerable damage. The wreck of the steamer Gloria had been sold with the cargo on board for $12,100. Mr. N. C. Robilliard had been appointed Secretary to the Penang Association, in the room of Mr. Murray, who had resigned.

HEALTH IN CHINA.

THE Customs Medical Reports for the quarter ending September 1876, which have been recently issued, show that the state of health at the open ports in China during that period was of a normal character. No special epidemic or other startling malady had taken place at any of them, and the illnesses which are noticed are, therefore, for the most part those familiar in the East, such as diarrhœa, intermittent fever, sun-malaise, &c. At the same time the present series of reports is well worthy of perusal, as affording valuable information concerning the nature of the climatic evils which have to be encountered and the degree to which the preservation of health is within the power of residents themselves. The statements made by Dr. ALEX. JAMIESON with reference to Shanghai, go to confirm the views which we have more than once expressed, that at that port (and indeed at many others in China), health can in general be preserved by ordinary care, and that much of the illness from which China residents suffer is due to want of precaution, self-restraint and temperance. Dr. JAMIESON points out that at present information as to the health of foreigners in China is much more accessible than it was fifteen years ago, as now many persons make China their home; and he goes on to say that experience in Shanghai is tolerably uniform as to the excellent condition of health preserved by old residents who take good care of themselves, who avoid excesses, and who have been lucky enough to escape malarious fevers. Even among those who in their earlier days suffered from periodic fevers there are many who appear to have outlived their susceptibility. There are few residents in Shanghai who have actually entered upon old age, but there are many in advanced middle age, and of these latter—men who have lived twenty years and above in China—the majority would, in Dr. JAMIESON'S opinion, compare favourably for strength and endurance with a like number of the same age taken at random from the desks of London offices. He goes on to observe, with much justice, that these facts ought to be sufficient to induce the Life Insurance offices to make some abatement in the high rates of premium which they charge for China. This is a point to which allusion has upon many occasions been made in these columns; and we can only reiterate the opinion which we expressed some time back, that there is room for any insurance office which would meet the China residents upon liberal terms to add a large number of sound and paying policies to its business.

A fact of considerable importance, which is not known even to many old residents in China, is noticed by Dr. SCOTT in his report on Swatow. He describes the climate of that place as "one of the healthiest and most delightful "in the world." He states that even in the hottest weather "there is daily a refreshing sea breeze which gives bloom "to the cheeks and vigour to the frames of the most feeble," and adds that he has seen delicate children brought there almost dying, who have got well and strong in a short time, and delicate adults who could hardly exist at home or in other parts of China, quickly gain strength in its genial climate. This healthiness of the port of Swatow is not generally known, probably on account of the comparative smallness of its commercial importance; but certainly if (as we have, of course, every reason to conclude) Dr. SCOTT'S report is correct, Swatow should be availed of more than it has been hitherto as a sanitarium for those who have become weakened by the heats of Hong Kong, from which place it is so easily accessible.

Some valuable remarks are made by Dr. JAMES WATSON, of Newchwang, with reference to the effects of opium-smoking. While avoiding the error into which the Colonial Surgeon of Hong Kong recently fell of declaring that opium-smoking was not more injurious than tobacco-smoking, he nevertheless gives it as his opinion that "foreigners have generally exaggerated the amount of evil "said to follow the use of opium." He has no doubt that it is unmistakably an evil, but adds, it is a comfort "that it is not so great an evil as is very generally believed." Dr. SCOTT demurs altogether to the favourite comparison between opium and alcohol, and states that in his opinion, except as a medicine, it is never necessary, and for other purposes is seldom if ever of any service; while alcohol is only injurious when taken irregularly and in too large quantities; and to the majority of people who either work with head or hands is in some shape or other, if not a necessity, a great comfort, and, as a dietetic agent, of very considerable value. He confirms the statement which has before been often made, that the tendency of those who use opium is to increase the dose, which is by no means universal in the case of those who use alcohol, of which, on the contrary, a large minority continue to take it in ever decreasing quantity.

CHINA v. INDIAN OPIUM.

SOME remarks of importance, both in their direct bearing and in the indirect insight which they afford into the manner in which the Chinese appear at the present time to look upon the Opium question, are made by Mr. KOPSCH, the Officiating Statistical Secretary in the office of the Imperial Maritime Customs at Shanghai, in his report upon the China trade for the year 1875, of which we give a summary in the present paper. After setting forth a variety of facts tending to show that the native-grown Opium is likely ere long to compete seriously with that from India, he goes on to consider the subject in its bearing upon the policy which ought to be adopted in order to prevent the continuance of the growth of the native drug and the consequent ousting of that from abroad. The conclusion at which he arrives is, that the only means by which this can be effected is by our Government consenting to a large increase of the duty upon Indian Opium imported into China. That some increase in the import duty upon Indian Opium may be desirable at the present time, especially if it be demanded by the Chinese Government, we are not prepared to deny; but we certainly can scarcely follow MR. KOPSCH in the rather original ratiocination by which he arrives at this conclusion. He says that the argument of those in favour of the Indian monopoly is that the high price resulting therefrom prevents the consumption, and, consequently, that the system is rather in favour of than against the spread of Opium-smoking in China. Mr. KOPSCH, however, holds that precisely the opposite effect is produced; that the high price stimulates the cultivation of Chinese Opium, and that consequently the consumption is increased, and matters are at the same time tending to a point at which the consumption of the Indian Drug must be affected. The only way, in Mr. KOPSCH'S opinion, to prevent this is to "stimulate" the Chinese Government as well as the Chinese Opium growers, and this end he considers will be best attained by increasing the import duty on the Indian drug, and so giving them a greater object to use their exertions to put down the growth of China Opium. "The imposi-"tion of a heavy import duty," he says "appears to be the "only measure likely to induce China rigidly to prohibit "the growth of Opium—by no means an easy or costless "task in this vast empire; but if the revenue depended "upon it, rigorous and effective measures for its suppression "would doubtless be adopted." We can scarcely believe that the Chinese Government would be prepared to admit that its only object in taking effectual measures to put down the cultivation of the native drug was to obtain a large revenue out of that which was imported, in face of the strong denunciation of the use of opium in any way which has been repeatedly made by the officials; but still from the official position which Mr. KOPSCH occupies, and from the fact that arguments somewhat similar to his have been pressed upon our representatives at Peking, we may infer that to some extent these views are those adopted by the Chinese authorities. However this may be, it is somewhat singular to find it overlooked that, so far as the argument that the high price of the Indian drug stimulates the production of native Opium is concerned, precisely the same effect would be produced whether this high price were caused by a heavy tax in India or by a heavy tax in China, so that this bearing of the matter would not be altered whether we agreed to an increased import duty or not. The truth however is that any such argument as that advanced is quite superfluous. Upon reasonable and equitable grounds we could hardly object to the Chinese Government obtaining a larger import duty upon Opium, when the Indian Government taxes it so heavily as at present; but we think that a satisfactory understanding on this subject will be more likely to be arrived at by strictly adhering to the point at issue than by resorting to arguments which however ingenious and original they may be, will be found in reality to have but little substance when submitted to the tests of fact and of common sense.

THE CHINESE IN AMERICA.

AN article on the Chinese in America, from the pen of M. JUSTIN AMERO, which (as already noticed) has recently appeared in the Revue de France, gives in a succinct form the more important features connected with this question, and is of interest as embracing the views of an impartial judge on the subject. If we pass over some slight errors into which he falls, as, for example, speaking of Dr. LEGGE as the author, in place of the translator, of the She-King, M. AMERO deserves the credit of having collected in an attractive form a large number of facts tending to place the question of Chinese emigration to the United States in its true light. This question, it is justly pointed out, is merely one based upon economical considerations and trade rivalries. At the bottom of much of the reproaches which are heaped upon the Chinese there is a question of money as much for the American capitalists as for American labourers, a question of commercial or industrial rivalry for the one, of wages for the other. John Chinaman, the author holds, is considered to have a great many faults because he is less wanted at the present time than formerly, and is seen to be prospering too well, and to be able to compete only too successfully with the white population. This is, no doubt, true up to a certain point, but it is still impossible to deny that the Chinese in America have many objectionable qualities which may reasonably be disliked—some of which are pointed out with accuracy by M. AMERO himself. Among the most serious is their habit of establishing everywhere they go a species of imperium in imperio, by means of which the Chinese are kept under the Headmen of the secret societies, instead of under the laws of the place. In California this evil is found to exist in much the same way as in Singapore, Penang, Hong Kong, and in fact everywhere where Chinese are nominally under foreign rule; and it will always cause special difficulties in dealing with them and treating them as upon an equality with other citizens. It is at this point we believe that there will probably be much more trouble in connection with the Chinese question in America than is likely to arise merely from its economical aspect. Though the labouring, or rather the "rowdy," population may be averse to the Chinaman, and disposed to deal harshly with him, the large mass of the respectable and influential citizens are on the side of fair dealing towards him, and will put down the attempts at ousting him by brute force. But it will rest with the Chinese themselves whether they can obtain in America equal justice with the other citizens; as, so long as they combine together to obtain special political and judicial advantages, so long, in the nature of things, will they find themselves the subject of special administrative and judicial restrictions.

WE noticed a short time back that an Ordinance had recently been promulgated making Saigon a Municipality with a Mayor, two assistants and twelve councillors. The regulations are certainly of a very liberal character, and should have the effect of doing away with all just cause for the complaints often made by the public of undue influence exerted over the Council by the Governor of the Colony. This would seem hardly likely to continue to be the case, seeing that all the French members of the Council will be elected by vote. We regret, however, to notice that the meetings of the Council are not to be public, as it is difficult to see what there can be at them of a private character. We shall watch the working of the new régime with interest, and trust that it will tend to more efficient municipal government than, to judge from the statements very generally made, the Colony has as yet enjoyed.

THE news brought by last mail with reference to the phase which the Lekin dues question had assumed in Shanghai points to the necessity of some clearer understanding than that foreshadowed in the Chefoo Convention being arrived at with regard to it. It seems that the new Taoutai (the City Governor) insists upon levying the tax upon dealers in foreign goods in the native city, and these naturally threaten to proceed to the foreign settlements, where they would be exempt. Surely some arrangement could be devised whereby so inconvenient an inconsistency as this could be obviated; and as the question is now virtually reopened, on account of the delay in the ratification of the Convention, it is to be hoped that an understanding with this object may be arrived at.

THE appointments of Mr. THOMAS LETT WOOD (Chief Justice of Bermuda) to be a Judge of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements, and of Mr. JOHN BUDD PHEAR (lately Judge of the High Court of Judicature, Calcutta), to be Chief Justice of the Island of Ceylon, are gazetted.

WE are informed that the Secretary of State for the Colonies has appointed Mr. JAMES HUGH M'CLOSKY, M.R.C.S., Edinburgh, late Colonial Surgeon, Labuan, to be Colonial Surgeon for Malacca.

Correspondence.

THE NATIVES IN HONG KONG.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—A great deal is being said in the China papers in favour of the abolition of the night-pass system, and much plausible argument is being brought into play in favour of that measure. I have been resident a long time in Hong Kong, and do not hesitate to say that I think it would be a great mistake to do away with it, and that it would be a still greater error to abolish the regulation by which Chinese are called upon to carry lamps. The night-pass system is of foreign origin, but the lamp precaution is simply the adoption in Hong Kong of what is universal in Chinese cities, where Chinese invariably carry lanterns—so that there is really nothing very oppressive in these measures; and they are of undoubted value in a policing point of view. I recollect very well when the lamp system was introduced, in consequence of an increase of crimes of violence, the Chinese raised a great cry against it; the complaints, however, were not attended to, and in a short time the native population fell in with the system to the undoubted improvement of the security of the streets. Before, therefore, Mr. Henessy takes the rash step of abolishing these safeguards, I should recommend him to institute careful inquiries among experienced foreigners in the Colony; and I am confident, if he takes steps to obtain advice from unbiassed and sound men, that he cannot fail to become convinced of the error which he will fall into by the attempt to apply to Hong Kong principles of Government which, however good in themselves, cannot be adopted with people such as the Chinese of that place. It is never to be overlooked that in Hong Kong we have not only to deal with a large resident criminal population, but that the island is so situated that unless somewhat severe precautionary measures be adopted, it will always afford a convenient place of refuge for the worst scum of the criminal population on the mainland.

In conclusion, I would point out that the Local Government of Hong Kong has been repeatedly misled by mistaking the outcry of a few as the opinion of the whole of the Chinese residents. Half-a-dozen Chinese, generally, no doubt, men of some respectability, but still not the whole population, get the ear of the authorities, and represent that "the Chinese Community" wish for this, that, or the other, when, in a large number of instances the mass of people wish nothing of the kind. I believe, if the native residents were canvassed fairly there is every probability in favour of their wishing for the continuance of the system, which is entirely in accord with what they are used to in their own cities.—Your obedient servant,

London, July 30, 1877. HONG-KONGIENSIS.

FOOCHOW SABBATH BREAKING.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—As an old China resident, will you permit me to congratulate the residents in Foochow upon the resolution which has been passed at the Club against Sunday billiards? I have no desire to enter upon any religious controversy on the subject; but I am sure that Englishmen of all denominations would regret that besides the temptations which cannot be avoided in a place like China young men there should be subjected to the additional temptation which would be offered by a billiard-room being open on Sundays. It is difficult enough for men who all the week are hard at work to withdraw their minds from the pressing needs of business, and too often the talk of the Tea and Silk rooms and the race course engrosses attention on the Day of Rest, to the exclusion of higher thoughts. But if this cannot be avoided in some cases, at least the general feeling of the foreign communities in China is religious, and the Sunday is a reality in all the open ports. It will be little to the credit of Foochow to be the first to alter this creditable state of things, and (though by no means rigidly Sabbatarian in my ideas) I would deeply regret anything which might do away in China with the calm and quiet of the Sunday, the one day when the thoughts of those separated from their friends and country naturally turn homewards, let us hope also Heavenwards. I am sure that many a China resident has in after life looked back with gratitude upon the simple services which he has attended when abroad, and the ability with which the Sunday has armed him to withstand at least to some extent, the moral enervation which is certain to be produced more or less in all, by the artificial life led as a rule in the Far East. I can well recollect how when I first arrived very many years ago as a young man in China the Sunday seemed to me a kind of oasis in a moral desert, and to be the great link with all that was dear and sacred at home; and I am sure it would be a source of deep regret if the already too small chances which exist in China of such feelings being continuous were lessened by temptation being offered to young men who, if left to themselves, might do better, to lounge away the Day of Rest amidst the click of billiard balls, the crack of soda-water corks, and the easy, not to say rather slangy, chit-chat which forms the staple of billiard-room conversation.—Yours faithfully,

London, July 31 1877. AN EX-FOOCHOW RESIDENT.

OVER-CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice that your correspondent, "A China Merchant," attributes the over-carriage of goods by the Canal boats to the want of sufficient arrangements at the intermediate ports; but I think he is somewhat mistaken as to the cause. At all events, whatever extra care may be required abroad, I believe the primary cause of the mistakes which arise is the want of proper means of storing the goods in London, in consequence of which Singapore, Hong Kong, and Shanghai get "mixed." A little extra expense in this direction would save the owners from claims which must under present circumstances amount to a large sum every year.—Your obedient servant,

W.

London, July 31st, 1877.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

On the 3rd inst. H.E. Kwoh, accompanied by Dr. Macartney and one of the Attachés, visited the Caxton Exhibition, South Kensington. They were conducted through the galleries by Mr. J. S. Hodson, the hon. secretary, and were very much interested in what they saw, naturally not least so in the Chinese block-printing in operation. The Chinese, from the close of the tenth century, had printed their books by blocks. Psalm xxiii. was being cast off a block, engraved in Canton, and exhibited by Mr. Thomas Jenner, and the proof was carefully inspected by Kwo-Tah-Jen.

THE LATE REV. DR. DOUGLAS.

By a telegram sent from Amoy we receive the painful intelligence that Rev. Dr. Douglas died on the 26th of July, of cholera. The news is all the more startling as cholera is a comparatively rare disease among the resident foreign population of the place. Dr. Douglas had been suffering from weakness and a general lowness of the system for a considerable time, and it may be if he had been in a better state of health he might have resisted the attack that has ended so fatally. His loss will be very severely felt in his own mission, and by many of the community who were intimate with him. He was thoroughly devoted to his work, and his extensive acquaintance with Chinese, and with the manners and habits of the people, rendered him exceedingly efficient as a missionary. He was not only very active in his own special work, but his spare hours which ought to have been devoted to relaxation, have for years been given to the completing of his great work, namely, his "Dictionary of the Amoy Language." This book is one of great value to the student of this particular dialect. It is exceedingly full and accurate. As one examines it, one is astonished at the amount of labour that has been bestowed upon it; and one wonders how, in addition to his missionary work, which made heavy demands upon his time and strength, he could have produced such an immense work as this book. It is only great workers, however, that know how to economise time so as to be able to accomplish results such as are beyond the powers of those who are less persevering and self-denying. From the statements of those long personally acquainted with him we can testify that though he must have given a great deal of his strength to this his "magnum opus" he never allowed it to come between him and his missionary work. He held very strongly that the preaching of the Gospel was and ought to be the chief aim of the missionary, and that literary work, unless of a purely missionary character, ought to occupy a secondary place in his thoughts. The building up of the Church of Christ engaged all his best powers and affections, and gratifying must the results have been to him as he passed away from this earth. Twenty-two years ago, when he reached Amoy, the mission was in its infancy. Few converts had been gathered in, and but one or two stations established. Now there are nearly seven hundred members and twenty-four stations that have been planted in the country North and South of Amoy. Who could have predicted that in so short a period he should have been permitted to see such grand results, especially when we consider that equal success has marked the work of the other two missions in Amoy?

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JULY 31.

The new German man-of-war which was launched at Gaarden, near Kiel, last week, was not the new ironclad corvette which is to be named the Bayern (Bavaria), but a steam corvette of far inferior dimensions than the Bayern, which is destined to become one of the most formidable battle ships of the German navy. The new corvette, which will be employed as a cruizer, has been named the Bismark. She is an iron vessel of 2,800 tons burthen, and in order to keep her bottom clean the hull has been cased in teak wood and coppered. The rigging is that of a full frigate, and the propeller, which is only a two-bladed one, can be hoisted up when the vessel is under sail. The engines are of 2,500-horse power, and the armament consists of 16 so-called ring-guns of 15 centimeter calibre. Four other corvettes of similar size are at present under construction, of which three are to be launched within the present year.

The conflict between the Government and the Catholic Clergy is still being carried on, notwithstanding that the Clericals have lost their best and most formidable champion by the recent death of Bishop Ketteler, at Mainz. As reported from Koeln (Cologne), the former Archbishop of that place, Paul Melchers, who is also a very energetic religious champion, has been sentenced "in contumaciam" to a fine of m.600 or thirty days' imprisonment, for having carried on the duties of his office, notwithstanding his having been dismissed from his archbishopric. A very remarkable incident in connection with this case occurred at Kissingen, when Prince Bismark was there this summer. Six clergymen (not Catholics) ventured to "interview" the great Chancellor, and were received in such an amiable manner that they were really astonished. Bismark on this occasion displayed deep and sound, although simple religious views, such as many a one would not have expected to find in the "Iron Duke," and he at the same time expressed his hopes that the Government in regard to the clerical conflict would in future restrict itself to a defensive policy and that the Catholic clergy on their own part would soon cease their opposition to the Government.

The mercantile world in Russia is far from believing in the neutrality of Great Britain during the present war, and in the expectation that the Russian ports of the Baltic will some day or other be blockaded by British ironclads, the export of grain from Russia at present has attained vast dimensions. With such haste is this trade carried on that the steamers employed therein are not allowed to bring their cargoes to a market, but discharge in Denmark, where supplies are being stored for future sale. Trade between Russia and Germany and Austria is at present languishing in consequence of the low value of Russian paper roubles. The losses incurred by the late great retrogradation of this means of payment are really enormous.

The great financial operation with reference to the Hamburg American Steamship Company appears to have been carried out. The shares, amounting to six millions of marks nominal, are to be bought back, all the preference loans are to be called in for payment, and are to be replaced by one great preference loan at 4 per cent., which is to be contracted with the Nordd. Bank and others. Those owners of preference bonds that do not choose to take the new bonds for their old ones will be paid in cash out of the above loan. By this manipulation the company hopes to be able next year to pay a dividend to its shareholders, who have not seen any money for five years past.

On the 24th of this month a report reached our town that the wall of a stone-pit in the neighbourhood of the little town of Wehlen (kingdom of Saxony) had tumbled into the river Elbe, and that navigation had been quite stopped. There is happily no loss of life to be deplored, but the damage done to property amounts to some hundred thousand marks. The river at the spot has a depth of fourteen feet, and is totally filled up with stones. A river steamboat, with a great number of passengers on board, passed the spot immediately before the disaster occurred, and narrowly escaped total destruction.

The Emperor and Empress of Brazil left Cologne on the 24th of July on their journey to the Upper Rhine and to Switzerland.

HAMBURG, AUG. 7.

The Emperor has left Gastein, where he has had a benefiting sojourn, and to-morrow he will be at Ischl (Austria), to meet the Sovereign of the Austro-Hungary Empire. During next week our Emperor will stay at Babelsburg, one of the Imperial castles in the neighbourhood of Berlin, and on the 15th of next month he proceeds to Karlsruhe, the capital of the Grand-Duchy of Baden, where great military manœuvres will be held of the 14th Army Corps, lasting until the 22nd of September. A large number of foreign officers and persons of high rank are invited for this occasion, and probably the ex-President of the United States, General Grant, will also join the Imperial suite. During the last few days of this month the Crown Prince will visit Bavaria, to inspect the Bavarian army.

The commercial treaty between Austria and Germany has been the chief topic of conversation during the past week, the German plenipotentiaries having proceeded to Vienna. All journals discussed freely the question whether Austria is now more inclined to adopt free-trade than hitherto.

The King and Queen of Denmark, accompanied by their daughter, the Princess Thyra, passed through here last Sunday on a journey to the southward, and after staying a night in the Hotel de l'Europe left Frankfort-upon-Main.

The port of Sundswall, in Sweden (Gulf of Bothnia), one of the principal places for the exportation of timber, which a few years ago suffered from a great fire, has again been visited by the destructive element, which broke out in a saw-mill, and attained fearful dimensions. No fewer than eighteen streets were destroyed, and it was only by the most energetic exertions that the fire was kept from the harbour, in which at the present time hundreds of vessels are taking in their cargoes. It must be remembered that all the towns of nothern Sweden are built of wood, principally of fir, and fires, therefore, when once alight, are only subdued with the greatest difficulty.

The hopes which were entertained of a rich harvest have been greatly diminished by the occurrence of almost incessant showers of rain. The wheat has been affected by what we call rust, oats have been kept back in growth and will ripen far too late, and the potatoes which were growing promisingly everywhere have been visited by a blight brought on by constant wet, and on many acres the crop has been entirely destroyed. From Hungaria and other South-Eastern districts the reports are far more favourable, and a large surplus crop will be available for exportation from these countries.

At Kiel, of late, some trials have been made under the superintendence of the Minister of Marine, with the so-called Whitehead torpedo, the patent of which has been acquired by our Government; the result has been not at all favourable, the torpedo at a distance of only 800 metres frequently missing the object aimed at. The building of torpedo boats has therefore been for the present suspended.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The same inactivity as reported in previous weeks has prevailed during the past week, and no speculative business has been reported. Transactions have only been to the extent of actual requirements for consumption. The Money Market continues to be well supplied.

COFFEE has been in no great demand, but sufficiently to keep values firm. The import of Coffee during the first six months reached the following figures: 1876, 8,652 barrels 839,665 bags, equal 103,400,000 lbs.; 1877, 12,360 barrels 845,451 bags, equal 106,800,000 lbs. Stock, 1876, 38,000,000 lbs.; 1877, 39,000,000 lbs.

SUGAR.—Values are slightly lower, in consequence of unfavourable reports from abroad, and transactions during the past fortnight have not exceeded 484 baskets brown Batavia, which changed owners for future delivery. Quotations are:—Manila brown, clayed, m.28½ to 30; do. unclayed, m.22½ to 24; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 30; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia, white, m.34 to 35; do. yellow and grey, m.31 to 33; do. brown, m.22½ to 29½; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.31½ to 34½; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.24 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.22 to 32 per 50 kilo.

RICE.—Prices for cleaned are slightly higher. Of uncleaned 8,000 bags have arrived per Eduard from Bassein, which have already changed owners afloat.

TEA is unchanged. The following first hand parcels have been sold, viz., 1,459/4, 1,189/8, 200/16 boxes Congou, 164/8 boxes Souchong, and 90/4 boxes Pecco.

COTTON is very quiet, and values rule in favour of buyers.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are quiet; prime quality m.5.60 to 6; Mace, m.4.60 to 4.80; Ginger, Bengal flat, m.26 to 26½; Cochin firm, m.63 to 86; Cloves are in more demand, per Nubia from Zanzibar arrived 423 Gonjes, and 277 bags stalks have already been sold for delivery; quotation for Zanzibar quality m.135 to 136, Amboina, m.163 to 165; Pepper is inquired for, Singapore m.38 to 38½, Penang m.35 to 36 White m.66 to 80.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

During the past week the tendency has been a varying one, as the news from the seat of war exercised an influence. During the first few days the resolution of the Austrian Government to decree a partial mobilisation depressed the market; but afterwards the victory of the Turks at Plevna caused a recovery. As regards local shares I have to report a reaction in those of the Hamburg American Steamship Company, as a rumour was afloat according to which the proceedings with the German Transatlantic Company, referred to in my last, were interfered with. The above-mentioned shares as well as those of the German Transatlantic and of the Norddeutsche Bank have therefore shown a temporary fall.

SHIPPING.

The arrivals and departures on the river-side during the fortnight have been satisfactory. From the Far East I have to report the arrival of the Marie, Gerdelmann, from Batavia; Oreb, Morice, from Bassein, and Anna Hausweldt, Schroeder, from Malden Island; and the departures of the Palma, Binge, for Bangkok, and Andreas, Hoyer, for Hong Kong. At Bremen a whole fleet of vessels have arrived from the rice ports, namely, the Smidt, Nobbe, from Bassein; Lasker, Rabe;

Oregon, Thorsen; Ystavat, Burman; Ravenna Padre, de Andreis, and Wilhelmine, Keller, all from Rangoon; and Willy Rickmers, Rehm, from Bassein. From Bremen there have been no departures for East India or China. The berth has been taken here, at Hamburg, by the Deutschland, Kuehn, for Rangoon; Egeria, s.s., for Penang, &c. (to leave to-morrow); Conrad Hinrich, Schueler, for Singapore; India, Dickson, and Fidelio, Bohsen, both for Hong Kong; and Iphigenia, Gren, for Japan. Cargo is still scarce, and rates continue to rule low.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, AUG. 8.

Matters are just now very dull both in politics and business. We are in the midst of the cucumber season, and everyone is taking holiday. There perhaps was never such a dull season known as the present. Trade has come to a complete standstill, and in politics there is nothing to report. The Ministers are all absent. It is said that their Budgets are quite ready, but it seems highly probable that the present Chamber will not meet again, and that all future legislation will be postponed until the new Chamber begins the Parliamentary struggle. It is said that the Minister of the Department of Justice desires to resign office, owing to ill-health. He has spent some time at Marienbad, but has returned unbenefited.

A Bill has been laid before Parliament to confirm the treaty between the Government and the Dutch India Railway Company, to sell to the State the line Batavia Buitenzorg, and to grant to the Company the concession for the lines from Djokjokarta to Magelang and Tjilatjap and from Sourakarta to Madioen. No opposition is expected.

Strange rumours are in circulation about the future intentions of the King. It is asserted that for some time past there have been several Frenchmen busy packing up at H.M.'s country seat, "het Loo," the several objects of art, which, it is said, are to be forwarded to Paris, where they are to be placed in an hotel, which was recently bought by the King. The conclusion is drawn that it is the intention of H.M. to abdicate. The Prince of Orange has left the Hague for Paris.

Much consternation has been caused by the fact that one of the most beautiful picture cabinets, that of the late Mrs. Van Loon, has been sold to Baron Rothschild, at Paris, for the sum of 1,500,000 guilders. All the pictures were from the old Dutch school. Negotiations were opened by our Government to buy this fine collection, but it creates a good deal of surprise that it was sold at once to Mr. Rothschild, and with such haste as if it had become necessary to raise the money quickly. The fact of this sale is the more to be regretted because the Government is building an enormous museum and picture gallery in this town.

You will remember that some time ago I wrote you about the complaints that the Minister of the Colonial Department ordered a good deal of what was wanted for the harbour works at Batavia from England. Mr. De Gelder, an engineer, has replied officially, and gave the reasons why the Government was compelled to apply to English manufacturers. But this has not restored peace. The Nederlandsche Industriel—an organ that fights for Protection—publishes in its last number an article of Messrs. Diepeveen, Lels and Smit, in which objections are made to the reasons adduced by Mr. De Gelder. They conclude that the Dutch manufacturers and shipbuilders are quite able to manufacture all that is wanted for these harbour-works, and that the Government did not address themselves to the right men to get information as to the prices.

The Handelsblad of this date contains an article urging the Government to take the initiative in the proposal to erect a lighthouse at Cape Sheneriff or Hafoen, in order to prevent such misfortunes as that which befell the steamer Meikong, of the Messageries Maritimes line.

The steamer Friesland, bound from Rotterdam to Java, grounded while going to sea through the new canal. Assisted by several tugboats she was floated off and continued her voyage.

The clerical population is greatly incensed by a measure which has been taken by the Minister of the Financial Department. For more than a century the Roman Catholic priests rented or hired from the State very extensive lands, well known under the name of St. Agatha, for a rental of only f.1,700 a year, their value being at least half a million. The Minister has announced that this arrangement must cease, and that the lands will be leased out by public tender.

The Zoological Gardens here, which possesses an excellent Japanese museum, has bought a large collection of objects illustrating the domestic life and industry of Japan.

According to a statistical return our population has increased in the last twenty-five years 25 per cent. Another return states that the consumption of spirits has at the same time increased 83 per cent.

I regret to announce the death of Mr. H. E. Verschoor, ex-member of our Senate. He died at Sleenwyk, and was eighty-three years of age.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Great dulness in our markets for Colonial Produce still prevails—the transactions have been very limited, both by public sale and private tender. The Money-Market is plentifully provided.

COFFEE.—Since my last report both here as in Rotterdam several first hand lots changed hands at firm prices, which went up in consequence of the small offers that were made. The Trading Company will sell by public sale on the 22nd inst. bales Java. Good ordinary is now quoted at 53c.

SUGAR is very dull. Some lots were sold at f.1 under the former quotations; they were bought by our refiners. Holders, however, are now disinclined to operate.

TOBACCO without the least business. The stock in the first hand includes 44,213 bs. Java, 4,337 bs. Sumatra, 3,222 bs. Manila and 3,000 bs. E.I.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are very firm, but there are no sales to report. Mace met with a good demand, especially for fine qualities; sold were 171 chests ex Lord of the Isle. The quotation is as follows:—Nutmegs, No. 1, 170c. to 215c.; No. 2, 140c. to 170c.; No. 3, 95c. to 120c.; No. 4, 45c. to 85c. Mace, D, 130c. to 135c.; E, 120c. to 25c. Pepper 20c. to 21c.; White, 40c. to 45c.

RICE (uncleaned.)—Burmah met with a lively demand and prices are advancing. No transactions took place, except two cargoes which were bought from the London market for account of Dutch firms. Java cleaned enjoyed a regular trade; ordinary quality was somewhat higher n price. Japan met with much more attention.

JAVA INDIGO had a good demand, especially in the ordinary qualities. About 400 chests changed hands at firm prices.

TIN.—Since the auction of Banca which was held on the 31st of July, and when in average f. 41.05 was paid, the market looked enormous dull. Actually can be bought at f.41 to f.41¼; but there is a strict want of amateurs. Billiton, for being delivered in September, was sold by small parcels at f.39½ to f.39¾. It is now offered at f.39, so that the market closes much more duller.

MANILA HEMP has met with a steady demand; but there is a want of stock.

HIDES look much more healthier, but there are no sales to report. On the 14th inst. about 12,000 ps. E.I. will be offered for private tender.

DRUGS.—Without transactions.

TEA.—At the much more lower prices some demand prevailed. The quotations for good ord. China Congou is 70c. to 75c.; good ord. Java 65c. to 70c. The unsold stock includes 30,700/4 chests Java, and 5,400/4 chests China.

Monetary and Commercial.

The tendency of the Tea market continues upwards for all Teas over 1s. 2d. per lb., but those under this figure are still uninquired for, and are extremely difficult of realisation, except at auction, where they continue to be thrown upon the market. It is satisfactory to notice that these unreserved sales are diminishing in quantity, and that the trade are becoming more disposed to careful purchasing, and consequently to lean again towards private contract. The arrivals have been light, and the telegrams from China continue to announce diminished shipments. Some of last season's Teas have been fetching very low prices, notably one lot in chests, which only realised 7¾d.; another instance of the extreme inadvisability of holding Teas at the risk of running from one season into another. The Green Tea market is in a deplorable state, enhanced by the untoward disturbances in America.

The state of the Silk market continues most discouraging; and is indeed far worse than, making every allowance for adverse circumstances, would seem to be warranted. It is true that the stock of Chinas and Japans here is, in round numbers, about double what it was last year, say 34,000 bales, against 17,000, but, on the other hand, settlements and stocks in China show a decrease of about 24,000 bales as compared with this time last season, so that in point of fact, so far as supplies are concerned, the market should be better by some 7,000 bales less this season than last. Among the causes of the present state of the market are the general dulness of trade, the uncertain aspect of political affairs and the recent disturbances in America. But for these depressing influences, there can be little doubt that the market would recover in face of the favourable statistics.

In the Produce Markets there has been little change during the week, business continuing very quiet. Coffee is again lower, except fine colory, which maintains the previous value. Sugar is in heavy supply, and very dull. Black Pepper is lower, owing to increased stocks. The demand for floating cargoes of Rice has been maintained, and a further advance has been realised. Tin is again lower, Straits being quoted £66, Banca £70 per ton. Other articles show no alteration.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts in July 1877 were £19,187. The total receipts from January 1 to July 31, 1877, were £115,007, and in the corresponding months, 1876, £115,876; 1875, £93,844.

were allotted on the 8th inst., at the minimum of 1s. 8⅞d. per rupee, or at about ⅛d. above last week. Calcutta obtained £163,372, Madras £1,628, and Bombay £100,000, tenders for bills on the two first-named Presidencies receiving about 77 per cent., and those on Bombay for bills in full.

The P. and O. steamer Bokhara was despatched from Southampton Thursday with the sum of £597,991 in specie for the East, viz., for Bombay, silver £209,500; ditto gold, £10,000; Calcutta, silver, £260,100; Penang, silver, £53,600; Singapore, silver, £20,000; Hong Kong, silver, £34,791; and Shanghai, silver, £10,000.

Bar silver has been very firm during the week, and some amount has been placed at 54¼d. per oz. for India. Mexican dollars have declined in value; and those on the market have been sold at 53½d. per oz., showing a reduction of 1d. per oz. in price.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—There is no change of importance to note in our market during the past week. The public sales have been on a moderate scale, but prices for fair kinds of black-leaf Congou went lower ; other kinds much as before. Privately there has been a fair amount of business done without much change in prices, good to fine kinds meeting most attention.—Congous.—Red-leaf kinds : Siftings remain much as before ; common to fair kinds remain dull of sale ; fair to good kinds, both of Saryune and Kaisow, have been steady, but with only a moderate inquiry ; fine remain firm as also finest, at full prices. In Pak-Lin kinds there has been no alteration. Black-leaf kinds : Common to fair of old season still sell from 7½d. to 8d. per lb. In new there is no alteration in prices, but they are dull of sale privately, and at public sale in one or two instances lower rates were established ; fair to good medium have been saleable at former prices ; good to fine have also sold at previous rates ; finest remain in fair request at fully former prices. New-make kinds remain as before, the good kinds being more saleable than the common to fair. Oolongs: Prices have been very irregular ; at public sale on the 3rd inst. a few parcels realised full prices, but yesterday a further quantity went 1d. per lb. lower. Privately it is difficult to get bids except for the finer Formosa kinds. Souchongs : We are yet without arrivals of new season's, and in old there is nothing of interest to report. Scented Teas : Canton Capers, common to fair kinds have sold at previous prices ; good to fine realise full rates. In Orange Pekoes there is no alteration to notice. Foochow kinds remain firm at the decline last quoted. Green Teas : The demand is moderate, and prices are without material change. The public sales have comprised 10,515 packages, the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.
Coastwise	610,092 ...	597,938
	3,645,595	2,865,889

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's Circular says :—Since our last the market has been very quiet, but the arrival of four vessels may lead to renewed inquiry. Generally Importers have been firm, and there is little alteration to notice in prices. Foochow kinds are much neglected. Foochow Congous :—Fair, 10½d. to 1s. 1d., with very few sales ; medium, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. ; fine, very little on offer. Black Leaf Congous : Fair, 10½d. to 1s. 1d. ; medium to good medium, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 7d. per lb. ; finest, 2s. 2d. to 2s. 4d. per lb. Tayshans : Common to fair, 9½d. to 11d., have been inquired for. Scented Teas : Canton Capers : Good common, 11½d. ; fair 1s. to 1s. 2d. Scented Orange Pekoes : Fair, 1s. 2d. ; medium, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 6d. Green Teas are not wanted.

SILK.

Messrs. Waithman and Co.'s Circular says :—There has been no feature of any interest to notice in the condition of the market, though a little business has been transacted in most descriptions of Silk, but only on an extremely limited scale. It is disappointing to find that there is no increase in the rate of consumption, the deliveries for last month being on a parity with those of June, though showing a considerable improvement as compared with those of the previous month. Even with this restricted consumption, however, stocks exhibit a reduction of 5 per cent. since the beginning of July, and must be gradually decreasing until the arrival of the new season's Silk from China, which cannot be in any quantity before the beginning of October, as the exports to Great Britain up to the present time are but 1,000 bales. Deliveries :—

	June.	July.
China	1,703 ...	1,741
Canton...	573 ...	408
Japan	227 ...	272

Messrs. Arles, Dufour and Co.'s Lyons Circular dated 3rd inst. says :—Our trade, usually quiet in July, which is a period of between seasons has this year shown a still greater depression, due to various causes. The state of politics alone would have prevented any contracts for new European Silk to deliver, which are as a rule placed at this period, especially when prices are low, as at present. The stoppage of some further houses has moreover considerably discouraged buyers in bringing to light the sad consequences of last season's exaggerated rise. It is now evident that the extraordinary large business of last year was almost entirely speculative. Except for a very short time, manufacturers were quite unable to sell their goods at corresponding prices, and the rapid decline that followed entailed on some of them heavier losses than they could bear. Under such circumstances, business will probably remain of a very hand to mouth character, as long as the reduction of work does not cause a sufficient reaction on prices of Silk-piece goods to allow manufacturers to work with a profit. Thus the future depends more than ever upon the state of consumption. We may add that a revival, whenever it takes place, ought to be greatly helped by the low prices of Europeans, leaving now as much as 5 to 10 per cent. loss upon the cost of new Silk, and also by the high prices ruling in Shanghai and the reduced scale of shipments from that port.

COCOANUT OIL.—Transactions have been unimportant. Cochin is quoted £43 10s. to £44, Ceylon in pipes at £38 10s. per ton.

COTTON.—A depressed tone has prevailed, and prices of American have suffered a further general decline, but East India kinds show little change. The sales for the week ending this evening are about 9,500 bales. On the spot, Tinnevelly 5½d., good fair ; Western Madras 5 7-16d., good ; Bengal 4⅝d., fair ; Rangoon 4⅞d. to 4 15-16d., good fair to good ; for arrival Tinnevelly 5⅞d. June to September, good fair.

CUTCH.—Small sales of "flag BB," "Elephant," and "Howdah and Flag" marks have been made at 24s. per cwt.

CANTHARIDES.—6 cases China small to small and bold mixed sold at 2s. 4d. to 2s. 9d.

COFFEE.—The market has ruled dull, and moderate supplies of Plantation Ceylon at auction have gone off flatly at a decline of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per cwt., excepting a few lots fine, which have sold firmly. Native Ceylon has sold steadily. The closing values are, Plantation triage at 80s. to 90s. 6d., common grey to fine coloury small at 92s. 6d. to 98s. 6d., low middling at 100s. 6d. to 104s., middling at 104s. 6d. to 106s. 6d., good middling to fine middling at 107s. to 110s., bold at 110s. 6d. to 118s., pea-berry at 106s. to 111s. Native small at 77s. 6d., good ordinary at 85s. 6d., pea-berry at 90s. per cwt.

GAMBIER.—At auction 342 bags cubes were chiefly sold at steady rates, fine pale rather blocky 28s., ditto first-class sea-damaged 25s., 800 bales pressed bought in at 28s. Privately 100 bales sold at 20s. 7½d. ex quay.

HIDES.—At the periodical public sales yesterday the assortment of East India in the hair was very indifferent. Little was done in Singapore and Penang Ox and Cow, the bulk catalogued having been withdrawn. Rangoon were sold at a further decline of ¼d. per lb. The China offered were largely damaged by worm, and most of the "sound" piles were more or less affected. Prices of the sound were irregular, and on the average slightly in favour of buyers. Damages sold at a decline of ¼d. to ½d. per lb. Of 58,911 Hides offered 30,935 sold : Light, average 8¾ to 11⅛ lbs., 6d. to 7d. ; heavy, average 14⅜ to 18 lbs., 6d. to 6¾d. ; extra heavy, average 23¾ to 27⅛ lbs., 6¼d. to 6⅝d. ; kips, average 5⅞ to 7⅛ lbs., 7¼d. to 8d. ; skins, average 3¼ to 5⅜ lbs., 7d. to 7⅞d. ; thirds, 4¼d. to 4⅜d. per lb. The supply of Singapore and Penang was moderate, and late rates were generally obtained. Of 7,373 offered 3,208 sold : Fair, first heavy, average 25¼ lbs., 5½d. ; second heavy, average 22⅝ lbs., 4⅞d. ; fair ordinary, first heavy, average 27⅞ to 36⅜ lbs., 5¼d. ; second heavy, average 23¾ to 34⅝ lbs., 4⅝d. to 5d. ; light, average 13¾ to 22 lbs., 5¼d. to 6⅛d. ; ordinary, first heavy, average 36 lbs., 4¾d. ; second heavy, average 32⅝ lbs., 4½d. ; thirds, 3⅝d. per lb.

OILS.—20 cases Japan Peppermint bought in at 18s.

PEPPER.—Black : The market has been depressed by the exceptionally heavy supplies, both actual and anticipated, and easy rates have been accepted, resulting in sales of about 1,500 bags privately, including 1,200 bags ex last week's auction, Singapore at 3 11-16d., Penang at 3 9-16d. to 3½d. In auction only 1,034 bags were offered and chiefly sold ; of 400 bags Singapore 350 bags sold at 3⅝d. to 5⅜d., 180 bags Penang bought in at 3½d., 554 bags ordinary Trang sold at 3¼d. to 3⅜d. Privately since the sale moderate sales of Penang have been made at 8⅜d. to 3 9 16d.,

and Singapore at 3 11-16d. White: The good supply of 1,039 bags Singapore at auction met a moderate demand, and only 400 bags found buyers at easy rates, except for fine, which sold steadily, fair to good fair bold at 6⅜d. to 6⅝d., fine bold at 6⅞d. to 7d. Since the sale 250 Singapore have been sold, chiefly at 6½d., also for arrival 25 tons Singapore, distant shipment, at 6½d. per lb.

RICE.—The demand for floating cargoes continues strong, and business has been done at a further advance in rates. On the spot the market is firm with little business. Nineteen floating cargoes have been sold, viz.:—The Ravenna, 1,013 tons Rangoon, March, at 10s. 7½d.; the Arabella, 1,026 tons Rangoon, April, at 10s. 9d.; the Lina, 1,179 tons Rangoon, April, at 10s. 9d.; the Qvos, 678 tons Rangoon, off coast, at 10s. 7½d. for London; the Craigee Lea, 850 tons Bassein, June, at 11s.; the P. C. Peterson, 964 tons Moulmain, May, at 11s.; the Hangesund, 1,500 tons Rangoon, off coast, at a little below 10s. 9d.; the Janet Forbes, 599 tons Rangoon, June sailing, at 11s. 3d. open charter; the Churchston, 707 tons Bassein, May sailing, at 11s.; the Thirza, 1,202 tons Rangoon, April sailing, at 10s. 10½d. open charter; the Jessie Osborne, 1,462 tons Bassein, May sailing, at 11s.; one of 1,900 tons Bassein, late June sailing, at 11s. 3d.; the George Skolfield, 1,875 tons Necransie, off coast, at 9s. 9d. ex ship London; the Ophir, 1,100 tons Necransie, March sailing, at 9s. 10½d. open charter; the Carmelita Rocco, 860 tons Rangoon, May sailing, at 11s. 3d. open charter; the Mario, 1,001 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 10s. 9d.; the Flintshire, 1,825 tons Bassein, April sailing, at 10s. 9d.; the Apennino, 960 tons Necransie, off coast, at 9s. 10½d.; and the Mornington, 1,900 tons Bassein, late June sailing, at 11s. On the spot 100 tons white Bengal have been sold at 13s. 3d., 250 tons fine ditto at 13s. 9d., and 1,000 bags Moulmein at 10s.

SUGAR.—Early in the week privately 50 tons Native Penang in bags were sold at 18s.; and 520 tons Ilo Ilo unclayed Manila at 18s.; also afloat the following for the U.K.: The Emily Davis, 500 tons Java No. 14½, at 30s. 9d.; and one half of the Ukraine, 400 tons Java No. 13½, at 30s. 6d. Extreme dulness has since prevailed in the market, to some extent attributable to the heavy landings and increased stocks, and with little demand for any description, sales can only be effected at a further concession; as, however, the rather large supplies at public sale have been all bought in, and no sales have occurred privately, no decided reduction can be reported.

SPICES.—Cassia Lignea: Unworked is more inquired for, and 300 boxes have been told at 48s. cash less interest. Cinnamon Chips: 199 bags Ceylon bought in at 4½d. to 5½d. Cinnamon, Cloves, Nutmegs, and Mace: No business done.

TAPIOCA.—Small sales of good Singapore have been made privately at 2¾d. At auction 1,216 bags Singapore went off slowly, and the bulk was bought in at 2¾d., only about 350 bags being sold at easy rates, ordinary and small at 2½d., good small at 2⅝d.

TIN has been very quiet at a further slight reduction in value. Closing quotations are:—Straits on the spot and afloat £66, Banca £70, Billiton £67 per ton.

TURMERIC.—20 bales China bold plump finger rather bulby bought in at 30s.

VERMILLION.—10 boxes China bought in at 2s. 9d.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Early in the week, with a limited inquiry and flat Cotton market, symptoms of weakness appeared. Both manufacturers and spinners seemed inclined to give buyers some advantage in price, and this was mostly apparent in regard to Yarns, but the possible concessions were not tested, the few offers actually made being on too low a scale for business to result. There has since been only a very slow demand for both Yarns and Goods, and prices have scarcely been tested. On all sides, however, the tendency is in favour of buyers, and this is especially noticeable in Yarns, quotations of which are generally lower. In prices of Goods there is also a weaker tone, though when engagements still exist manufacturers are less open to make appreciable concessions.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE CLYDE SHIPBUILDERS.—There now appears some prospect that the contest between the master shipbuilders and their workmen on the Clyde is drawing to a close. During the past week neutral parties have been exerting their influence to bring about an amicable understanding, and proposals made have led to a resolution that the matter in dispute should be submitted to two arbiters, before whom five representatives from each side should appear and state their respective cases. The masters have held a meeting, when this suggestion and the present position of affairs were discussed at considerable length. Ultimately it was agreed that before taking any decided course one way or the other it should be ascertained from the parties who are moving in the direction of arbitration whether they are acting with the consent or approval of the men, and in the event of the reply being in the affirmative there is good ground for believing that the employers will accede to arbitration. It may be mentioned that the shipwrights at a recent meeting agreed to refer the whole case to arbitration, leaving the details to be afterwards fixed. The strike has now lasted close on seventeen weeks, and much distress prevails among some sections of the men, those especially not in the trades' unions.

THE SARPEDON AND THE JULIA DAVID.—Some time since an action was brought by the Ocean Steamship Company, the owners of the Sarpedon, against the owners of the Belgian screw steamship Julia David, to recover damages in respect of the injury which was caused to the Sarpedon by a collision between the two vessels in September, 1876, in the Bay of Biscay. There was a counter-claim for damages by the owners of the Julia David for the damage caused to that vessel. At the time when the collision occurred the Sarpedon was on a voyage from Shanghai to London with a valuable cargo of tea and other goods, said to be worth £250,000. The Julia David was on a voyage from Havre to the Mediterranean. Upon the evidence, which was very conflicting, Sir R. Phillimore held that the Sarpedon was alone to blame for the collision, and decreed accordingly. The owners of the Sarpedon appealed, and the Court of Appeal has delivered judgment, reversing the decision of the Admiralty Division, and holding that the Julia David was alone to blame.

MR. DAVID JENKINS has given notice that he will call the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the heavy rate levied by the Suez Canal Company nominally on account of pilotage, but the greater portion of which is said to be appropriated to defray the cost of buoys, beacons, lights, and other expenses necessary to the safe navigation of the canal that should be paid out of tonnage dues, and not from a sum levied as pilotage; and to move that such a charge being, in the opinion of Parliament, opposed to the spirit of the conditions laid down by the international commission which sat at Constantinople in 1873, limiting the tonnage dues to f.10 per ton, with a maximum surtax of f.4 per ton, Her Majesty's representatives at the company's board be instructed to use such means as are in their power to secure its reduction to the scale of pilotage actually paid by the company.

UNSEAWORTHY SHIPS.—A return has been issued by the Board of Trade of the number of ships ordered to be detained from the date when the Merchant Shipping Act, 1876, came into operation, down to June 30, 1877. The total number of ships ordered to be detained on account of alleged defects in hull, equipments, or machinery was 104. Of these 101 were found on inspection to be unsafe, 2 were found safe, and in one case the survey was pending at the date of the return. The total number of alleged cases of overloading or improper loading was 27, and all these vessels were found on inspection to be unsafe.

NEW FRENCH MAIL STEAMER.—The present mail will be conveyed from Marseilles by the new steamer of the Messageries Maritimes, called the Yangtse, which was recently launched at the La Ciotat building-yard. This steamer is built on the model of the Djemnah, excepting that the constructions on her upper deck are of mahogany instead of teak. She is commanded by Lieutenant Rapatel, formerly of the Sindh. The Yangtse has been put on the India and China line, to replace the Meikong, recently lost at Cape Guardafui.

A JAPANESE SHIP.—The Niigata Maru, Captain Walker, has arrived in the Thames from Japan. This is the first vessel bearing the Japanese flag which has entered the port of London. She has made this long passage round the Cape under sail, occupying 141 days. Captain Walker reports that the Japanese sailors behaved admirably, and in any emergency were always ready to do their part. The Niigata Maru is to be refitted with boilers and machinery, and will then return to Japan.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 27th June, and we have advices via San Francisco fourteen days later, viz., to the 11th July. The French mail from London, May 18, arrived out on the 2nd July, and the following P. and O. mail of May 25 was received on the 8th July.

According to the last accounts the Japanese Government were expressing confident hopes of the speedy suppression of Saigo's rebellion, and that then it would be enabled to divert a sufficient number of troops into the province of Tosa, to disarm and overawe the discontented samourai of that agitated province. If successful in the accomplishment of these two objects, it purposed to re-organise and consolidate the departments, to lessen the number of Ministers, and to convoke a semi-Representative Assembly.

The case of Iwasaki v. Colomb, arising out of the collision with H.M.S. Audacious, has, after weary days of hearing and listening to the expensive and ingenious harangues of counsel, and the altogether too minute and elaborate string of questions and summing up of the learned and very painstaking Judge who tried the case, the jury were unable to agree upon a verdict, and were discharged; so that the whole affair has resulted in nothing but a vexatious waste of time for everybody concerned, except the lawyers, who generally contrive to make money out of the misfortunes of others. Even the newspapers and their readers have been victimised. Columns of type have been set up, and have occupied all the available space, to the exclusion of more interesting matter. And the negative result reached is to be attributed, we hear, to one of the jury, who stood alone in his opinion, the other four agreeing,—which puts us in mind of a story of a jury of twelve retiring to consider their verdict, in a very plain case; eleven promptly agreed as to their decision, but the twelfth man adhered to a wrong, and a contrary opinion, and he bitterly complained that his fellow jurors would not give up their view for his own, at the same time exclaiming that "he never met with eleven such obstinate men in his life." Probably had the community been spared the legal gentlemen who mainly live by litigation, the affair might have been equitably settled, to the satisfaction of all parties, in half an hour's conference, and by the payment of the cost of damages resulting from the collision, which would have amounted to considerably less than the costs of the abortive suit just ended. After being in consultation about two hours, the jury were eventually discharged without giving a verdict, it being found impossible for them to agree, four being for the defendant, and one for the plaintiff. The Judge, ruling with reference to the demurrer is, however, to be appealed against by defendant on the advice of his counsel.

The Herald observes that the outlook for Japan this year is far from promising. For six months a formidable insurrection has been raging, and has not yet been quelled, though everyone desirous of seeing the country at peace must hope that it will be before long brought to an end. With regard to the two principal exports,—silk and tea,—the prospects are gloomy. The war in Europe—which no one as yet knows when or how it will terminate—depresses the Silk market to such an extent that, outside of every other circumstance, prices must rule low there, and consequently here also. As to tea, in face of the bad results realised in America for such parcels of the present season's crop as have been put on the market, it is unreasonable to expect that high rates can be afforded to be given here. Then, also, with respect to rice, unless rain falls in quantity, apprehensions begin to be entertained that the crop may be so far limited that there may prove to be no surplus for export. For years past Japan has been blessed with an abounding crop of rice, and it would not be surprising if this year the weather should be so unfavourable as to prevent the realisation of a good harvest. For silkworm cards no extra demand need be anticipated, and it is pretty certain that graineurs will be found offering even lower prices than last year, in order to guard themselves against a repetition of being competed with by Japanese speculators in their own markets in Italy and France. It then appears that whilst domestic war is wasting the resources of the nation, that concurrently with this the exports to foreign countries are likely to realise considerably less than during last year, so that in 1877 Japan has to disburse more and will get less than during 1876. The ability of the people to pay for articles of import will be curtailed, and neither a large trade nor remunerative prices can reasonably be looked forward to.

The Herald also contains the following items of news:—

A farewell dinner has been given to Dr. Willis at the Grand Hotel. Sir Harry Parkes occupied the chair, and Mr. Consul Robertson the vice chair. About forty gentlemen, the personal friends of Dr. Willis, were present on the occasion. Sir Harry Parkes, in proposing the guest's health, eulogised his professional ability and geniality of disposition, and alluded to his services in the cause of humanity in the war of the revolution, when he attended the sick and wounded on both sides, having previously stipulated that he should receive no remuneration from either. Dr. Willis acknowledged with much feeling the tribute which his late chief and old friend had paid to him, which, he said, was far beyond his deserts. He then proposed, in very complimentary terms, the health of Sir Harry Parkes, which was suitably acknowledged by that gentleman. Other toasts followed. The company did not separate until a late hour. Dr. Willis is one of the oldest residents in Japan, having been here about fifteen years; and the gathering of last Saturday was an evidence of the friendly feeling which those who have known him longest and best entertain towards him.

If it be, as is supposed, that ministers, because they are divided in opinion on the subject of the Municipal Directorship, have not agreed to take concerted action with regard to that office, it bids fair to be extinguished, in which case, as the public are to be deprived of the services of that useful officer, then two services which the Local Government has up to this escaped from performing might very properly be insisted on,—that of watering the streets on dry days during summer, and lighting the settlement throughout the year:—the first is a part of the duty of scavenging, and the latter is a measure of police: so at least does Mr. Hamilton Fish regard it in one of his communications to Mr. Bingham. There cannot be a doubt that well lighted streets operate as a check upon burglary, and other crimes and misdemeanours. In addition to the payment of absurdly high ground rents, the Government ought not to expect the citizens to bear these additional burdens; the expense of watering and lighting should be now, without further question, borne by the authorities.

Mr. H. Cook, shipwright, of No. 115, Creekside, last year bought the wreck of the schooner Otsego, at public auction (as she lay on the rocks in Christmas Bay, Sikotan Island), for $130. The Otsego had been blown ashore during a heavy gale, while endeavouring to make an offing, on the 27th September, 1876, and on Mr. Cook's arrival in his schooner Beatrice, on the 11th May last, he found her lying inside a formidable reef of rocks where she had been lifted, the tide at low water leaving her high and dry. Work was at once commenced to get the vessel afloat, and, although they met with much opposition from the weather, which continued wet and misty, with an occasional gale, the ways were placed, and foot by foot she was got down over the rocks into deep water, her sides and bottom having been thoroughly caulked previously. The work occupied thirty-seven days. On the 17th of June the vessel was floated; two days were spent in fitting up the rigging, &c., and after a disagreeable passage of twenty days, occupied in beating against fresh southerly winds and much foggy weather, Mr. Cook had the satisfaction of anchoring his craft in port. She is a fine sea boat, and not much the worse for her accident.

On the 26th June, a Japanese nurse, at Madame Pelikan's, had occasion to prepare some food for her mistress's baby; for that purpose she lit a spirit lamp, and whilst it was alight she replenished the reservoir with alcohol, spilling some beside, when the whole took fire. In her alarm, she dropped the bottle, saturating her dress and the carpet, which also became a blaze. The unfortunate woman gave one agonising shriek, and rushed into her mistress's bedroom, enveloped in flames. Madame Pelikan tried to put out the fire, and got severely burnt; by this time Mons. Pelikan, by rolling the nurse in some bedding, managed to extinguish the flames on her person. Whilst this was going on, the carpet of the adjoining room, which had been saturated with spirit, was burning, and also the boards beneath; the child was in its cot, with flames around it, but was rescued by its father uninjured. A medical man was at once sent for, and the dreadfully burnt nurse taken to the hospital, where she lies in so precarious a state that she is not expected to survive.

On the 4th July a meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt estate of Messrs. G. Nachtigal and Co. was held at the German Consulate. The official liquidator, Mr. H. Andersen, read a statement of the affairs of the estate, according to which the liabilities amounted to about $40,000 and the assets to $7,276, besides $1,000 in uncollected outstandings. He declared a dividend of 15 per cent. to the approved creditors. The debtor, Mr. Nachtigal, then proposed the following composition:—The money in hand to be distributed according to the official statement; the outstandings to be sold at public auction and the proceeds distributed at the same rate, and he to receive a full discharge. As the creditors present, who represented more than three-fourths of the total claims, namely, $28,132, gave their assent to the above proposal, the composition was accepted.

On July 5 a meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt estate of Messrs. Douglas and Co. was held at the German Consulate. The official liquidator, M. F. Knoblauch, laid on the table a statement of the affairs of the estate, from which it appeared that the liabilities amounted to $4,160.04, out of which $255.18 were privileged claims entitled to payment in full, while the assets only amounted to a little more than $800, besides a lot of bad outstandings. After paying privileged debts and costs there only remained 2 9-10ths per cent. for the other claims. The statement was accepted, and the outstandings handed over to Mr. Douglas for collection.

The Akebono Shimbun has the following estimate of the financial fruits of the present civil war:—The Finance Department has already spent yen 2,000,000 on the expedition against the Kagoshima rebels. The deficiency in the land tax, caused by the insurrection in the various ken of Kiushiu, cannot be less than yen 8,000,000. And even if the war should cease at this moment, it would at least have cost yen 40,000,000 when the troops and policemen have been disbanded and paid off, and compensation paid for the losses sustained by the people during the war. But if the war continues, and we take the expenses hitherto incurred as a basis of calculation, then it costs yen 5,000,000 a month, and consequently, if the war lasts two months longer, it will cost an additional sum of yen 10,000,000. Besides this, the military stores must be replenished, and the damage done to the war material repaired. This may give an idea of the enormous sum the war will have cost, when once it is brought to a close.

The Japan Mail publishes Mr. Consul Robertson's report on the Trade for the year 1876. He states:—

The import trade of 1876 falls below that of 1875 by $3,112,029, while the export trade of 1876 exceeds that of 1875 by $8,965,149. Of the above sum of $3,112,029, as exhibiting the decrease in the import trade of 1876, only $260,805 is the decrease in the actual trade of the place, for while in 1875 articles on Government account figured for $3,119,535, in 1876 they only amounted to $621,284, or a decrease under this heading of $2,498,251. In my last report I drew attention to the unsatisfactory nature of the trade during the period then under review, and I think the figures now brought forward clearly demonstrate that the remarks I then made were not put on record without fair grounds. Many merchants and importers have probably found that the field here, after all, is but limited, and the intense desire prevailing on all sides to enter into large operations cannot but be attended with danger in any small markets, especially in one such as this, where the capital at the command of most of the native merchants is comparatively so small. Reviewing, however, the general result of the import trade for the past year, I think I am right in saying that more satisfaction in respect to trade is generally expressed, and it is admitted that not only have profits been realised on most goods, but that heavy losses on the importations of the year have been avoided. I say importations of the year, because it is impossible for me in a report of this kind to take into consideration the stocks which remain over at the close of the year.

TOKIO.

The Tokio Times of July 7 has the following:—No intelligence of importance has been received this week from the disturbed districts of Kiusiu. It is understood that the rebel operations are now confined to the province of Hiuga, which will presently be invaded by strong bodies of Imperial troops. The 4th of July was celebrated with much spirit in Yokohama and was duly observed as a holiday by Americans in Tokio. English opposition to the transportation of mails from Japan to Europe by certain routes has been sustained with such persistence as to cause the Post-office Department to relinquish some of the obvious rights conferred by the admission of Japan to the Postal Union. Why should the Government of Japan pay a subsidy to the P. and O. Steamship Company for carrying mails? Can anybody offer one satisfactory reason for such a proceeding? We have yet to hear the first common sense argument in its favour.

The above paper gives the following with reference to restaurants:—Numbers of good restaurants exists in Tokio, most of which are but little known to foreigners. Of those best reputed among the Japanese, the Yaozen at Sanya, near Asakusa, and the Matsu-gen at Uyeno are noted for the excellence of their cookery and sake. The Nakamura-ro at Riogoku is a well known resort for gentlemen who wish to discuss the topics of the day, and enjoy not merely gustatory pleasures, but also "the feast of reason and the flow of soul." Among its patrons may be found many officers of the army and other departments, editors, &c. There are, besides these, houses famous for some specialty, such as the Tsukuzi at Koku cho, for eels, and the Imakin on the Tori, for chickens. It is hardly necessary to allude to the two branches of the Sei Yo Ken, near Tsukiji and Uyeno, their reputation being now familiar to all residents and most visitors. The most popular, however, of all the eating-houses of the capital is the Matsuda, on the Ginza, at Kiobashi. This is really an immense establishment, having accommodation for two thousand customers at once. It is owned by a wealthy woman, named Matsuda Kane, by whom it was first opened in 1873.

The official mansion of the Japanese Foreign Minister in Tokio, in the rear of the former site of the Guai Mu Sho, is now completed. Japanese papers say that it is furnished and decorated throughout in the French style.

Mr. de Geoffroy, French Minister to Japan, was entertained at dinner by the Emperor at Tokio on the 14th June. Among the guests were Messrs. Sanjo, Okubo, Tokudaiji, Ito, Terashima, and other high officials. Mr. de Geoffroy has since returned to Yokohama.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Osaka Nippo says:—

A letter from Kumamoto, dated the 18th, runs as follows:—The space occupied by the rebel lines is gradually narrowed day by day, and altogether in Hitoyoshi-guchi over 1,000 have surrendered. They are said to have been forced to take up arms, and are natives of Satsuma and Osumi. It is rumoured that some of them have confessed that those who possess firearms in each company are between twelve and five, and that these firearms are put in the forts and used by turns. When ammunition becomes scarce, the rebels make the more noise. They are also short of provisions.

The Osaka police have arrested Iwakami and Hayashi (shizoku of Kochi), a shizoku of Fukuoka Ken, a heimin of that Ken, and a shizoku and heimin of Osaka Fu. They have all been taken to Kioto.

Statement of passenger and goods traffic on the Kobe-Kioto Railway, for week ending July 1st, 1877:—1st class, 52; 2nd class, 640; 3rd class, 22,744; total, 23,436. Amount received for passengers, yen 6,823·62; for luggage and parcels, yen 268·42; for goods, yen 581·084. Total amount, yen 7,673·124. Corresponding period of last year, yen 3,361·409.

Two signboards recently put up in Kobe, "Furnishfs Maker" and "Large Beer"—presumably intended for Lager Beer—bear further testimony to the very curious fact that the Japanese should continue to perpetrate any kind of nonsense in this way rather than submit their designs before execution to any foreigner for a minute.

That Japanese are just as ready to swindle one another as they are to swindle a foreigner we have long maintained, and we believe a cake seller who plies his vocation on the native beach is certainly of the same way of thinking now, whatever opinion he had a few days ago. A rather well-dressed Japanese ate some of his wares and said he would pay at his own house, as he had no money with him. After leading the unfortunate pedlar a considerable dance, the latter—then being on the hill above the railway—gave his customer to understand he considered him a swindler; and the customer, seeing further disguise to be useless, took to his heels at a pace which would have added to his credit on the Recreation-ground, but which has ruined it on the Kaigundori.—Hiogo News.

NAGASAKI.

The Rising Sun says:—

The Cosmopolite, which was captured some time ago from the rebels, was towed into Nagasaki harbour on the 12th ult.; she is to be used as a store-ship, and with that end in view her boilers and machinery are being removed and her interior rearranged accordingly. We hear that three other steamers, the Chihli, Nepaul, and Dumbarton are to be also converted into store-ships, and that their destination will be probably Kagoshima.

In consequence of the recent interruption in freights, &c., owing to the mail steamers between Japan ports and Shanghai having been unable to take such as offered, it is the intention of the China Merchants' Steamship Company to put one of their vessels on this route at an early date, to be followed by others, if sufficient inducement offers. We should have thought that the non-success of the P. and O. S. N. Company would have deterred any outsiders from risking their money in opposition to the Government of this country, but evidently the C.M.S.S. Company have made up their minds to make the venture, and think the present a good opportunity to secure such cargo as the M.B.M.S.S. Company are unable to take.

Some commotion was caused in the quiet village of Mogi, a day or two ago, by the landing of a body of men from a small steamer. The ever watchful Bobbies, donning their uniforms and seizing their rifles and bayonets, hurried down over the bristly rocks as fast as the nature of the ground would allow them, prepared to sell their lives dearly or perish on the strand. On reaching the beach, however, the invaders proved only to be a party of coolies and carpenters returning from the Kiushiu Maru, where they had been working. After the necessary inquiries as to their own names and those of their forefathers, together with their occupations and residences, and the police having satisfied themselves that they were so far harmless, they were allowed to set out for Nagasaki, to which place most were bound.

We understand that as soon after the termination of the present strife as possible, it is the intention of the Government to advertise for designs and specifications, with a liberal offer of fifty dollars, for the best description of dress suited to the natives of this country, with a view of introducing something more becoming than the ordinary type of foreign rig, as at present adopted, and more especially to meet the views of such as are fresh from cooler countries where more attention is paid to tight-fitting garments than is here considered necessary; at the same time, heavy punishment will be administered to those guilty of the least impropriety. Any person found with his or her sleeves turned up will be liable to transportation for a period of five years, while those seen with their trousers turned up will be decapitated there and then. Foreigners' servants will not be exempt from the above conditions.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The North China Herald has the following:—

The Peking Gazette of the 23rd June contains a decree announcing the capture of Turfan, the last remaining stronghold of the Dungani Mohammedans, and the objective point toward which the efforts of Tso Tsung-tang's army have been directed since the capture of Urumtsi, in August last. Turfan appears to have been evacuated by its defenders, on the approach of the Chinese forces, and they have probably retired to seek protection under the banner of the Khan of Kashgar, whose army is believed to be posted on his own frontier at no great distance from Turfan. The intelligence of the success now reported is stated to have been in the hands of the Imperial Government for several weeks, and the fact of its having been withheld so long from publication has given rise to curious surmises.

The following is a translation of the decree announcing the victory:—

A Decree. We have received from Tso Tsungt'ang his report of the particulars, in detail, of the recapture of the city of Turfan by a concerted movement on the part of his army. In the third moon (April—May), Chang Yao and other divisional commanders having combined their forces for a forward movement, proceeded by swift marches along different lines of route from Hami and Barkoul, taking the rebel entrenchments as they advanced, and capturing by assault the towns of Ch'ikhtêngmu and Pidjan. Under favour of these victories, other points along the line were successively taken, and immense numbers of prisoners were taken and beheaded. The main body of the insurgents, being unable to maintain their ground, retreated in a north-westerly direction towards Turfan; whereupon the troops were drawn together for a combined attack, and the cavalry and infantry forces having been pushed forward simultaneously, both the Manchu and the Chinese cities of Turfan were captured. The Mohammedans who submitted themselves were allowed to revert to peaceful avocations. The combinations devised by Tso Tsung-t'ang evince a judicious strategy, and the rapid execution by Chang Yao and his colleagues of the plans adopted for the offensive has been attended with successful results. It is fitting that rewards be meted out to the officers who have distinguished themselves on this occasion. We bestow upon Chang Yao (whose actual office is), General-in-Chief of the land forces of Kwantung, the first degree of the sixth order of hereditary nobility. On the two Generals, Liu Chanpiao and Sun Kin-piao, we confer the insignia of the first degree of official rank. Upon Sung Hien-Shêng and Ho Yü-chao we bestow the distinction of the Yellow Jacket. Three pages of distinctions for sub ordinate officers down to the rank of captain here ensue; and authority is given, in the customary terms, to make further recommendations in favour of officers and men who have claims to distinction and reward.

TIENTSIN.

The Correspondent of the Courier writes under date of June 19:—I have only just returned from Lao-ling, or rather Wu-ting Fu district, where I have distributed the one thousand taels sent by Mr. Jamieson. Many of the people were at work in their fields hoeing the millet. The wheat-crop, which is very fine, assumed its golden ripeness during my stay, and I had the pleasure of seeing the sickle at work before my return to Tientsin. Labourers are so abundant that wages given by the farmers are ridiculously small, viz., twenty to thirty cash a day, with food, for common work on the fields. Reapers get more than this.

I was glad to find in Chan-hwa Hsien that some of the poor people we helped some weeks ago used the money given to them to sow their fields with millet, as they had not been able to sow wheat. On this visit I found many of them greatly concerned because they had not strength to hoe their fields, and no money to hire labour, and they feared their crop would be lost on this account. How they blessed the foreigners for their help the second time! In this district large tracts of land lie uncultivated, owing partly to many of the owners being away from home (perhaps never to return), and partly to the poverty and inability of those at home to cultivate their fields. Still, the general aspect is cheering, and after the wheat is gathered the people will settle down to their usual avocations and content.

I was greatly saddened in one part of the country through which I passed to see the fields of wheat destroyed, fruit trees and other trees battered and stripped, by a fearful hail-storm. The storm occurred on the night of the 10th of May, and the hailstones are said to have been, in some places, jagged lumps of ice as large as hen's eggs. At any rate, they must have been large, for in Yang-shin I noticed acre upon acre in which hardly a single ear of wheat was left standing; every stalk was cut about nine inches from the ground. In other fields, perhaps one-third of the whole might be gathered. It seemed so sad, to pass from the luxuriant fields of waving, almost ripened corn, suddenly into fields that but three weeks before had given the same promise of golden harvest, but were now sombre and desolated. From Pin-chow on the coast to Ning-ching on the west towards the canal—a distance of about two hundred li—I found the storm had run with varying effects (and I know not how much further, while the width of the storm-tract appears to have been about twenty li on the eastern side down to ten li on the western; also, irregular. In Pin-chow it is reported that forty villages have been re-plunged into distress by this calamity; while in Zang-shin and Loa-ling districts similar aggravation of the sufferings of the people is caused by this new visitation. No wonder the people in these regions should seem to be more dejected than their neighbours. I felt the depression myself immediately on passing within the storm-line. Many a young fellow did I meet on the road with his hoe on his shoulder, who said in reply to our inquiries:—"Oh, the hail has destroyed our wheat; I am going to seek a little bread elsewhere." This calamity of course is very limited in its range, but as that range is in districts where the general famine has prevailed, the people whose prospect of relief has thus been blighted must feel it most keenly.

I need not repeat the usual sights of misery and sickness which greeted me, and which have so fully been described to you on previous occasions. In Lao-ling and Chan-hwa the relief I was able to convey from your Committee's funds was most urgently needed and gratefully appreciated.

CHEFOO.

The Courier's correspondent says:—

Dr. Nevius is preparing a sort of general report of his doings, which will be sent to you by-and-by. Before leaving he was fôted and presented with flags and banners of all sorts and sizes, expressive of the gratitude felt by the donors for the succour afforded. It was no doubt a perfectly genuine and spontaneous movement on their part, and shows that whatever the literati and officials may think, your generosity has made a deep and lasting impression upon the common people. There can be no doubt, I think, but that the idea conveyed by the term "foreigner" will hence be something very different from what it has hitherto been.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 1st July; the French mail from London, May 18, was received on the 30th June.

The Yangking-pang creek is at last to be cleansed. At least a commencement of this long talked of work is promised by the Municipal Council after the hot weather is over, and in the meantime the "bunding" of the creek is being proceeded with.

The first part of the Customs Returns for the past year giving the usual abstract of Trade and Customs Revenue Statistics from 1864 to 1876 have been published. The value of the foreign trade during the year—Tls. 151,000,000—was greater by Tls 9,000,000 than in any previous year during that period, and greater by Tls. 14,000,000 than in any other year but 1872 (which reached Tls. 142,000,000). The revenue of course was also larger, though not correspondingly; Tls. 12,152,921 against Tls. 11,268,109 last year, which was the next highest. The gross value of the trade of Shanghai was also greater than in any previous year, having reached Tls. 124,174,755—rather more than Tls. 6,000,000 above 1872, which was the next highest year in the list.

The North China Daily News gives the following account of the opening of the Silk market:—

The Silk market was opened late on Wednesday evening (June 27); but it seems to have closed again the following day, as holders were unwilling to continue selling at the moderate prices given, in face of such an advance as that quoted by Reuter of 6d. a lb. on Red Peacock on a flat market! The settlements have been, therefore, restricted to within 100 bales, including No. 2 Buffalo, No. 2 Beautiful Woman, and No. 2 Dancing Bear, at 417½ equal to 19s. 2d. laid down in London; SSS Dollars variously reported from Tls. 385 to 400, and chop No. 2 Kahing Taysaam at Tls. 420. Dollars have advanced, and numerous orders for purchasing have been sent up-country. Silkmen appear rather astonished at the opening rates; but large holders are not sellers, as the improvement in prices at home, which seems at present known only in specially advised quarters, persuades them that the long-looked for advance is at hand, and that buyers generally will quickly respond to the signal given.

The above paper gives the following items of news:—

We hear a report that the Chinese are about to establish revenue stations in the interior, for the collection of junk and boat dues from all vessels carrying goods going into the country, or coming out under a transit pass. If this is the case, it can scarcely be regarded as other than an indirect way of levying lekin on foreign imports and native goods intended for export.

The report of the London Mission Hospital at Hankow for the past year shows a considerable increase in the number of patients treated over the previous year. The increase is especially noticeable in the number of in-patients, which was 406 as compared with 93 last year. The income of the hospital, including $148 brought forward from the previous year, was $756; and the expenditure $505, leaving a balance of $251. Dr. Mackenzie sets out by stating that the term "Medical Mission" implies the use of medical means to the missionary end; "it makes medicine the handmaid of the Gospel, seeking through the administration of medical relief to advance the cause of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ." And it is evident from every paragraph that this principle is very clearly kept in view. It is gratifying to learn that many opium smokers have been successfully weaned from that vice by treatment at the hospital; and in at least nine cases the sufferers "have, after careful inquiry and prolonged trial, been received into the Church." The impatience of the Chinese, however, occasionally prevents successful treatment. A man was received with a fracture of the thigh-bone. The necessity of time to effect a proper cure was repeatedly explained to him; yet at the end of a week his friends removed the splint and bandages, and carried him out. We have not space to follow the report closely into detail. Suffice it to say that, as we said before, constant evidence is given of earnest endeavour to couple proselytism with medical advice. "We rejoice," says the writer, "that all our helpers are workers for Christ. Siau, the native preacher, who has the special duty of attending to the spiritual teaching of the patients, is growing daily in suitability for the work. The hospital assistants both give valuable aid in the religious department; and even the coolie manifests great delight when he sees patients show any interest in the Gospel message."

From the Courier we take the following:—

On June 30 the China Merchants' Company paid Messrs. Russell and Co. the sum of Tls. 150,000, being a further instalment of the price of the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company.

It is rumoured that the establishment of a steamboat service is contemplated between Shanghai and the Southern ports. From what we hear we should judge that the China Merchants' Company is likely to feel any competition that may be brought against it. "We have plenty of money," said the Viceroy—according to report—the other day; "what we want is management." The second part of Li's remark is undeniably most true. The first assertion is gratifying, considering the rates at which the company carries freight.

We deeply regret to hear that rumours are in circulation pointing to the possible stoppage of the Woosung Railway at the expiration of the present term. It is most devoutly to be hoped that these are without good foundation. There is no doubt, however, we believe, that an active correspondence is now being carried on upon the subject between the British Legation and the Viceroys of Chihli and Nanking, and we can only trust that their negotiations may result in the aversion of any step so ruinous to the interests of both foreigners and Chinese as that which is now said to be in contemplation.

Civilisation is making vast strides among the Chinese. Some time ago, a gentleman having temporary relations with the Imperial Government was accommodated with a passage down the coast in a native gunboat. The captain, who had been formerly a pilot, used his best endeavours to make his passenger comfortable, and by way of evincing his amicable designs, offered him raw brandy at dinner, instead of sherry. The gentleman declined the proposal, saying that he was not in the habit of indulging in such strong drink. "No? replied the skipper, interrogatively, why, my any time takee;" which he certainly did, on that occasion, to the tune of three or four glasses.

The superstitions of the Chinese are sometimes very curiously exemplified. The other day a woman died in the city—she was the wife of a charcoal-dealer—who, for a long time, had hoarded money secretly, the fact being hidden even from her husband. When she fell sick, she took her dollars and concealed them under her pillow, her avarice extending so far—the ruling passion strong in death—that when she died her hands were found clutching a number of the coins so tightly that it was impossible to unlock the fingers. Of course, firmly as the muscles may have been set, it would no doubt have been possible for the husband to have wrenched or cut them apart had he wished to do do so; but no. "She stuck to her dollars during her life," said the widower, "and she clings to them still more desperately in death; let her have them undisturbed." And so the corpse was buried, its dead hands clasping the dollars with a desperate grip while the rest of the poor creatures' savings were put in the coffin and buried for ever with her.

We regret to hear of a rather serious accident which occurred on the 28th ult. to the French mail steamer Hoogly. It seems that early in the morning, as she was swinging to the tide, she broke loose from her moorings, and, drifting in direction of the Chinese Navigation Company's wharf, had a narrow escape of coming into violent collision with the Hankow. She was saved from this by her stern suddenly sticking in, or at least striking on, the mud, while still at some distance from the river-boat, thereby saving the latter from almost certain and most serious damage, but being left herself in a very precarious position. She swung slowly round, her stern being pretty hard ashore, and in that state she remained until the tug-boat Samson came to her rescue. She was not got off, however, without a good deal of bumping and scratching, while she left the pontoon of the C.N. Company in a strained and somewhat leaky state. The mishap might have been attended with very disastrous consequences, and so far may be called a serious one; but luckily the affair ended without any material damage to any of the vessels concerned.—Courier.

An event has occurred this week which is worthy of more than a passing notice. By order of the Mixed Court, a parcel (1,850 pieces) of 10 lb. Grey Shirtings, for the clearance of which judgment was, a few weeks since, obtained against the native buyer, has been sold by public auction. Is this to be accepted as an earnest that that "better administration of justice," foreshadowed in the "Chefoo Convention," is really to be vouchsafed to the foreigner? If so, then, on this point at least, our Chamber of Commerce's letter to its London Committee, late although it was, is premature. Be that as it may, however, the above event is a novelty in Mixed Court justice, and, being of welcome interest to every foreigner concerned in the Piece Goods trade, it is here specially recorded.

NANKING.

A correspondent of the Courier writes under date of the 25th June:—

The present fast was preceded by an unusual number of executions, several of which were for the manufacture of, or dealing in, small cash. It is not to be supposed that the residents in Soochow and other places where small cash is prohibited avail themselves of the opportunity of having them melted up while elsewhere they are still in circulation. There is some difficulty however in conveying them from place to place. On one occasion an old coffin was en route for this part of the country, when some of the mandarins thought they would like to see the corpse. It is sufficient to add that the chief mourner was beheaded here some days ago. The locusts seem to have left the immediate vicinity of Nanking for the present, and it would be well if we could say as much of the drought. I have been assured that there has been no time since the rebellion when rain was needed as greatly as now. Last summer and autumn was very dry, and the rains during the winter and spring have been unusually slight, so that now there is reason for serious alarm. The city presents a strange appearance to-day. From one end to the other prayers for rain written on yellow paper are suspended across the streets like myriads of streamers on some gala day; while altars to the Dragon King, and perhaps to the thunder, lightning, wind, rain, and local deities, with their candles, incense, and hosts of worshippers, all show the anxiety of the people about the coming distress, which now seems to be almost at their very doors. Trade is dull. Many persons are out of employment, and the outlook is still more gloomy.

Fires are continually breaking out, but probably for a long time none more destructive of human life have occurred than one last night. A house was in flames. The mandarin in an adjoining building began to remove his goods. Among other articles, a quantity of powder was taken out, and, as no notice was given to the crowd of spectators, and the explosive compound was not in any wise protected, no one need ask what next took place. Seven men were soon over the troubles of this life, and a large number were more or less injured. Some may have died after reaching their homes, and many are in a critical condition. I was sent for early this morning, and in company with Mr. E. Müller, of Shanghai, spent a considerable part of the day caring for the sufferers. Some of the scenes were indeed horrible. There were strong men with faces, bodies, and limbs swollen, burned, and blistered, the skin dropping off—and, added to all this, the victims of native doctors. They had first been treated with rat nil (which is made by dipping a rat in oil and then burning it), and afterwards powdered with pulverised oyster-shells. They had also taken castor oil internally. There are no bandages or plasters, or anything to exclude the air from the wounds. As but little clothing is worn at this season of the year, their injuries were the more serious, and generally extended from head to foot. While caring for one patient others would call for us, and then we went from house to house. One who came for us was a grey-haired man of seventy-seven, whose son had been injured. One was a boy, of perhaps ten years, who wished us to visit his uncle; but the most touching case was that of a woman, who prostrated herself before us, saying, "I am sixty years old, a widow, have an only son of eighteen; do a good deed, &c." We bound up her son's wounds, which, though severe, were not of necessity dangerous, and encouraged her to believe that her son would not die. We hope by a few days' care to save several cases which seem critical, and also never to be obliged to engage in such work again.

The U.S.S. Palos, with the Secretary of the United States Legation on board, has been here for several days.

WENCHOW.

The North China Daily News correspondent writes:—

Since I last wrote we have been visited by ten days of incessant rain, with the consequent freshets. The river rose considerably, and the current on certain days attained a speed of seven knots; but in no instance have we heard of any loss of life, or even damage, although in some cases the force of the stream caused one or two junks to drag for some distance. The mud is so soft that under influences such as those now described the anchors have but feeble hold, and even in the case of H. I. G. M. S. Cyclop gave way, without, however, causing more trouble than that involved by a berth further from the position that was at first taken up.

Apropos of the mud, a curious fact was noted by the Naval officers whilst surveying the Upper Anchorage. One of the boats happened to ground on a bank formed just below an island lying about three-quarters of the way across the river; and although the tide was running strong ebb and the men pulling, still the boat remained fast in the mud, and with it moved visibly up stream and against the rowers. This phenomenon, with others, is thought to indicate great uncertainty as to the permanency of any channel that may now be laid down in the new charts.

The captain and officers of the German gunboat, however, continue indefatigable in surveying from daylight to dark, and have nearly finished that portion of the river comprehended between the upper limit of the port and Jar Point (lower anchorage). We understand that the Cyclop will go on surveying until all the work has been completed, or she receives orders to proceed elsewhere.

Mr. Main arrived by the Conquest and has, we believe, no hesitation in identifying the suspected lorcha as the Mandarin. This makes the third European who expresses himself confident as to her identity, which, with the strong circumstantial evidence afforded by the absence of any trustworthy papers, or even plausible account of how she came in her present owner's possession, and the suspiciously marked trouble that has been taken to disguise her, would appear to put the question beyond a doubt. Meantime, the matter has been reported and referred to Peking by both H.B.M. Consul and the Taoutai. It will be interesting to note how, in the event of her being undoubtedly proved to be the Mandarin, the Chinese Government will get out of the new phrase set up by the utter absence of "due diligence" indisputably proved by the fact of her trading so long on their coast after the murder; the numerous reports that have from time to time been made to them of her having been seen by various foreigners; and, finally, that as soon as foreigners get access to the port she has been always assumed to be trading to she is at once recognised, and on H.B.M. Consul's representations seized. The complication will not be simplified by the strenuous denials hitherto given by the Chinese to the foreign assertions, or the fact that her comings and goings, so patent to even chance passers-by on the high seas, must have been, or certainly ought to have been, equally well-known to them.

The vessel is now scarcely worth the breaking up; the causes that have led to this depreciation will no doubt have weight in deciding the question as to right for indemnity, and be not the less effective in rebutting any plea that may now be setu p as to the "non-responsibility of a Government for the acts of individuals, beyond using due diligence in the apprehension of offenders, making sincere efforts to restore as much of the stolen property as possible, and to take such steps as may seem necessary for preventing such crimes in future."

Trade is much as before. We notice the Conquest takes about $59,000 away with her, it is to be presumed to be laid out in the purchase of goods or to pay for that already imported. As it all goes to Ningpo, it looks as though the Chinese, with characteristic conservatism, continue to buy their merchandise through Ningpo, merely substituting steamer for junk transport. This is a piece of obstinancy, however, which is likely to speedily remedy itself by appeal to that most sensitive part of the Celestial merchant, his pocket.

Upwards of 200 half-chests of tea go up to the Shanghai market. The teamen here are asking the most ridiculous prices, and what is more they somewhat firmly believe that they have only to go North to get them. This again may possibly correct itself.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 7th July; no later mail from London had arrived out.

Since the departure of the last mail the occurrences in the colony appear to have been of little more than local interest; but there seems to be no lack of activity in regard to legislative and other matters in which the welfare of the community is involved. An Order in Council of his Excellency the Governor is published in the Gazette, by which it is ordered, under the Naval Stores Ordinance (Hong Kong) 1875, that the regulations made by his Excellency Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell in Council, on Sept. 28, 1867, under the Naval and Victualling Stores Ordinance (Hong Kong) 1867, shall remain, and continue in force under the said recited Ordinance of 1875, until further notice. Education in the Colony has been further inquired into, and the Inspector of Schools, Mr. F. Stewart, having been requested to furnish a return of the average expense of each scholar at the Government Schools for 1876, calculated, not by the enrolment, but by the average daily attendance, this information is published in the Gazette, and is as follows:—Expenditure, $19,244.85; deduct fees from the scholars at the Central School, $2.688.25; total, $16,556.60. The average expense of each scholar at the Government Schools, $13.88; at the Central School, $29; and at native schools, $6.45. A report has been issued by the Rev. F. Hubrig, for the year 1876-77 of the Mission School connected with the Rhenish Missionary Society in China. It gives an interesting account of the educational work of the society, but some discouragement is felt on account of the fact that the local subscriptions no longer cover the expenses of the school work, and an allowance of $800 has had to be asked from the Board. The subscription list shows that his Excellency the Viceroy of Kwangtung and Kwangsi has subscribed $100, his Excellency the Kwan-pu has given a similar amount, and other native officials smaller sums.

Sir Brooke Robertson had arrived from Canton, on a visit, and was much improved in health.

The Daily Press, in commenting upon the further delay in the ratification of the Convention, says:—

"The announcement made by Reuter, that the Chinese Government has formally consented to open fresh negotiations for an arrangement of the Lekin question with all the Treaty Powers on more liberal terms than those of the Chefoo Convention, if correct, would indicate that Sir Thomas Wade's great triumph of diplomacy is not likely to be ratified. It is well understood that the other Treaty Powers—and more especially Germany—are very strongly opposed to the recognition which is given to Lekin in the Chefoo Convention, and it is probably on their representations to England that the Government of Peking has been induced to open fresh negotiations on the subject. It is, of course, impossible to predict the basis on which a settlement of this question will be proposed, but it is to be hoped that the united efforts of the foreign ministers at Peking will succeed in procuring one that will prove equitable to all parties, and at the same time be so framed that its provisions cannot be evaded by the astute mandarins. We shall be glad to learn fuller particulars of the reported negotiations. It is generally felt among all British and most foreign residents out here that the Chefoo Convention is not a satisfactory settlement of the questions at issue between England and China, while it fails to materially improve the commercial relations of foreigners in China.

A Marine Court of Inquiry to investigate into the circumstances attending the grounding of the steamship Thales on her last voyage to Cooktown has found as follows:—

First—that the British steamship Thales, official No. 52,608, whereof Charles Coles, number of whose extra certificate of competency is 20,759, is master, struck and received damage on a rock about two miles S. by E. of Cambridge Point, off the Mount Adolphus Island—(Admiralty Chart, Torres Straits, sheet 1).

Second—They find that the rock, having fifteen feet of water on it, is not marked on the above-mentioned chart by which the vessel was navigated.

Third—They were unanimously of opinion that the navigation of the Thales was being carefully conducted, and that no blame is to be attributed to the master, whose certificate was returned.

From the above-named paper we take the following:—

An inquest was held on the body of a married woman, named Yik Acheme, about twenty years of age, who, it appears, died from opium poisoning. The husband of the deceased, Low Awong, took the body of his wife to the Tung Wah Hospital, and then went to the Registrar-General and reported the matter there. The Registrar-General ordered the body to be sent to the Lock Hospital. This was done, when the case was brought to the notice of the coroner. The husband said he had been married two years, and had one child. He had been sick several days. The deceased boiled him some medicine at four P.M. She was a servant in a brothel. After she boiled the medicine she went back to the brothel, and did not return that night. At four P.M. next day, July 1, she returned and asked him how he was, and he told her he was better. She went away again, and he did not know when she returned, as he was asleep with the child. At three A.M. on July 2 the child cried, and he told his wife not to let the child disturb the neighbours. He got no answer. He spoke louder, and still got no answer. She rolled about, and he felt that she was cold, and he sent for her father in West-street. The father came, and she was still breathing, but insensible. The father gave her lamp oil and water. She did not recover, and, whilst still breathing was taken to the Tung Wah Hospital. The doctor there said he could not save her, and hurried her off to the Lock Hospital. He then took her to the Lock Hospital, and she was still breathing. He told the people there not to cover her all over, as she was still alive. The matron afterwards went with him to the dead-house to examine the body, and the deceased appeared to be dead. He knew of no reason why she should take opium. He found no traces of it, and he had had no quarrel with her. She was carried on a person's back to the Tung Wah Hospital. The coroner at this stage remarked that the inquest had better be adjourned for the police to make further inquiry, as it appeared from the evidence of the doctor from the Tung Wah Hospital that the deceased was dead when brought, and from the evidence of the husband that she was alive, and that the Tung Wah hospital doctor hurried her off to the Lock Hospital without looking at her. Now, if this be true, the doctor of the Tung Wah Hospital is accountable for negligence in not using some means to restore the deceased, and save her life. The inquiry was then adjourned.

The 101st anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence, the ever-"Glorious Fourth," was celebrated as usual by the American portion of the community. The United States Consulate, the houses of most of the American residents, and the American ships in harbour were decked out with bunting, and the Commodore hoisted the Stars and Stripes on the Victor Emanuel in honour of the anniversary. Mr. Bailey, according to his wonted custom, kept open house, and during the day received a very large number of visitors of various nationalities.

The Rev. J. Lamont having sent in his resignation as pastor of Union Church, a meeting of the members and seatholders was held, to consider the arrangements to be made for the future. It was stated that the Church was not in a position to raise the same amount of money it had hitherto done; that while there was formerly an income of about $3,000, at present it was hardly more than $2,000. After some discussion it was resolved to ask the London Missionary Society to send out a third Missionary to Hong Kong, whose primary work should be as pastor of Union Church, but who should also assist in Chinese Mission work, the Church paying him a salary equal to that received by married missionaries, say $1,500 per annum, and his passage, the society to pay house-rent or provide a residence. A resolution was also unanimously passed expressing the regret of the members and seatholders at the severance of Mr. Lamont's connection with the Church.

HONG KONG, JULY 6.

I have just heard of a practical joke played off on "the General." About a couple of weeks ago a portrait of Sir Arthur Kennedy, our late Governor, was exhibited at Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s store. The painter was a well-known resident in the Colony—Mr. J. B. Coughtrie—and as the likeness was a true one, and altogether a very creditable performance, a public subscription was set on foot to purchase the painting for the City Hall. Within two days the required $200 were forthcoming, and the portrait now adorns the walls of the building in question. But to come to the joke. On the subscription list being sent round for names, some misguided individual endorsed it with the name of General Colborne. Now you are doubtless aware that the relations between the General and Sir Arthur were something like those existing between a red-hot iron and cold water—I don't know that a regular "phizz" had ever occurred between them, but that was because they carefully avoided each other. Well, when the time arrived for collecting the amount subscribed, this unfortunate subscription list was in due course, and innocently enough, sent round to the General, and I leave you to imagine the denouement. It is said the ill-used document reached the other side of the room in something less than the fraction of a second.

You will observe by the Hong Kong papers that the Colony has already engaged a small agitation in regard to Mr. Hennessy. Within a few weeks of our new governor's arrival he put his veto on flogging—a punishment which has been practised here with salutary results for many years—expressed himself strongly in regard to the night pass system, and openly questioned in the jail the legality of the sentences on certain of the offenders confined there—all of which made old residents here anticipate a rather bigger row than they had in Barbadoes. A tremendous hubbub was of course at once raised, and although the sentences of flogging have not yet been carried out, yet Mr. Hennessy has inaugurated no further changes, and has evidently recognised the advisability of drawing in his horns; perhaps, indeed, the discussions that have arisen may in some cases have induced him to change his opinions on certain matters.

Since I last wrote the affair of the Bishop and the students has been pretty well "shown up" in a letter addressed to one of the local papers. The facts that the accuracy of the statements in that letter have not been challenged, and that the proprietor of the paper (a cautious Scot, in which the letter appeared) ventured to admit such a communication, can, I think, leave little doubt that the remarkable circumstances set forth in the letter are actually matters of fact. I understand that out of the six students who arrived here with the Rev. Mr. Davys only two are left.

CANTON.

The Daily Press Correspondent writes:—

There is very little news of any interest to record at the present time in this port. The floods have not quite subsided, and the distress caused thereby has been in a great measure relieved by the subscriptions raised for that purpose. Up further inland there is still, I believe, a good deal of distress prevailing.

At daylight on the 30th ultimo a fire broke out in the eastern suburb, and in spite of all the efforts used to bring it under control, six houses were burned to the ground. The measures ordinarily taken to extinguish fires are very ineffective, and provided the flames once get a good hold on a building there is no doubt how it will end. The origin of this fire is unknown.

Information has reached me that at Tai Ping market, near the Bocca Tigris, all the shops have closed on account of the squeezes to which the shopkeepers have been subjected by the salt-smuggling detectives. This is one of those not uncommon instances were the last straw having been placed on the victim's qack he turns and shows fight. There is no doubt that the shopkeepers and trading population are shamefully plundered by these rapacious officials.

The other day a junk moored in the river here had a very narrow escape of being burned. Its owner had quarrelled with the people of a similar craft, who threw a packet of gunpowder on board in revenge for some real or fancied injury.

CANTON, JULY 6, 1877.

One of the leading items of intelligence in the last number of the Peking Gazette is to the effect that a military mandarin named Pan-sow, who was in command of the garrison at Khat-lum-paak-to-naap-teng, a remote place in Mantchuria, has recently been dismissed the Imperial service. It appears that a man called Ko-chan-ming, having murdered eleven persons, all of whom were members of the same clan or patriarchate as himself, fled from justice. Pan-sow being unable to capture the runaway murderer, and knowing full well that if this proof of his inefficiency were made known to the Tartar-General, under whom he was indirectly serving, a severe reproof and degradation of rank would be the painful result, he resolved to conceal the whole matter. Three months, however, had scarcely elapsed when tidings of this tragical affair reached the ears of the Tartar-General, who at once called Pan-sow to account. Finding, after a careful investigation, that Pan-sow's conduct in regard to the case was highly reprehensible, he immediately reported him to the Throne, and thus became instrumental in his being dismissed from the Imperial service.

Haong-Kong-Chan, which is one of the political divisions of the province of Kwang-tuung, or Canton, as it is more generally styled, has just been deprived of the services of a high, zealous, and able military officer, named Wei-cho-pong. It appears that the mandarin in question waged, during a rebellion which prevailed in certain parts of this province fifteen years ago, several successful battles against the insurgents. Receiving into his body, however, on this occasion, four gingall bullets, which have never been extracted, he consequently became, a few months ago, so enfeebled as to be compelled to memorialise the Emperor for permission to retire from active service. This favour was granted, and Wei-cho-pong has now withdrawn with a greatly weakened body, and many well-earned honours, into private life. His successor in office is named Li-chim-chun.

Several of the principal bankers of this city of Canton have recently sustained most serious pecuniary losses, owing to the destruction by water of very large quantities of salt upon which they had advanced considerable sums of money. The salt in question was stored in warehouses at the prefectural city of Ling-chow, or Leen-chow, which city was, as I informed you a fortnight ago, almost, if not entirely, destroyed by a flood. The Ming-uen Bank, which was regarded as a wealthy and influential establishment, has failed, I regret to say, to a very great amount.

A melancholy boat accident occurred a few days ago at Siupco, which is near to Laan-shek. The particulars, which are as follows, may be briefly told:—The boat in question—a passenger boat—was struck, at the place already mentioned, when on her voyage to this city, by a squall, which was so heavy as not only to carry away her masts but also to capsize her. In the confusion which then ensued eight persons who were on board the ill-fated vessel met with a watery grave. This boat accident, however, is not the only one which I have to report. This will appear when I state that as two large passenger-boats were navigating, in close company, that passage of the Canton River which flows immediately in front of my house, the crew of one boat began to "chaff" the crew of the other. This badinage—which quickly led to an exchange of very severe expletives—was eventually followed by a free fight, the combatants arming themselves on the occasion with long bamboo poles and boat-hooks. At length one of these bellicose crews, thinking that victory was about to declare against them, had recourse to "stink-pots"—one of which on being thrown with force and precision upon the deck of the contending ship exploded, and not only set fire to her sails, which, of course, were speedily consumed, but, at the same time, seriously injured one of the passengers.

On the 29th ult. a fire occurred in the Chuuk-wang-sha-street of this city. This conflagration, which originated in a boat-building establishment called Yauhop, was, owing to the skill and exertions of the Chinese fire-brigades, quickly extinguished; not more than five houses were destroyed by the devouring element. The Imperial Edict prohibiting opium-smoking has caused a sensation here. Printed copies of this Edict are being sold daily in all the streets and public squares of the city by itinerant newsvendors. Let us hope that the vicious and depraved habit of opium-smoking, which has for so many years been the bane of this great people, may receive at once a decided check, and be eventually rooted out of the land. Gambling, so far as the city of Canton is concerned, has, I am glad to say, been almost entirely suppressed by the excellent officials who now bear rule in this part of his Majesty's dominions. There are evidently, however, some dens in which this ruinous pastime is still secretly practised. Thus, when passing a few days since the entrance gates of the Taai-Fut-tsze, or Monastery of the Great Buddha, two Chinese soldiers, who had, clearly, just emerged from a private gambling saloon, were engaged in a very bitter quarrel. The one had lost money to the other, and the loser not possessing the amount demanded by the winner, angry feelings quickly arose. Bitter taunts now followed, and at length recourse was had to knives. Blood having been shed on both sides, several policemen appeared on the scene, and collaring the belligerents, removed them to a place of safe keeping.

On the 2nd inst. nine malefactors—pirates—were decapitated on the public execution ground of this city. No sooner had these unfortunate men been arranged in a line in order to receive the fatal blow, than one of their number—a man named Lau-hoo-tau, being angry and sullen, positively refused to kneel down. After a few moments spent in altercation, an attendant on the sheriff dealt him two or three hard blows on the knees—an unseemly and cruel punishment this, which had the desired effect.

The 3rd instant was a great holiday here. Thus, the Cantonese were engaged throughout the day in celebrating the natal-anniversary of a goddess named Choo-tsze-laong-laong, who is supposed to be invested with a certain amount of authority in regard to winds and rains. Amongst the many devotees who on this anniversary do honour to Choo-tsze are sailors from the salt junks. This circumstance is owing, it is said, to the fact of the goddess having, during a cyclone which prevailed at Canton more than one hundred and fifty years ago, miraculously preserved a large fleet of salt junks from destruction.

MANILA.

The Gaçeta publishes a decree of the Governor General dated the 18th June, amending the regulations regarding auction sales of manufactured tobacco for exportation. The following is the document referred to:—

Article 1. Conformably with the provisions of the Royal order of the 27th October, 1869, no manufactured tobacco shall hereafter be set apart for exportation other than what is in excess of the quantity required for internal consumption.

Article 2. This excess shall be determined monthly by the general directorate of the Public Treasury at the request of the Central Adminstration of revenues from monopolies, and, as heretofore, shall be sold by juridical or public auction.

Art. 3. The samples of tobacco that may be brought out for sale for exportation shall continue to be exhibited to the public in the general privileged repositories.

Art. 4. The persons to whom the whole or part of the said tobacco may be adjudged by the Junta of Royal auctions shall pay the amount of its price into the central treasury, on the first clear day following that on which the juridical auction took place.

Art. 5. The tobacco obtained at the auction sales cannot be changed, removed, or resold, in case it be exclusively intended for exportation. The buyers will receive the manufactured article in boxes with the usual marks, and, furthermore, with a label which will be placed on occasions of general auctions, and on which will appear the word "exportation," the date of the auction at which the tobacco had been adjudged, the seal of the central administration of revenues from monopolies, and the signatures of the manager and of the employé charged to be expressly present at the act of delivery.

Art. 6. Within the three days allowed for delivery in favour of the buyers, the latter shall take away the tobacco from the storing-houses on the strict condition of exporting it within the period of six months, to be counted from the date of its adjudication.

Advices from Cayan in the district of Lepanto state that it is to be feared that during the present year there will be a great scarcity of food in the district, owing to the total failure of the crops, both of rice, sweet and other potatoes and pot herbs. What little rice was being sold by retail had risen to double its former price, it being quoted at $2 per cavan. There were no potatoes, and but few beans in store.

In the province of Ilocos Sur the cultivators were planting paddy and indigo, after twelve days of incessant rain. The indigo crop there this year is expected to be short, owing to the great drought that prevailed in that province from Sept. 1876 to the middle of May last, making sowing in high lands impossible.

The Diario of June 22 states that the price of rice at Manila was still inconveniently high, a cavan of ordinary quality selling at 3 dollars and 6 reals. Paddy was selling at 2 dollars per cavan.

In the province of Isabela heavy rains had swollen the rivers and done damage to tobacco on the point of being cut or harvested.

The town of Lavag, the capital of the province of Ilocos Norte, has suffered from a terrible fire. One hundred and eighty houses were consumed, the eastern portion of the town being destroyed.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The Batavia Handelsblad of the 3rd July states that since the departure of the previous mail no news has been received from Atchin. Up to the 18th June no further particulars were known at Kotta Rajah regarding the operations against Analabu, under the command of Major du Pon. From Ternate news has been received that Dana Babu Hassan, the rebel chief, has concealed himself near a lake situated to the east of Weda, and that the Resident was busy getting together a large force from Ternate, Tidore, and Bachan, in order to attack him in his hiding-place. From the Resident's reports, the larger portion of the inhabitants of Patani and Maba will submit so soon as the Resident shows himself there, but the headmen of these places wish to continue true to Hassan to the end, as is also the case with the band of 200 Alfurds who accompany him.

Pirates, by last accounts, were still practising kidnapping frequently in the neighbourhood of Timor. A new steamer, the Samarang, which lately came out from Europe to cruise against them, has had her destination changed for Atchin, to take part in the intended expedition to Samalanga.

The Java Bode of the 2nd July states that one of the persons guilty of the attack on the estate of the Netherlands Trading Company at Edi was hanged there on the 9th June, and that three others have been sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude.

Heavy shocks of earthquake were felt at Wonogriri in Java on the 10th June, and a very heavy vertical shock was noticed at Painan in Sumatra on May 31st.

It is stated that the dividend of the Netherlands Indian Railway Company for the last financial year has been fixed at 5¼ per cent.

Cholera continued to carry off victims both from amongst Europeans and Natives at Batavia.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 15th July; the French mail from London, June 15, was received on the 14th July. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The body of the late Sultan Allie of Johore, we have been informed, was buried on the 8th July at Umbai, in Malacca territory, where he died. There were present H. H. the Maharajah of Johore, the Tumongong of Moa, the Chief of Jompole, and a number of the other Chiefs of the Malay States, and it was estimated that the concourse of Malays, Chinese, and Portuguese present amounted to over 3,000. The British Government was represented by the Hon. J. Douglas, C.M.G., Colonial Secretary, the Hon. C. J. Irving, Lieutenant Governor of Malacca, Mr. Trevenen, &c., and a guard of twenty-four policemen under Mr. Superintendent Hayward, and two inspectors. The coffin, which was very heavy, was carried by 150 bearers. On the right side marched in the procession the late Sultan's own relatives and people, and on the left the Maharajah of Johore's people. The ceremonies were simple; and, in accordance with Malay custom, gold pieces and nasih punyet were thrown among the crowd. Two omissions were remarked upon. One was that there was no guard of honour such as was provided by the British Government at the funeral of the late Sultan's father. The other was that, in accordance with Malay custom, there was no successor immediately proclaimed. The reason for this latter omission was doubtless a political one. The late Sultan may be said to have been the last Sultan of Johore. Since 1855, when by treaty he made over all claim and title to the Sovereignty of Johore to the then Tumongong of Johore, he has been Sultan merely in name, and to proclaim a successor to a nominal title, according to the old Malay fashion, as if he was a reigning Sultan with power in his hands, might lead to delusion and misunderstanding as to the real position and status of the late Sultan's legitimate heir. This might cause future mischief and do no possible good. For, whatever may be thought now of what was done in the past, one thing is certain, that the past is the past, and cannot be undone or recalled, and it is best that this should be at once understood and accepted.

The question as to Sultan Allie's successor, or rather heir, is complicated by a dispute as to who he should be. As we are informed, he left four sons, Tunku Allum, the eldest, Tunku Sleyman, Tunku Soolong, and Tunku Mahmoud. Tunku Allum is the son of a Bugis Princess, is about thirty-two years old, and the dispute lies between him and Tunku Mahmoud, the youngest son, a boy of six or seven years old, but whose mother was not of the blood royal. According to European notions, Tunku Allum is unquestionably the true heir, and he has the strongest of claims, even according to Malay notions, being of the blood royal on both sides, which Tunku Mahmoud, it is said, cannot claim to be. It is difficult to understand, indeed, upon what grounds Tunku Mahmoud and his partisans base his claim. It is rumoured that it is the intention of Government not to acknowledge any right of the late Sultan Allie's heir to the title of Sultan of Johore, on the ground that the title became extinct when the sovereignty of Johore was transferred to the Tumongong, and was allowed to Sultan Allie merely as a matter of courtesy. Moreover, it is stated that the pension of Sultan Allie will be discontinued to the family, and the Maharajah of Johore will take charge of the territory of Moar or Kessang. We do not know what truth there may be in these rumours, but if there be any, it is to be feared that this harsh and high-handed treatment of a family held in high respect by the Malays, in virtue of its representing the old blood royal of Johore, will be deeply resented and cause discontent and trouble. Something more than dollars and cents and hard and fast rules should be considered by a liberal and humane Government in a case of this kind, and we trust that H.E. the Administrator and his Council will consider well before coming to a final decision.

We learn from Malacca that a collision is reported to have taken place on the 3rd July off Pulo Pesang, between the British steamer Fleurs Castle, which left this port for London on the same day, and a Chinese junk, by which it was reported in Malacca that five Chinamen were drowned. The report of the captain of the Fleurs Castle, given at Malacca, is simply that he had picked up sixteen Chinese, being the crew or passengers of a Chinese junk, with which his vessel had come into collision, but the report does not mention the precise locality in which they were picked up. A report of the matter was made to the Lieut. Governor, and he has forwarded the papers containing all the particulars for the perusal of H.E. the Administrator, and Captain Ellis, the Master Attendant, will hold an investigation into the circumstances.

His Highness Tunku Oodin, Viceroy of Salangore, arrived here on the 10th July by the Burmah steamer Busheer. When the vessel had anchored in the harbour, Captain Douglas, H.B.M.'s Resident to Salangore, went on board to receive his Highness, who landed at Johnston's pier, where he was received by a guard of honour of police under the command of Mr. Superintendent Maxwell. Only a few natives were present at the landing, and his Highness, accompanied by Captain Douglas, at once left for the Clarendon Hotel, where apartments had been taken for him.

Hotel property would seem to be the best paying and most profitable investment in Singapore. Even freeholds in the city of London must hide their diminished heads before the prices which hotels realise here. For instance, the Hotel de l'Europe, which is held upon lease for only a short term, at a monthly rental of $820, is in the market for sale by private contract, and an enterprising hotel proprietor has, we understand, offered for the goodwill and furniture the enormous sum of $35,000! Surely, in the face of this, money-lending at cent. per cent. cannot be nearly so lucrative as the dispensing of drinks to thirsty souls.

It appears that the American dollar is not the only one which has been fraudulently imitated. We have just seen a specimen of the Hong Kong Dollar of 1867, which has been passed through an eliminating process of such a nature as to reduce its value to a minimum. It has been split, and the silver in the centre extracted; and the dodge has been so cleverly done as to defy detection except by ringing the coin.

We believe the commander, officers and men of H.M.S. Growler have not had reason to launch into ecstasies over the climate of Labuan. Owing to fever and malaria, which they caught on their late trip to that island and Borneo, almost the whole of the officers and men are sick, and, with the exception of the Commander and Paymaster, we understand, all of the former are unfit for duty.

Among the passengers who arrived here by the E. and A. steamer Somerset was Mr. Henri L'Estrange, the Australian Blondin, whose feat in crossing Sydney Harbour on a tight rope on several occasions in May last created a great sensation throughout Australia, and may be pronounced unequalled in the records of similar performances. Mr. L'Estrange is on his way to America and Europe, and, prior to his departure, as we are informed, intends to give one or two performances here.

The remains of the late Italian patriot (General Nino Bixio), which were handed by the Netherlands-India Government to the Italian Consul here, and which were afterwards cremated, are to be forwarded to Genoa by Messrs. R. Rubattino and Co.'s mail steamer Batavia, which is advertised to leave Singapore about the 20th August.

We learn from Perak that Rajah Mansur, the son of Rajah Muda Yusuf, lately ran amok at Sayong, killing six, and severely wounding two persons. He afterwards escaped into the jungle, and orders have been given to arrest, but not to injure him. He is about twenty years old.

A lamentable accident has occurred at the P. and O. wharf. George Silver, second engineer of the Teheran, fell into the water, while walking along the wharf, and though he was soon taken out perfectly sensible, and apparently not seriously injured, he died in about two hours afterwards from syncope.

Captain T. Todd, the Deputy Master Attendant, has been granted six weeks' privilege leave, and we have not heard who will perform his duties during his absence.

The following notifications appear in the Gazette:—

Captain Alexander Bowers has been appointed Examiner of Masters and Mates under Act I. of 1859, and Member of the Pilot Board at Penang, vice Captain Alexander Distant.

Captain T. A. Fox, Harbour Master of Penang, has obtained two months' extension of leave of absence, with half salary, from the 7th August.

The Secretary of State has approved of the appointment of Mr. H. C. Vaughan as Deputy Registrar, Supreme Court, Penang.

The Rev. L. C. Biggs has been appointed to act as Colonial Chaplain, Penang, from the 11th July, vice Rev. A. Fearon, resigned.

Mr. A. D. Neubronner and Mr. W. H. Wormsley (Province Wellesley) have been appointed Coroners of Penang Settlement.

Mr. G. Lavino has taken charge of the Netherlands Consulate in Penang, from the 10th July, during the absence of M. H. J. D. Padday.

The average note circulation of the Chartered Bank in Penang during June was $170,000.

PENANG.

The Rev. A. Fearon, the retiring Colonial Chaplain, has received an address from the Tamil members of his congregation. The principal passages of this document are subjoined:—

We, the undersigned Tamil members of St. George's Church, hear with deepfelt sorrow that you will shortly, under Divine permission, leave our shores to work in another field, and we therefore hasten to express to you our gratitude for the numerous spiritual benefits which we have received from you during the short time God has been pleased to place us under your spiritual superintendence. Every one of your considerate and benevolent acts towards us—your treatment of every Tamil member of your flock without any consideration of his social position or of his possessions of this world—your opportune and delicate ministrations and attentions to the sick and poor—your readiness to administer the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and Baptism and other rites and ceremonies of the Church, whenever we have needed your kind exhortations and advice both in the Church and in our private houses, these and other benefits which we enjoyed under your Pastorate are indelibly impressed in our minds, and will long remain so. It is impossible to forget such favours. But what still further binds us and future generations to honour and cherish your memory is the indefatigable, and under God's blessing, successful exertions to form a Tamil Pastorate in Penang for the first time, in the history of the Church of England Mission Field in the Straits Settlements.

We, the Tamil Christians, are the poorest of the community in Penang, and we are, besides, few in number. We are, therefore, unable to beg you to take from these shores, from us, such a memento of the relations that subsisted between you and us as our heart would wish. While we are unwilling you should leave this colony without receiving our expressions of gratitude towards us, we are equally unwilling that you should leave us without a token of respect from us. We do, therefore, earnestly solicit you to accept from us this Address and this Bible, as the latter we consider and revere as the most precious Gift of God, and which we, therefore, present to you.

In reply to the address the Rev. A. Fearon expressed his gratitude for the token of love and esteem presented to him, and, in bidding his Tamil flock an affectionate farewell, called upon them earnestly to maintain the welfare of the Mission by acting in their daily lives up to the sacred truths of the Gospel.

The Penang Gazette announces that great complaints are made by those interested in the welfare of Laroot regarding the proposed imposition of certain extra taxes in that district by the Resident. It is stated that the duty on rice is to be raised from two cents a bag to a 5 per cent. ad valorem rate, which rate is also to apply to all other articles imported, excepting tobacco, which is to bear the extraordinary tax of $3.50 per box, the present rate being only seventy cents, while opium will have to bear an impost of $160 dollars a chest. It is to be hoped that Mr. Low is acting advisedly in these matters; to outsiders it appears an unwise policy to inflict a crushing tax on a new and undeveloped country. It is to be hoped that he does not consider the only object of his Government is to show a good balance-sheet. This we know has been the policy of the Labuan administration; but it requires no prophet to predict that a similar one applied to Perak will be suicidal in the extreme. We furthermore cannot avoid expressing an opinion that the total withdrawal of British troops (which is an accomplished fact) from Perak is a premature and ill-advised act at the present moment.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular of July 9 says:—In Imports business generally has been more active. In Yarns Nos. 16/24 have declined in value, while Nos. 28/32 have met with ready sale at a slight improvement. Grey Shirtings: Sales of very low qualities of 8¼ lbs. have further depressed the values of such makes, while the higher qualities are wanted at an advance—9 lbs., 45 in. goods, especially of the better makes, have met with more inquiry at higher prices. Fair sales of 7 lbs. T. Cloths have been made. The demand for Indigo Shirtings has improved. Black Velvets have met with good inquiry, at a slight advance. Fair clearances of the lighter weights of Turkey Reds have been effected, at about previous rates: heavier goods have slightly advanced in value. Prints and Cotton Italians continue very dull. In Woollens rather more inquiry for Black Lustres, at low rates, has to be noted—also for Italian Cloth and Mousselines. Blankets continue saleable. Blue Army Cloth is still wanted. There is no new feature to notice in Metals; holders are unable to obtain any advance, and the few sales reported have been at the lowest range of quotation.

SHANGHAI.—The week had witnessed greater activity, and a still further improvement in the market for all plain Cotton textiles, saving only some of the lower counts and descriptions of Grey and White Shirtings and T-Cloths; but Fancy Goods had not been much wanted, and Woollens had barely held their own. The news from Tientsin had continued favourable, and at Chefoo trade was showing signs of revival, having been brought back to life and hope by the abundant wheat harvest which the people of that region had just secured. The letters from Chinkiang, also, although they do not report any abatement of the locust plague, were more cheerful in tone, and spoke more hopefully of the future, while farther up the river the latest advices reported more doing.

SAIGON.—The market continued very dull, and prices of nearly all imports were lower.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Telegrams coming to hand reporting sales of new Teas ex City of Peking, at prices below what was generally expected, the market relapsed into a state of dulness. Arrivals, however, coming forward very freely natives showed more disposition to press sales, and a decline in prices had occurred—fully accounted for by the poorer quality of the Teas offered. Settlements during the fortnight had amounted to nearly 10,000 piculs, almost entirely composed of the lowest grades, finest, and upwards, being neglected. The Etta Loring had been laid on for New York at £2 15s. per 40 cubic feet, and the s.s. Glamis Castle was expected to load for New York, via China and Suez Canal, at £4. Quotations:—Common, $10 to 12 per picul; good common, $13 to 15; medium, $16 to 18; good medium, $19 to 21; fine, $24 to 26; finest, $28 to 30. Export from May 1 to date:—To New York, 2,421,719 lbs.; to San Francisco, 427,587 lbs.; to Boston, Chicago, &c., 1,307,621 lbs.; to England, &c., 903 lbs.; total, 4,157,830 lbs.

HANKOW.—During the week only a small business had been done, the prominent feature having been the opening of the market for second-crop Teas, Yang-le-tungs chiefly having been taken at Tls. 15⅔ to 17½ = 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 2¼d. against Tls. 23¾ to 26 = 1s. 5d. to 1s. 6½d., last year. Musters of first crop teas continued to be placed on the market, nearly all common teas. The market generally was firm, buyers hoping that the embarrassments of the majority of teamen would prevent their packing large second and third crops.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A good business has been done during the week. Fine teas, which had become more difficult to pick out of the large stock on offer, fully maintained previous rates, but common descriptions had shown a drop of one or two taels, teamen being very anxious to get rid of them. At the close, however, the market was very firm, and common teas had recovered a tael. The bulk of the supply, and consequently of the settlements, could hardly be classed better than good common, and the reports of the second crop had not led to expectations of much improvement in future receipts. Green Tea: Buying had continued during the week, both for England and America, at about opening rates; and though arrivals had been large, the settlements had been sufficient to maintain prices at fully ten per cent. above home values, the shipments to America costing five cents per lb. above what the early arrivals sold for in New York last season. The quality of the crop continued to be extremely poor. The settlements for the week amounted to the equivalent of 6,000 half-chests, Pingsuey at Tls. 21 to 34½, and 200 half-chests fine Hoochow kind at Tls. 42.

FOOCHOW.—The coast port steamer had not arrived at Hong Kong when this mail left. There are, consequently, no later advices from this port.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—For a few days after the date of last report (June 23) prices were rather weaker; the demand, however, became somewhat more active towards the close, and this, coupled with light arrivals, had enabled dealers to obtain an advance of $20 to 30 per picul, the market closing firm. Better qualities of Hanks were being brought forward slowly, though as yet mostly full sized Silk. Dealers allege that current rates would not cover cost in the interior, where producers were reluctant sellers at existing prices. Quotations: Hanks, good, No. 2, 19s. 9d. to 20s. 5d. per lb.; good all round No. 2½, 18s. 8d. to 19s. 5d. per lb.; medium No. 3, 17s. 4d. to 18s. per lb. Oshiu, good 19s. to 19s. 9d. per lb. Hamatski, good to best, $440 to 460 per picul; 16s. 7d. to 17s. 4d. per lb.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—Nearly a month has elapsed since the new Silk commenced to arrive at this port, and business to the extent of some 65 bales has at last been done. The market opened a day or two since with the purchase of Buffalo chop No. 2, Beautiful Woman No. 2, Dancing Bear No. 2, and Double Phœnix No. 2 Tsatlees at Tls. 415 to 420, and S.S.S. Dollar chop at Tls. 390. The two largest native holders—viz., the owners of the Blue Elephant and Gold Lion chops, have, it appears, failed to come to terms, and any further buying that would probably have taken place to a small extent for the first steamer has been prohibited by the further advance demanded by the Chinamen on the rates above quoted. The silkmen generally will be unwilling to buy in the country with the knowledge that one firm only is in the market here; prices are certain to be stiffer for a time from the mere fact that opening rates in Shanghai are considerably higher than looked for, and although arrivals may possibly be on an increased scale as compared with the last two or three weeks, the knowledge that Continental buyers are unable to ship will tend to increase the indecision of those Chinamen who as yet are uninterested in the new crop. Opening prices are nearly Tls. 80 per picul higher than last season's, and about on a par with those ruling for the mail of 1st July, 1876. Settlements of new Silk are 65 bales, against 8,000 bales last year, and some 30 bales of old re-reels have been taken at Tls. 380 to 410. Arrivals are within 2,500 bales, against 20,000 bales last year. Stocks are 2,400 bales of new Silk and about 7,000 of old cargo.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SAIGON.—Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler and Co.'s report says:—Rice: The market throughout has been ruling firm, and despite the decline which recently occurred at Hong Kong, prices at this have advanced, owing to limited supplies from the interior, a pretty large amount of tonnage present in port having to be provided for, and a rather sudden and important demand having sprung up for the Philippines, which towards the close, however, shows some falling off. The quantity of grain so far contracted for the Philippines comprises some 175,000 piculs, including about 50,000 piculs white steamed milled Rice No. 2. Cotton: Slightly lower; we quote cleaned No. 1 $16.50 per picul, and No. 2 10.40 and 4.85 per picul for uncleaned. Fish: "Sapat" has somewhat receded whilst, the other kinds have advanced in the face of a considerable reduction perceptible in stocks. Hides: Scoured Cow have receded to $16.30 per picul, uprepared ditto maintained its former value, viz., $12 per picul, and Buffalo are quoted $8 per picul. Horns: Uncleaned quoted $8 to 10 per picul, according to quality. Gamboge: Nominally quoted $50 to 52 per picul. Pepper: Commands the same as last advised price, say $7.75 per picul. Salt is in small supply and quoted 18 to 20 cents per picul.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co.'s Report says:—Tin: During the past fortnight arrivals have been on a moderate scale, and although London advices have been unfavourable, prices here have ruled higher: for England, 840 piculs have been taken at $19.62½; for America, 1,050 piculs at $19.50 to 19.42½; for Bombay, 150 piculs at $19.45; and for China, 300 piculs of unsmelted at $19.25. These purchases have cleared the market of available supplies, and just at close $19.45 has been paid to arrive for the States. Gambier: The first transaction after the departure of last mail was at $4.52½, an advance of 7½ cents, at which only 50 tons were secured. Improved advices from London then led to an active inquiry, and dealers at once raised the price to $4.60, at which 800 tons have since been taken, all for England, except 100 tons bought for America. Last home quotations show a further improvement, and dealers are now very firm. Cube Gambier: A fair business has been done for England and America, in No. 1 at $5.60 to 6; and in No. 2 at $5.37½. Cutch: No arrivals, nor transactions; wanted for the States at our previous quotation of $5½. Black Pepper: About 2,500 piculs were taken early in the fortnight for England at $7.55 to 7.70, after which dealers refused to sell except at an advance, and about 6,100 piculs were placed at $8 to 7.75, closing quiet at the lower quotation. White Pepper has been in better request, and higher prices have ruled; sales reported comprise 1,650 piculs of Singapore kind at $13⅜ to 15½, Rhio at $12 to 14.90, and Siam at $14½. Coffee has continued to be wanted for England, and arrivals of 1,020 piculs of Bontyne were readily placed at $22, while 970 piculs of unpicked Bally were also purchased at $17.75, clearing the market. The quality of this year's crop of Bontyne Coffee is considerably better than that of last, arrivals so far having been free from black and diseased beans. Nutmegs: Transactions reported amount to about 170 piculs for the States at $68 to 70; market is now cleared, but further supplies expected soon, for which an advanced price is asked to arrive. Mace: No. 1 is quoted nominal at $50, at which there are no buyers. Cloves: Amboyna have been sold to a small extent at $43 to 41, but the bulk of stock, which is considerable, is held for more. Cubebs: No transactions. Sago Flour: Fair sales to note; 380 tons of Sarawak and Borneo on the spot at $3.02½, and 250 tons of the latter description to arrive at $3.02½/04. Pearl Sago: There has been an active inquiry for England, and a good business has been done; 6,500 piculs taken at $3.57½/55 for small, $3.65 for medium, and $3.75 for large. Tapioca has also been wanted, and fine qualities continue to command full prices, while inferior are not so saleable. About 1,950 piculs of small and medium flake have fetched $5 to 6; and small medium and large pearl, to the extent of 200 piculs, $4.35 to 5. Borneo Rubber: Sale, 70 piculs reported at $28 to 31½, clearing the market. Gutta Percha: The demand has improved, and prices generally are higher. Buffalo Hides are scarce, and although there is a good inquiry, the only sales to note are 100 piculs of No. 2 Siam at $9, and 100 piculs of No. 1 Singapore at $11⅛. Cow Hides: Nothing done for export. Buffalo Horns: A further sale to note of 100 piculs 3¼ lbs. at $11.20, and a similar quantity of 3 lbs. at $10¾. Gum Dammar: Little doing; a small sale at $15⅜ has cleared the market for the States; there is still a demand at close. Gum Copal wanted for the States, and 500 piculs of unpicked have been placed at $4½; for stocks of 1,000 piculs $4⅜, for picked, has been offered and refused. Gum Benjamin: No sales reported. Gamboge: Sellers of picked at $53, but no buyers. Vegetable Tallow: No supplies at market, and none looked for at present. M. O. P. Shells: Arrivals of 20 piculs Macassar sold for $41; market very quiet. Sapanwood: No change. Siam quoted $1.70 to 1.80. Rattans: The demand continues, and with small arrivals prices keep very firm.

The London & China Telegraph.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

The disasters which have befallen China of late seem to be without end. The present mail brings news of the effects of the floods at and near Foochow, which are of a very terrible character. Hundreds of houses, it is said, have been washed away, two thousand persons have, it is computed, lost their lives, and the extent of the damage done cannot at present be estimated. Thousands of poor people have been rendered homeless and destitute by this disastrous inundation, while, to add to the general distress the injury to the growing rice crop has been so serious that it is believed about one-third of it has been lost. This will, of course, have the effect of raising the prices, already sufficiently high, necessarily rendering the struggle to live much keener. On the other hand, the accounts from the north are slightly more reassuring. The poor people were in some districts making efforts to sow their fields, but great damage had been caused over a large area by a hail-storm of unprecedented severity, which took place on May 10 last. The people have shown unfeigned gratitude for the aid which has been extended to them by foreigners. A decree in the Peking Gazette has appeared, announcing the capture of Turfan, the last remaining stronghold of the Dungani Mohammedans. Advices from Wenchow report that the suspected lorcha has been unhesitatingly identified by Mr. Main as the Mandarin. The absence of any proper papers and the inability of her present owners to account for her coming into their possession constitute strong corroborative evidence. It is justly observed that it is very little to the credit of the Chinese authorities that she should have been allowed to trade regularly to a considerable port like Wenchow, without recognition; notwithstanding that she has been more than once identified by foreigners on the high seas, and was recognised directly she is seen by the first foreigner who was familiar with her in Wenchow.

The general impression in Japan at the date of present mail's departure seems to be that the end of the civil war was approaching; but still the news was conflicting, and unreliable. The circumstances, however, that a junction of the Government field-armies had occurred, and that the officials generally appeared more sanguine, have given rise to the hope that the war may ere long be terminated. It was stated that the rebels were evidently tiring of a contest in which the Government proved too strong for them; that they were surrendering in numbers, and their resources were much impaired by six months' war. At the same time, no precautions were relaxed, and large numbers of troops continued to be despatched to the seat of war. The case which, as noticed in our last, had been brought by the Mitsu Bishi Company against Captain Colomb, R.N., for damages caused to the Chiri Maru by H.M.S. Audacious dragging down on her, has, after a tedious trial, ended without a verdict, the jury having disagreed. It is stated that an appeal is to be made, which will involve the question of the jurisdiction of the Court at Yokohama in a case against Her Majesty's ships. The new French Minister to Japan dined with the Emperor at Tokio on June 14.

Our advices from the Straits Settlements announce that the remains of the late Sultan Allie of Johore were interred on the 8th July with much ceremony. The Hon. J. Douglas and the Hon. C. J. Irving were present at the funeral, which was attended by over three thousand persons. Considerable discussion was rife with reference to the successor to the deceased Sultan. The Viceroy of Salangore, Tunku Oodin, was on a visit to Singapore. The members of the Tamil congregation of St. George's Church, Penang, have presented a Bible, accompanied by an address, to the Rev. A. Fearon, the retiring Colonial chaplain. No further news had been received at Batavia regarding the progress of the war in Atchin. The official Gazette of Manila promulgates a series of new regulations regarding the public sale of tobacco for exportation.

RAILWAY ENTERPRISE IN CHINA.

FROM information which we have received we fear there is no doubt that the Chinese Government have, as reported by telegraph, definitely resolved upon closing the Woosung Railway, and that the hopes of inducing them to rescind this retrogressive resolution are very small. It appears that for some time past the step has been hinted at, but those in China best able to judge hardly imagined that so unfortunate a resolution would be finally arrived at. As far back as June, it was known in Shanghai that the Chinese authorities seriously contemplated transporting the railway to Formosa, but that this idea was abandoned on account of the cost appearing too large. It was afterwards reported as likely that the rails would be taken up and the road absorbed by the adjacent villagers on the termination of the foreign management in October next, in accordance with the agreement published some time back in the Shanghai papers, and this it now appears has been finally decided upon. A variety of reasons seem to have conduced to this action. The mandarins are jealous of the power of foreigners in connection with the line; they cannot work it themselves, and do not like to entrust ordinary people with it, while they are also apprehensive of its falling into the hands and further swelling the importance of the already somewhat overbearing magnates of the China Merchants' Company. It is also stated by them that, as a matter of fact, it does not pay; but this really results from needless restrictions which are placed upon the carriage of goods—restrictions, however, which the officials are "but little" disposed to remove. The mandarins have probably been also influenced by the notion that putting down the railway would have a good effect upon the people generally by showing that the officials are able roughly to upset the most cherished wishes of foreigners. All these ideas have doubtless had their effect in inducing the step which has just been taken, but of the inadvisability of that course there can be no question. The public here, and, indeed, in Europe generally, were beginning to believe that at last China intended to throw off something of its old exclusiveness and conceit, and to endeavour, to some extent, at least, to keep pace with the outer world. These hopes will be rudely dashed to the ground when it is found that the earliest opportunity is seized by them to put down so small an enterprise as a railway twelve miles in length. Nor can the news be received without a feeling of suspicion that this design has been long entertained, and that in keeping open the railway as long as they have, since its purchase, they have merely been playing with foreigners and dangling false hopes before them, probably with the idea of obtaining better terms in the settlement of the negotiations so long going on and not yet terminated. Certainly this retrograde movement will not tend to facilitate coming to a good understanding upon outstanding matters, and it would at least have been prudent to avoid giving this cause of disappointment to those who were beginning to hope for better things until the matters connected with the Convention had been finally disposed of.

One thing has at least been gained by the Woosung Railway, short as its existence has been. It has been shown that no such insuperable difficulties as have always been declared to stand in the way of railways in China exist elsewhere than in the minds of the officials. The Chinese people have eagerly availed themselves of the line as a means of travelling, and but for needless restrictions would doubtless be equally ready to do so for goods traffic. One great advantage which could be gained by the introduction of the iron road into China would be that it would make it possible to collect the transit dues in a regular and recognised way, in the same manner, in fact, as the octroi dues are collected in France at the various railway stations. The opposite of this is of course the idea prevalent in the minds of the Chinese officials, who are, doubtless, haunted with fears that the inland revenue must be lost entirely unless they can collect it in the old style at the established barriers. But such of course need not be the case. On the contrary, an amount of regularity and certainty hitherto unattainable could be obtained to the benefit alike of the Government and the trading classes. It is, therefore, much to be regretted that an enterprise which seemed likely to form the precursor of so advantageous a step as the introduction of railways upon a large scale into China has been abandoned. China has thus practically shown herself to be far behind Japan, where railway enterprise, though it has been slow of development, is now firmly established, and the little gleam of hope which was entertained by her well-wishers that at last she was about to enter upon a career of progress will now pass away, and before anything can be done, the whole matter will have to be reopened and rediscussed, and it is but too well-known what this means in China. There can be no question in the minds of those acquainted with the wants of that country that nothing would tend more to its benefit than the iron road. The chief difficulty, administrative, fiscal, and commercial, which she has to contend with, is a want of centralisation, and nothing would supply this better than the introduction of railways with their usual accompaniment of the telegraph. It is, indeed, the very shortcoming which makes it difficult to introduce railways, which railways would themselves remove, and it is therefore specially discouraging to find that even when applied on the smallest scale and in the way least calculated to interfere with the internal affairs of the country, the railway is rejected as a dangerous innovation. We can only trust that the representatives of foreign Powers in China may yet be able to impress upon the Chinese Government the inadvisability of the step taken, and that at least something may be done to prevent its being what it at present undoubtedly appears to be, the stop to every chance for years to come of introducing the iron road. It is stated that the retrograde step which has been taken has been instigated mainly by the Viceroy of Nanking, and it seems somewhat strange that a man of so much enlightenment as he is reported to be should adopt so puerile a course. As a Chinaman observed in speaking of it, a Viceroy might shut up a railway of three-hundred miles; but one only twelve miles long—why a Ti-Paou (a village headman) could hardly do it and save his dignity. We can, however, scarcely believe that it can be the Viceroy himself who has thought of adopting this measure, but presume that it has been done at the instigation of some over-zealous subordinate.

JAPANESE FINANCE.

IN another place we give a summary of an exhaustive report upon the finances of Japan, which has been prepared by Mr. MOUNSEY, Secretary of the British Legation at Yedo, and which will be read with much interest at the present time, when the ideas entertained on this subject are generally of a vague character, in consequence of the somewhat defective form in which information with regard to it has been conveyed to the public. It will be seen that the great difficulty with which the Japanese Government have had to contend has been that of finding some means of lightening the land-tax, which, originating in the old feudal times of the Empire, has maintained proportions which are not in accordance with the existing state of finance and commerce. Mr. MOUNSEY points out that the tendency of Japanese financial legislation has been to lighten the burdens on the land, which, besides the land-tax, has to contribute considerable sums for local affairs. It was for this that the capitalisation of the allowances of the Nobles and Samurai—a measure arbitrary, no doubt, but seemingly of absolute necessity—was decreed; and it is also with this view that new taxes have been imposed, and that a desire is expressed for a revision of the Tariff Clause of the Treaties with foreign Powers, and for the imposition of higher duties on the import of articles of luxury at least. It is, however, doubtful whether the Customs receipts will be increased by raising the duties, and it being evident that time must elapse before the manufacturing industry can become a source of much wealth to the country, the land-tax must of necessity continue the chief item of national revenue. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that every means should be adopted by improved roads, &c., to encourage the development of the agricultural resources of the country. Mr. MOUNSEY takes a hopeful view of Japanese finance, and says that if the estimates for the past two years can be taken as correct, the financial position of Japan is not unsatisfactory, considering the progress already made, and should not discourage the Government of the Mikado in their endeavours to solve the problem which is before them, and which consists in the improvement of thei country by the adaptation of all that is beneficial inr Western civilisation.

IT will be seen from the news which we give this mail from the United States, that the Chinese question there is, as might be expected, assuming a somewhat serious shape. The leading Chinese merchants have petitioned Senator MORTON to introduce a Bill modifying the Burlingame Treaty, and among other things taxing every Chinese immigrant $100. The Senator has promised to introduce a Bill; but whether the last-named provision will be accepted may be considered problematical. The Chinese, it seems, also intend to claim indemnity for the damage done during the San Francisco disturbances.

SOME of the daily papers contain a curiously jumbled statement to the effect that a special Ambassador from China had arrived in Berlin, and was about to settle some diplomatic questions of importance. The only foundation which there would appear to be for this is that LI, who recently came over with some Chinese cadets, is at Berlin. It is also reported that the "Special Ambassador" is about to proceed to St. Petersburg. Should LI intend to proceed thither, which is possible, he will go entirely on his own account, and his visit will have no official importance.

ACCORDING to the latest advices from Brisbane it appears that the Legislature of Queensland are determined to leave no stone unturned to prevent Chinese immigration. The Goldfields Amendment Act and the Chinese Immigration Act have passed their second reading; though the former is in substance the same measure as that to which the Imperial assent was refused last session.

WITH reference to the letter which has been addressed by the Chairman of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce to the Committee representing that body here, we understand it appears probable that no definite step can be taken in the matter until the Indian Government have given their views.

THE appointments of Mr. MARCUS OCTAVIUS FLOWERS, now Her Majesty's Consul at Nagasaki, to be Consul at Hiogo and Osaka; of Mr. JAMES TROUP, now Vice-Consul at Neegata, to be Consul at Nagasaki; and of Mr. H. S. WILKINSON, to be Vice-Consul at Neegata are gazetted.

VICE-ADMIRAL HILLYAR, C.B., the officer who was recently appointed to the command of the China station, will proceed by the mail leaving Southampton on the 20th proximo, and which is due at Hong Kong on November 8.

THE CUSTOMS REPORTS ON THE CHINA TRADE FOR 1875.

Mr. Macpherson, in his review of the trade of Tientsin, notes that the value of the net foreign imports has fallen from about ten millions and a-half to about eight millions and a-half, and of this diminution only some Hk. Tls. 700,000 can be attributed to that decreased consumption of foreign opium which is due to the more extended cultivation, and to the greater care bestowed on the preparation of the native drug. The quantity of grey shirtings alone which arrived is less by 300,000 pieces, nor was this change compensated for by a general augmentation in the case of other fabrics. On the contrary, the total of piece goods of various kinds which arrived is characterised by a diminution to the extent of nearly 400,000 pieces. The value of the net native imports has also decreased by about Hk. Tls. 325,000, and that of native exports to foreign countries by over Hk. Tls. 3,400. Speaking exactly, the decline in the local prosperity, as represented by the trade coming under the immediate cognisance of this office, would have been represented by a sum of Hk. Tls. 2,317,173, had not a happy augmentation in the quantity of native exports to Chinese ports rectified such grave signs of retrogression; but even after deducting this amount, the net value of the entire trade of the 1875 season, as compared with that of 1874, is less to the extent of Hk. Tls. 1,768,966, or by more than one-tenth of the total value for the year. Of course, if merchandise only brought to Tientsin to be again promptly sent away is included, a sudden and unexpected increase in the quantity of tea admitted for Siberian use would go far to enable the statistics to show a more even balance.

Mr. Man, Commissioner at Newchwang, notes an increase in 1875, both in imports and exports. The foreign import trade amounted in value to Hk. Tls. 1,342,144, or an increase as compared with the previous year of Hk. Tls. 387,374. A falling off is however noticed in the Korean trade in woollens and cottons, which is accounted for, at least to some extent, by the internal troubles in that country, and the extreme uncertainty as to the future felt by the two engaged in what may be called her foreign import trade. The following remarks are made by Mr. Man with reference to the deterioration in the quality of English piece goods :—

Lancashire is surely stretching to extreme tension the sole cord in which her present practical monopoly finds strength—the hatred of change that lies embalmed in the Chinese character, and gives force and meaning to the conservatism met with in all the references of daily life. No din of machinery resounds through the streets of Shanghai and Canton, and the chance of forcing honesty in work by ceasing largely to import is in the future. Yet the native merchant has a tolerably adequate remedy at hand. By no law other than the "old custom" of his class is he obliged to deal in certain brands or with particular manufacturers. Not to mention competition just showing from India, a young and resolute rival is ready to take advantage of persistence in wrong-doing on the part of the long-established producers. "American industry labours under the disadvantage of dear and scarce labour, of navigation laws which have crippled the carrying trade, and of prohibitive tariffs." But, and in spite of all this, goods from the United States are already placed upon our market in considerable quantities, and there compare most advantageously with the adulterated short-packed rubbish that is ruining the reputation of British mills.

The value of the foreign trade of Chefoo shows a falling off as compared with 1874 ; but all headings, except that of Opium, show an increase.

Mr. Novion, Commissioner at Hankow, states that the trade of the year under review does not offer anything remarkable when compared with previous years; still it is not unsatisfactory, as it appears to have equalled, and even exceeded, the trade of 1873, and has confirmed the opinion expressed in the preceding report, that the deficit in 1874 was only accidental. The principal feature of the trade of the year is a decrease of some importance in the foreign importations, and a steady increase in all the branches of the native trade, import and export. The deficit of 1874 is to be accounted for principally in the native imports from Shanghai, which can be explained by the anxiety caused at the time by the Japanese difficulty, the withdrawal from the river line of the Chinese steamers, and the activity of military preparations, extending from Shanghai all along the Yangtsze. The net value of the foreign imports of the year amounted to Hk. Tls. 8,396,500, while the value of foreign goods sent to the interior under transit-pass is represented by the sum of Hk. Tls. 1,954,822, leaving a balance of Hk. Tls. 6,441,678, and as it is beyond all probability that such an amount of foreign goods could have been consumed in Hankow and Wuchang, it may be concluded with certainty that most of the imports are sent from this port to the interior by the natives, and without being covered by transit passes. In résumé, and from a general point of view, the tendency of the trade of Hankow for several years has been towards a decrease in the foreign importations, and a large increase in the coast trade, import and export, and an increase in the exportation of teas to the Continent of Europe (Russia). Cotton piece goods show a decrease of 150,276 pieces as compared with the importation of 1874, and of 300,914 as compared with 1873. This moderate, but continual decrease for several years in that important branch of the trade is the characteristic feature of the trade of Hankow. To assign a positive cause for that tendency would be presumption, as it depends upon many different reasons. A single fact may, perhaps, throw some light on the matter, which is, the feeble proportion of foreign imports sent to the interior under transit-pass from a port which by its geographical situation ought to be the first port for distribution to the interior, while it is still inferior to Chinkiang, where the proportion was 79·40 per cent. in 1874, and only 28·80 per cent. at Hankow. This inferiority Mr. Novion thinks is certainly due to the difficulty the goods meet with at the barriers in the interior, and to the stoppage, some two years ago, of an important lot of goods destined for Ch'ungk'ing, which affair is still pending, also to the importance of the tea trade, which absorbs the greater part of the activity and resources of the foreign merchants of this port. The foreign importations are, to a large extent, the property of native merchants who do not use transit passes, so that the distribution to the interior under them is limited to the provinces of Hupeh and Hunan, while the province of Szechuen alone will afford an immense field for the activity of importers, if it can be made more accessible for goods under transit-pass. It may also be inferred from the increase in raw cotton that the native manufactures are increasing, but that increase is not large enough, or the decrease in imports sufficient, to justify such presumption ; rather may it be said that, on the whole, this branch of the trade is in a stagnant state. Still the increase in native manufactures is worthy the attention of all merchants concerned.

Mr. Kopsch, in his report on Kiukiang, notices that the statistics show a falling off, as compared with the previous year. Both piece goods and opium show a decline, and in the exports the falling off is in green tea. Among new articles being taken into consumption by the Chinese, he notices foreign dyes and kerosine, which are both becoming established articles of trade. He advocates a reduction of the duty on tea dust, which is the same as that on tea. With regard to transit passes, it appears that about 20 per cent. of the goods imported at Kiukiang are sent into the interior under transit-pass.

In his report upon the trade of Chinkiang, Mr. Woodruff gives some interesting particulars with reference to the levy of inland taxes upon Chinese goods, and points out the detrimental effect they have on trade. At the same time, he considers that the alteration of the present system must be a matter of great difficulty. In speaking of the so-called "smuggling of opium" (mentioned in one of the Consular reports), he says that though foreigners' names were used the smuggling was unquestionably without their knowledge. The general trade at Chinkiang does not present any special features for notice. The imports showed a slight increase in quantity but a falling off in value.

The report on the trade of Shanghai by Mr. George B. Glover, Commissioner there, is excellently drawn up, and is free from any of the needless verbiage which finds its way into some of the other reports. The value of the trade of this port for 1875 was Hk. Tls. 4,100,000 in excess of that of the previous year, the total value having amounted to Hk. Tls. 109,300,000. Of this amount the gross value of foreign goods imported was Hk. Tls. 46,600,000, against Hk. Tls. 47,400,000 during the year 1874. The value of the import of opium was nearly 20 per ceent. less than that of the year before, and the same depreciation is to be noticed in the value of grey and white shirtings ; on the other hand, the value of T-cloths, drills and jeans increased fully 50 per cent. Woollens have held their own, their total value being nearly Hk. Tls. 300,000 in excess of that of the previous year. The tonnage of the port continues to increase, the total amount in 1875 being 250,000 tons more than that of any previous year. Of 3,854 vessels entered and cleared in 1875, steamers numbered 2,778 and sailing vessels 1,076. The increase in the number of steamers entered and cleared in 1875 over that of the previous year is 269, while during the same period the increase in the number of sailing vessels is but 87. The value of goods conveyed to and from the interior under transit passes in 1875 was nearly 50 per cent. greater than that of 1874. Regarding opium, Mr. Glover observes that, although the import of opium in 1875 into Shanghai was 9,099 chests less than in 1874, the actual import into China has not materially decreased. The falling off in the importation into Shanghai may be attributed to two causes; first, an increased quantity of the importation from India is purchased by natives at Hong Kong, and is forwarded by them to the Kiangsi and Szechuen provinces via the Canton and Swatow rivers, thus saving the lekin and other taxes ; the second cause may be ascribed to the yearly increasing cultivation of native opium, especially in the Shangtung province, which finds its way to Chinkiang via the Grand Canal, and from thence to Soochow and Shanghai overland, thereby avoiding both export and coast trade duty, to which it would be liable if conveyed by foreign vessels. The amount of Szechuen opium which passed the Shanghai Customs-office reached last year 891 piculs, against 75 piculs the year before. This increase is owing to a more careful and perfect supervision of the vessels carrying it, making it to the interest of the shippers to declare it at the Custom-house.

The foreign trade of Ningpo, according to the report of Mr. E. Bredon, officiating commissioner, shows a decline for 1875. The total net value of the whole trade for 1875 amounted to Hk. Tls. 12,846,315, or Hk. Tls. 1,699,995 less than the preceding year. This decrease however really exists to any great extent in but one of the elements which go to form the whole trade. The net foreign imports of 1875, value Hk. Tls. 6,180,252, not including re-exports, value Hk. Tls. 139,194, were more valuable than those of 1874 by Hk. Tls. 181,326 ; the native imports, value Hk. Tls. 1,682,131 (after deducting Hk. Tls. 20,822, the value of what was re-exported), were worth Hk. Tls. 148,592 more than the same class in 1874. It is among the exports that the loss in value of the trade must be sought. During 1874 the exports were worth Hk. Tls. 7,013,845, nearly three-fourths of a million less than in 1873 ; during 1875 they were worth Hk. Tls. 4,983,932, or Hk. Tls. 2,029,913 less than in 1874. It will be seen below that the one item of tea accounts for most of this deficit. Comparing the values of the net import and export trade, it is found that the former exceeds the latter by Hk. Tls. 2,878,451. In fact, ever since 1872 the proportion which the import trade bears to the export has been increasingly in favour of the former, but the ratio of increase has never been so great as during the year under review.

A summary of the reports on Foochow, Formosa, and the southern ports will appear in a future issue.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.—A Return just laid before Parliament shows that the total National Debt, funded, including stock held on account of unclaimed dividends, unfunded, and (capital value of) terminable annuities, has decreased from £839,519,326 on the 1st April, 1857, to £776,270,544 at the same period in 1877.

THE FINANCES OF JAPAN.

A valuable report on Japanese finance, by Mr. Mounsey, Secretary to the British Legation at Yedo, has been published in Blue-Book form, having been forwarded to the Home Government by Sir Harry Parkes. Mr. Mounsey describes in detail the Japanese system of taxation, the particulars of expenditure, the amount of the public debt, and the general position and prospects of national income. The land-tax constitutes no less than nine-tenths of the revenue of the Empire, and the importance of the Government undertaking the administration of the Daimios' territories and compensating them for doing so may be judged from this fact. The Government to accomplish its task had to convert payments in kind into payments in money, and at the same time to make a new assessment of the land. With a view to attaining the first of these objects, the Government published a proclamation in 1872, permitting the payment of the land-tax in money; but as few landholders availed themselves of this permission, a further Decree was issued in July, 1875, rendering payments in money compulsory in each district as soon as the lands within its limits should be assessed according to the new system, and ordering the assessment to be commenced at once. In this new assessment the old method of calculating the land-tax according to the amount of produce is abandoned, and the basis adopted is the saleable value of the land. The tax on land is in future to be kept entirely distinct from that on buildings; and in computing the value of each property, the assessors are to take into consideration the capabilities of the soil, the expense of cultivation, the situation, the means of irrigation, the proximity to or distance from markets, &c., &c. A valuation is then to be struck, and on this valuation a tax of three per cent. is to be levied. This latter amount is not to be final; for the decree goes on to state that as soon as the taxes on tea, tobacco, and other articles of produce to be presently imposed yield a revenue of 2,000,000 yen, a further and gradual reduction will be made in the tax on the newly assessed lands until it becomes 1 per cent. of their value.

The new assessment was commenced in 1875, and at the close of 1876, two-thirds of the cultivated land of the country had been brought under it, whilst hopes were entertained of completing the survey of the remaining third in a few months. In the meantime, many of the farmers opposed the introduction of payments in money. Repugnance to change, so common in the agricultural classes of all countries—an idea that the new form of payment would prove an additional burden: the difficulty in a country where roads scarcely exist of carrying their rice to market at a given date when the tax became due, and the still greater difficulty, in the absence of banking establishments, of obtaining advances on it. Finally, the fear of depreciating the price of rice by throwing more on the market than was necessary for consumption. One or all of these reasons may have actuated them, and the result was that in November and December, 1876, agrarian riots broke out in several provinces of the Empire. In December they assumed a serious form, and it seems probable that these outbreaks hastened the further reduction of the tax contemplated and announced in the Decree of 1875.

A comparison of the Estimates for 1875-76 and 1876-77 shows that the total decrease of revenue in the current year will be £1,118,525, and the total decrease of expenditure £1,100,932. The chief items of the former are:—(1) The Land-tax, the decrease in which is attributed to the introduction of the new system of levying it at the rate of 3 per cent. on the value of the land, as already described. The effect of the further reduction to 2½ per cent. will not be apparent until the estimates of the ensuing financial year are published, as the greater part of the tax for the current year had been collected previous to the promulgation of the Mikado's Decree of the 4th of January last. It is calculated that this measure will further reduce the land-tax by about £1,600,000. (2) Tax on allowances and pensions, where the decrease is due to the capitalisation of the allowances, &c. (3) Revenue of the Hokkaidô; and (4) Miscellaneous Receipts. The sale of Government property and the refund of loans. The taxes which show considerable increase during the current year are those in fermented liquors and tobacco, and there is an increase in the revenue from the post-office, railways, telegraphs, mines, mint, and customs.

Referring to the National Debt, Mr. Mounsey points out that the actual amount of debt incurred by the Government of the Restoration appears to be under £9,250,000 sterling; and considering the magnitude and extent of the changes which have taken place in this country during their tenure of office—viz., the reform of the entire administration, the creation of an army and navy, the adoption of an uniform system of taxation, involving the abolition of no less than 2,000 petty dues and imposts, the introduction of railways and telegraphs, the establishment of lighthouses and post-offices, the issue of a new currency, the extension of public instruction, and the initiation of a new code of civil and criminal jurisprudence—this sum does not seem disproportionate to the results obtained. The sum total of the public debt on the 1st July, 1875, was £28,457,916, and according to the latest statement, that which accompanied the estimates of the current year, and gives an account of the debt on the 1st July, 1876, this sum has been increased during the year to £29,784,944. The items of debt in which there is an increase are the internal debt, bearing 8 per cent. interest, and the foreign debt, bearing 9 per cent. interest. As regards the former, the Vice-Minister of Finance states that it is entirely due to the settlement of claims arising out of the capitalisation of allowances and pensions, voluntarily surrendered in accordance with the terms of the scheme of 1873. As to the foreign debt, he states that the increase (which is not absolute, but only apparent, as diminishing the amount of this debt redeemed during the year in question) is owing to the insertion in this statement of a small number of bonds bought in by the Government since the debt was incurred, and excluded from previous statements of the debt.

Naval and Military.

Admiral Charles Wise (Retired List) died on the 8th inst., in his 68th year. This officer entered the Navy in 1822; passed his examination in 1829; obtained his first commission in 1833; served, from 1835, until paid off at the commencement of 1840, part of the time as senior lieutenant, in the Rodney, Captain Hyde Parker, on the Mediterranean station; and in 1841 was appointed, in the capacity last mentioned, to the Cornwallis, fitting for the flag of Sir W. Parker, whom he accompanied to the coast of China. He commanded a small division of boats subsequently at the destruction of thirty fire-boats at Chusan, and was present at the capture of Woosung, Shanghai, and Chin-Kiang. For his conduct he was promoted to the rank of commander in 1842, and was reappointed to the Cornwallis. In 1844 he returned to England; he was again, in 1845, nominated second captain to Sir W. Parker in the Hibernia, in the Mediterranean; and on the death at Malta of Captain Nicholas Lockyer, of the Albion, he was promoted, in 1847, into the vacancy thereby occasioned, into the Inconstant at Lisbon, and was afterwards flag-captain to Sir W. Parker, in his second commission in the Mediterranean. Again, in 1854, he was flag-captain to Sir W. Parker, who was then appointed commander-in-chief at Devonport. Subsequently he served as commodore on the West Coast of Africa in the Vesuvius, and at the end of that commission he was made captain superintendent of Sheerness Dockyard. He was not employed after attaining flag-rank, to which he was promoted in April 1865.

By the death of the Junior Admiral of the Fleet, Sir H. J. Codrington, K.C.B., one of the most distinguished and popular Admirals in the Navy, the Hon. Sir Henry Keppel, G.C.B., formerly commander-in-chief on the China Station—attains the highest rank in his profession, viz., that of Admiral of the Fleet; Vice-Admiral Ryder—now Commander-in-Chief in China is promoted to the Admirals' List; Rear-Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock to the Vice-Admirals' List; and Captain John Bythesea, C.B., V.C., to the Rear Admirals' List.

The Navarino, hired screw steamer, arrived in the Thames, at Gravesend, on the 14th inst., from Ceylon, having on board a detachment of the 57th Regiment, sent home for transfer to the first-class army reserve. The Navarino embarked her troops and sailed from Colombo on the 7th ult., the passage to Gravesend, via the Suez Canal, occupying thirty-eight days.

The Distinguished Service Reward, vacant by the death of Major-General R.N. Tinley, has been given to Colonel R. H. Currie, 39th Regiment. Colonel Currie served with the 39th Regiment in India and in the Crimea.

On the 11th inst. the Prince of Wales went on board the Thunderer, which was lying in Cowes Roads, when some torpedo practice was gone through, of course with blank charges. Each torpedo was charged with about 100lb. of gunpowder, and when the discharge took place a mountain of water was projected high into the air, preceded by a rumbling noise like distant thunder; and so severe was the explosion that hardly a vessel lying in any part of the roadstead but felt a shaking or lifting up, as if from the effect of an earthquake, showing the terrible effects of this newly-invented and deadly instrument of warfare. The Prince expressed his satisfaction at the skill with which the operations had been conducted, which were quite a novelty to those persons who had witnessed them. Later in the day the Queen visited the ship. The Thunderer got up steam and proceeded up the Solent to Osborne Bay. Her Majesty was rowed to the Thunderer, where she was received by Captain Wilson, Commander Lord Charles Beresford, and the other officers of the ship. Her Majesty was joined by the Prince of Wales, and was conducted over the whole of this vast ship, which she minutely examined, and expressed her great satisfaction with all the arrangements. After spending about an hour on board Her Majesty returned to Osborne.

From a statement laid before Parliament, showing the expenditure actually recorded to the end of March this year of money taken from the Consolidated Fund for the expenses of fortifications, it appears that, including payments for land, clearance works, professional charges, and for the defence works themselves, the following amounts have been spent at some of our principal ports:—Portsmouth, £3,069,900; Plymouth, £1,474,044; Pembroke, £305,766; Portland, £455,694; Gravesend, £320,515; Chatham, £273,983; Sheerness, £360,208; Dover, £293,844; Cork, £191,341. The sum of £392,510 6s. 5d. was spent in providing and fixing iron shields, and with incidental expenses, works, experiments, surveys, and legal and incidental charges, the total amount expended has been £7,297,321 9s. 7d.

The series of huge forts for the defence of Portsmouth, which have been years in building, have at last been completed, and are now receiving their armament. The forts are mounted with 38-ton 12½-inch muzzle-loading guns, which are loaded and worked entirely by the hydraulic system of Mr. G. W. Rendel, and may be fired at the rate of a round in a minute and a half. A series of trials have been going on under the superintendence of Colonel C. W. Younghusband, the Superintendent of the Royal Gun Factory and President of the Heavy Gun Committee. The order from head-quarters for the non-admission of strangers to the forts under any circumstances is rigorously enforced; and all information is withheld by the authorities.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

During last week the Envoys have visited Newgate Gaol, and have inscribed their names in the visitors' book. H. E. Liu has not yet left for Berlin. The Envoys, we are informed, intend shortly to make a tour of the manufacturing districts.

The Chinese Envoys, accompanied by a number of officials of the Chinese Embassy, paid a visit to Chatham on the 17th inst., where they made an inspection of the School of Military Engineering. The visitors were received by Colonel Sir J. Stokes, K.C.B., by whom they were conducted over the various schools at the Royal Engineer Institute. They afterwards witnessed a field-day of the troops on the Great Lines, under the direction of Major-Gen. G. Erskine. After partaking of luncheon at the officers' mess of the Royal Engineers, the visitors in the afternoon proceeded to the Royal Engineer encampment at Wouldham, on the Medway, where they witnessed some experiments in pontooning under the direction of Major Magnay.

THE CHINESE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Senator Morton, at San Francisco, has been visited by a deputation of leading Chinese merchants. Referring to the labour troubles there, they said that a strong feeling existed against them; that their property had been destroyed, their persons maltreated, and their treaty rights disregarded; that the Government fail to give them protection; and that, having borne this for many years without the prospect of relief, they desired the adoption of measures to afford them redress. They requested Senator Morton to introduce a Bill into Congress providing for the modification of the Burlingame Treaty by taxing every Chinese immigrant $100, the proceeds to go to pay the passage back to China of the Chinese desiring to return. The Senator promised to introduce a Bill. The Chinese intend to make a claim on the Government for 100,000 dollars of indemnity for damage done during the recent San Francisco disturbances, the claim to be presented through the British Legation at Washington, China being unrepresented there, and the injured Chinese having immigrated from Hong Kong.

CHINA AND KASHGAR.

Letters from Kashgar, received in Turkestan, fully confirm the reports of Yakub Beg's sudden demise. The famous Emir died at Korla, after an illness of thirteen days. His remains were brought to Kashgar, and buried on the 31st of May in the cemetery of Appak Chodsha. Chakim-Chantjura, a descendant of Buzruk Chodsha, dethroned by Yakub Beg, was designated by the latter, to the detriment of his own children, as his successor; but, after consulting leading civil and military authorities, renounced his right in favour of Beg Kuli Beg, the late Emir's eldest son, who had remained in the capital as regent when his father took the field against the Chinese between Turfan and Karajar. Further intelligence from Russian merchants trading in those parts of Central Asia states that the Chinese after crossing the Karajar-Darja have laid siege to the town of Karajar. This news is corroborated by a telegram from Colonel Prshewalski, the celebrated traveller, dated Fuldus, June 6, announcing the advance of the Chinese after conquest of Toksun and Turfan, on Karajar, evacuated by the citizens. Yakub Beg's sway, adds Colonel Prshewalski, still unaware of the Emir's death, is soon to fall. At the request of the new ruler of Kashgar, the Russian Government have prohibited the export of provisions to Chinese provinces occupied by troops operating against Kuli Beg.

The Russian Government has received despatches from Colonel Prjevalsky announcing the arrival of the Kashgarian exploration party at Kouldja. The eminent geographer at the head of the expedition states that between Lob Nor and Kouldja he has made several discoveries of interest to zoologists, and has added to his collection of Central Asian animals three wild camels, which the Cossacks attached to his party succeeded in capturing on the deserts between Kashgaria and China.

THE EUROPEAN SILK CROP.

The French Ministry of Agriculture publishes some very complete information as to the prospects of this year's silk crop both in France and abroad, to which the crisis in the trade at Lyons lends special interest. The quantity of silkworm eggs and seed raised in France was about the same as in 1876, being above the figures for that year in the departments of the Gard, the Vaucluse, the Herault, and the Bouches-du-Rhone, and below them in the Drome, the Isere, and the Ardèche, but the crop of cocoons was much larger, being estimated at 6,783 tons, as against 2,296 in 1876, 10,070 in 1875, and 11,071 in 1874. The departments which have produced the most this year are the Gard (3,264 tons), the Ardèche (1,961 tons), the Drome (1,917 tons), and the Vaucluse (1,028 tons); next to which come the Isere, the Bouches-du-Rhone, and the Var with about 400 tons each. Out of the total crop of cocoons, 5,693 tons are yellow and 1,090 green; and while the former are reported good, the quality of the latter will, it is apprehended, be found very inferior. The estimated yield from these cocoons will be 475 tons of raw yellow silk and 70 tons of green ditto, and the average price has been f.5 for the yellow and f.3½ for the green cocoons. In Italy the crop has yielded 22,450 tons, against 14,537 in 1876, 39,410 in 1875, and 42,310 in 1874; and here the green silkworm predominates, being six-sevenths of the total quantity. The yellow cocoons are reported good, but the others are bad, and the crop will not yield above 1,500 tons of silk. The Spanish crop has yielded 920 tons, against 1,210 tons in 1876, 1,605 in 1875, and 1,848 in 1874. In the Levant, Broussa has given 800 tons of cocoons, more than half of which, obtained from the green silkworm of Japan, will turn out well. Comparing the crops of all the countries mentioned above, it will be apparent that they supplied 2,316 tons in 1877, 1,456 in 1876, and 3,739 in 1875, in other words, that the crops of the two former years scarcely exceed that of 1875.

AMONG the additions to the Zoological Society's menagerie during the month of July was a long-billed crane, obtained from Shantung, and transmitted to the Society by Mr. Theodore Hance, of Chinkiang.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, AUG. 14.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company at Copenhagen, whose lines, as you will remember, lead via Russia and Siberia to China, recently has published its statement for the first six months of the current year. The income for the period ending June 31 amounted to f.2,875,168, against f.2,896,912 during the same period of 1876, and f.2,348,090 during the corresponding time in 1875. The income for the month of July has amounted to f.479,683. As the expenses of the company of late have been considerably reduced, the present result may be considered a favourable one, and the shareholders can expect a very satisfactory dividend.

The University of Tuebingen (Wurtemburg) celebrated her 400th anniversary last week, and a great many of learned men have come as deputies from the other German and foreign universities to deliver their congratulations. King William and Queen Olga have also been present at Tuebingen.

I wrote to you some months ago about an exhibition of German coal to take place at Hamburg, and I can now report that this show will take place in the latter part of September. All Westphalian pits are partaking in this exhibition, and will do their utmost to rival in future with English fuel.

The Colorado beetle keeps all minds in agitation. Two days ago it was officially published that the fearful insect had again been discovered, and this time, too, in the very heart of Germany—at Sihilda, in the kingdom of Saxony. At the same time the greatest vigilance was recommended to the Governments of all German districts to prevent the spreading-out of the new plague. Great ease of mind, though, in this regard, has taken place, in consequence of the publication of an American correspondence by one of the German leading papers. The said correspondence—from the pen of an American landlord—stated that in the United States the insect is easily and totally destroyed by a paint (the so-called Parisian green), which, in the form of a powder, is being mixed with chalk, and thus, by a very simple manner, is strewn on the attacked lands. The beetle, after this process, disappears totally; and the correspondent added that, in America, the Colorado beetle was far less feared than the German potato-disease.

As you will remember, I wrote some time ago about the uniform discontentment which prevailed all through Northern Europe about the new English Merchant Shipping Act of 1876. Upon the reclamations made by the Imperial Government in England an answer has been given that inconveniences for foreigners had never been indured by the said Act, and that such also in future never would be the case. This answer appears not to have satisfied the German Government, and the Commission for Seafaring Matters (Commission fuer Seesachen) has been convocated upon September 20, to consult the necessary steps to be taken by the German Government to protect German shipping against the bad consequences of the said Shipping Act. As the so-called Plimsoll fever is fast fading away, at least here in Germany, the English Government, after the opinion of experienced men, would do very well to order a revision of the disagreeable and over-hasty law, which already has severely wounded the Baltic trade as well for English as for foreign ships, without even the least benefit to those for whose protection it was destined.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The aspects of a speedy finish of the Eastern war having disappeared by the return of the Russians to the Balkans our Produce Markets had to suffer a heavy pressure during the past week, and transactions are of no importance. The Money Market remained very abundant.

COFFEE.—Transactions have only been made for consumption, but were extensive enough to maintain former values; the demand is a pretty lively one. Quotations for Java quality, m.1.05 to 1.50 per lb.

SUGAR.—First-hand parcels did not change owners. Quotations:—Manila brown, clayed, m.28½ to 30; do. unclayed, m.22½ to 24; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 30; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia, white, m.34 to 35; do. yellow and grey, m.31 to 33; do. brown, m.22½ to 29½; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.31½ to 34½; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.24 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.22 to 32 per 50 kilo.

RICE.—Of raw quality 10,600 bags are arrived from Bassein per Oreb, and are sold to a mill.

TEA.—Values are maintained, but transactions of no importance.

COTTON.—Quotatians are in most cases reduced, but dealers are not very much inclined to buy. Besides a few parcels of American provenience 20 bales Rangoon have been taken at m.0.45½ per lb.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are quiet, prime quality m.5.50 to 6. Mace, m.4.50 to 4.70 per kilo. Ginger, Bengal is dull at m.26 to 26½; Cochin quiet, m.63 to 86. Cloves in good demand, quotation of Zanzibar m.135 to 136; Amboina m.160 to 163. Pepper is unchanged, Singapore m.38 to 38½; Penang m.35 to 36; White m.66 to 80.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, money, m.20.32; account, m.20.38 per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

The better tendency of the past week has maintained itself during the last seven nights; but a visible foundation cannot be given for it. Berlin Bourse was the leader in the movement à la hausse, and has been followed by our place very willingly after a long period of flatness, although nobody here believes in a long duration of the better prospects, and thinks it very probable that news concerning a new fighting on the seat of war will immediately be followed by a retrograde movement.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10¾ to 11¼; Chartered Bank of India, 21 to 22; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 27 to 29; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.665; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 34 to 35; Oriental Bank, 44 to 45; P. and O. Although there has not been any change in prices, the Tea market has maintained the better tone which we indicated last week. The few arrivals which have taken place have not caused much business, chiefly on account of the commendable firmness of holders in view of the decidedly favourable export statistics to which we have already directed attention and which are improved by latest telegraphic advices from China. It is to be hoped that buyers in China will not be induced by the present more favourable advices to overlook that the improved tone is only for Teas above 1s. 2d., a grade which cannot exist in China when these advices reach there, when there cannot be any parcels of Teas on the market worth buying at even 1s. The prices realised for common "first crop" Teas, say 9d. to 10d., form a convincing proof that similar rates can scarcely be anticipated for "third crops."

There has been a little more activity—or, to speak more accurately, a little less inactivity—in the Silk market; but it is still in a very discouraging condition. Holders have shown a disposition to meet the buyers by a slight concession in prices, and this has caused some moderate sales; but the tone has been of a dragging and unsatisfactory nature. Some valuable statistics are published by the French Ministry of Agriculture with reference to the silk crops on the Continent. They are reproduced in detail elsewhere, and show that the various European silk-producing countries supplied 2,316 tons in 1877, 1,456 in 1876, and 3,736 in 1875.

In the Produce Markets lack of confidence and an absence of speculative inquiry have continued to be the prevailing characteristics, accompanied, as regards several articles, by a fall in value. Coffee sustained a further fall, but is improving at the close. Sugar has remained extremely quiet and business in East India kinds has been suspended. The speculative demand for Rice has continued, and floating cargoes have been sold at a further advance in value. Cutch and Isinglass also show some improvement. Gambier, China Galls, Manila Hemp, Japan Wax, Pepper, Spices, and Tin have declined.

The report of the Mediterranean Extension Telegraph Company recommends the payment of the half-yearly dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. on the preference stock, less income-tax, and a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum on the ordinary share capital, adding £491 to the reserve fund, which will then stand at £10,408. The meeting was called for the 15th inst., but no business could be transacted, there not being a quorum of shares represented.

The report of the Great Northern Telegraph Company to the 31st June has been issued, and is summarised elsewhere by our Hamburg correspondent.

Notice is given that the Bonds of the Chinese Imperial Eight per Cent. Loan of 1874, drawn for redemption at par, and the Coupons, due 19th inst., will be paid on and after that date, at the office of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, Lombard-street.

The London manager of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation has received a telegram from the head office at Hong Kong announcing a dividend of £1 per share, free of income-tax, and $150,000 added to the Reserve Fund for the half-year ended the 30th of June last. The Reserve Fund now stands at $650,000. The dividend will be payable to the London shareholders on the 25th inst.

A final dividend of 6d. in the pound has been declared by the Northern Assam Tea Company, payable on the 15th inst.

The failure of the old established firm of Messrs. Eccles Shorrock Brothers and Co., spinners and manufacturers, Over Darwen, is announced. The liabilities are stated to be £105,000, which will be very widely distributed amongst agents, bankers, and shippers. This firm has four mills, including 2,000 looms, chiefly occupied in making grey shirtings, besides which they have been large consignees of goods to the East.

At the Bank of England on the 15th inst. tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £165,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·786d.; and to Bombay, £100,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·75d. Tenders on Calcutta for bills at 1s. 8¾d. will receive about 10 per cent., everything above in full; on Bombay for bills only at that price about 33 per cent. No telegraphic transfers were either applied for or allotted, and the India Council have obtained about ½ per cent. less for their bills than they did last week, the fall being equal this time to the advance which was obtained on the last occasion.

Bar silver has slightly receded in value and 54⅛d. per oz. may now be quoted as the rate. The market for Mexican dollars is by no means firm, and it is doubtful whether supplies will fetch the last price of 53½d. per oz.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Although our market has not been active, there has been a fair amount of business done to meet the large deliveries in progress. Prices for black-leaf Congous show no alteration, but good medium red-leaf kinds have sold rather lower. Public sales have been on a small scale, which has tended to give more confidence to buyers, whilst importers have been firm on the more favourable accounts of exports from China.—Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm; common to good common show no change, but they are dull of sale. Fair to good kinds of Saryune have been in request, but the plain Kaisow kinds have been difficult to move. The sales of good kinds of Kaisow and Ching Wo, ex Fleurs Castle, have been at rather easier prices; fine to finest have, however, been well maintained. Pak Lin kinds have met with more attention, and prices show a slight improvement. Black-leaf kinds: Old season's remain as before. At public sale a chop of common Oonfa kind only realised 9½d. to 9¾d. per lb., being rather lower. Fair kinds are dull of sale; fair to good medium have been in moderate demand at about previous rates; good to fine are firmly held, and the sales made have been at full prices; finest also remain firm. New-make kinds: Common to fair kinds have been wanted; good to fine are also in demand. Oolongs: The demand is very dull, and at public sale some 1,200 half-chests have been sold at from 10¾d. to 1s. 3d. per lb. for common to good kinds of Amoy and Foochow. Formosa kinds with briskness are wanted. Souchongs: The first arrivals, per Fleurs Castle, have met with attention, and sales have been made from 1s. 10d. to 2s. for good, and 2s. 1d. to 2s. 4d. for fine to finest, the quality being considered good. Scented Teas: There has been more doing this week in Canton kinds. Capers have sold at previous prices for fair to good kinds, and a few fine to finest have realised extreme prices. Orange Pekoes have also sold readily, but short-leaf kinds have declined ½d. per lb., other kinds realising former prices. Foochow kinds have sold from 1s. 11d. for fine to 2s. 2d. for finest kinds, being much as before. Green Teas: There has been scarcely any business done during the week, and prices are without change. The public sales have comprised 11,024 packages, nearly the whole of which were sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

COTTON.—The general position of this article has remained unchanged, and throughout a very dull tone has prevailed, and American, which is the chief object of speculative operations, has declined almost continuously, closing nearly ¼d. lower for future delivery. East India descriptions have been comparatively steady, Tinnivelly closing 5¼d. to 5 11-16d., fair to fine. Western Madras 4 13-16d. to 5 7-16d., barely fair to good. Bengal 4⅝d. to 4¾d., fair. COFFEE.—The market has continued inactive, and supplies, although not extensive, proving in excess of the present demand, prices have again given away; at the close, however, there has been an improved demand, and a firmer tone prevails. Excepting for a small quantity of really fine, which sold well, Plantation Ceylon has been dull of sale, and prices have been 1s. to 1s. 6d. lower, but with more competition at the close the decline has been nearly recovered. Native Ceylon has declined 6d., and foreign sorts have been in limited demand, and prices are 1s. to 2s. lower. MANCHESTER GOODS.

Early in the week with better business in Cotton this market became steadier, though with the limited inquiry no advantage could be gained by sellers. Towards the close the tone has again been very quiet, and only a limited amount of transactions have taken place in either Yarns or Goods. Offers have not been wanting, and of fair extent, but the prices at which these could have been carried through are much below any concessions producers might be disposed to make.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

YOKOHAMA.

YOKOHAMA, JULY 11.

Turning to a trade circular issued on the 10th July, 1876, just twelve months ago, I find that good Hank Silks were then quoted at $640 to $660 per picul. Within the fortnight which had preceded that date those kinds of Silks had risen $200 per picul; and then prevailed that state of feverish activity—reckless speculation might be a better word—which turned out so disastrously for many people, and which some are to this day futilely but bitterly regretting. The condition of the market now shows a very different aspect, and tends to prove that last year's hard lessons have not been learned in vain. Good Maybash Hanks are now quoted from $520 to $525, while the best kinds which have come on the market, Nos. 1½ to 2, are quoted at $530 to $540. But this mere comparative mention of current and former prices is not enough to show the condition of the trade. It is necessary, in order that that may be fully realised, to state that the commencement of the new season has been unusually dull, buyers holding aloof, owing, no doubt, to the unsatisfactory condition of European politics, and the notable absence of any inducement from home to operators. On the other hand, the prices offered to holders have been so low, and foreign firms have shown so little enthusiasm and so much caution, that native holders have so far thrown but little of their produce upon the market. People may talk and complain of the dulness of trade; but a well-balanced mind will surely prefer this dulness to the briskness which characterised the "corresponding period" last year, a briskness which in some instances resembled that proverbial infatuation which pervades the being of those whom the gods have determined to destroy.

Thanks to the pertinacity of Mr. E. L. B. McMahon, Reuter's agent here, a sufficient number of subscribers has been got together to make a small fund, which provides for the receipt direct from London of political telegrams, so that we are kept posted up to date as to the more important events which are taking place in Europe.

I hear a rumour, which may not be well founded, and which has not yet found its way into print, to the effect that, in consequence of changes in contemplation in H.M. Consular Service, Mr. Russell Robertson is likely to be removed from this port. If the change will be a promotion, everybody here will be glad of it, for Mr. Robertson's own sake, at the same time as the community will grieve for themselves, as it would be hoping for a great deal to hope that his successor, be he who he may, will in all respects worthily replace him.

With regard to the case against H.M.S. Audacious, the members of the jury have talked so freely and so publicly upon the matter, and upon their own opinions thereanent—indeed two of them have written to the papers—that it is no secret that Mr. Edgar Abbott was the one of the five who would not agree with the others, and was in favour of a finding which would have thrown enough blame upon the Audacious to be tantamount to a censure of the captain, and his consequent losing of the suit. The question has been raised in comments which have been made by a portion of the Press, as to the jurisdiction of the Court; and arguments have been adduced to establish that Consular jurisdiction does not extend to officers of men-of-war in such cases, and that, consequently, Mr. Wilkinson in hearing the cause exceeded his authority. If what I hear be true, this very important point will be referred to the Privy Council, to whom it is said Mr. F. V. Dickens, the captain's counsel has been directed to appeal. The legal aspect of the case apart, the facts remain that the Audacious was riding at single anchor in a smart gale; that the anchor stock broke, and that the vessel drifted; that the drifting continued for an eighth of a mile before the vessel was brought up, and long enough for her to foul the Chiri Maru and do her serious damage, to say nothing of what injury she sustained herself and the death of the carpenter; and, more startling than all, that had the Chiri Maru been a rock the big ironclad would have thumped upon that rock long enough to be sunk and lost irrevocably. With that consideration I will leave the subject to whom it concerns.

Mr. E. S. Benson, for nearly ten years Municipal Director in Yokohama, has, at the expiry of his three months' notice, left the Japanese service. The duties of his office are divided between the Japanese officials of the Kencho and Mr. Perceval Osborne, the Governor of Kanagawa's foreign secretary. The settlement is without a municipality—without the apology for it which was known as Municipal Director; the foreign police is insufficient, the native inefficient; the streets are unlighted by night, and unwatered by day; and meanwhile the Japanese authorities pocket their ground-rents, and do nothing, or next to nothing, for their foreign guests. Quieta non movere is their motto; but for a state of affairs which is disgraceful, foreign residents, to my thinking, have themselves and their ministers to blame.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The China Mail gives the following:—We have received through a private source one or two items of intelligence from Peking which may probably throw some light upon the Shanghai telegram, published below, stating that the Chinese Government has formally consented to open fresh negotiations for an arrangement of the lekin question with all the Treaty Powers on more liberal terms than those of the Chefoo Convention. Our correspondent says that reports have been lately rife in the capital of unsatisfactory relations between the German Minister and the Chinese Government. So unsatisfactory had, indeed, the relations between them become, that the German Minister actually made preparations for his departure, and would have left had not despatches been received at the moment from the Tsung-li-Yamen, doubtless containing sufficient concessions to induce Mr. von Brandt to alter his mind. Since then, however, affairs have not gone on very smoothly between the parties, and both Mr. Brandt and his Secretary, Mr. Arendt, left the Capital on the 19th June for Tientsin. "The German Minister has been for some time," adds our correspondent, "negotiating with the Tsung-li-Yamen for some modifications of the Treaty, and, the Chinese being unwilling to accede to Mr. Brandt's proposals, the present ruffled relations between the parties are the result." There is every reason to conclude from the foregoing that the concessions on the part of the Chinese Government now announced by telegraph are mainly due to the action of the German Minister.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 8th July; the P. and O. mail from London, May 25, was received on the 5th July.

A very severe gale visited Shanghai on the 3rd July, the barometer falling to 29.30, and there being all the familiar accompaniments of a typhoon. Great damage was done during the progress of the gale, and it is feared that many lives were lost in the river; while news from outside will be awaited with anxiety. A number of sampans were upset in the river, rolled over by the violence of the wind and sea, and their occupants drowned. The River Police Hulk sprang a leak, and sank at her moorings, despite all the efforts of those on board to keep her free. She collapsed sooner than was expected, although her ill-conditioned state made it apparent that she would not weather out the gale if it was of long duration. Her occupants appear to have devoted themselves solely to keeping her afloat, and neglected to save their own property, portions of which, after she sank, soon disappeared in the river, and afforded employment for venturesome native boatmen, bent on the ill-errand of enriching their stock of belongings as much as possible. The hulk Berwick Walls carried away her stern moorings, and half an hour more of the fury of the gale promised to relieve the Bund of an eyesore; but it lulled, and she was saved. But it was among the cargo-boats and small craft that the trouble was greatest. A number of these were moored alongside the pontoons, against which and against each other they pounded until the pontoons were smashed and carried away, and several of the boats themselves badly damaged or sunk. The Kiukiang-road pontoon is completely carried away and several others are badly damaged—simply from neglect of the commonest precautions. It was obvious in early morning, from the fall of the barometer and the look of the sky, that a heavy gale was coming on; and for the cargo-boats to remain clinging to the pontoons was simply to invite disaster. A quantity of small wreckage, and what looked like the remains of one or two house boats, strewed the shore at the upper portion of the Bund, while the mud flat was crowded with boats drawn up or driven ashore during the gale. We did not hear of any disaster among the foreign shipping; but there was hardly time to gather reliable particulars so late in the evening. The Public Garden escaped better than we should have expected, but the bunding is badly damaged by the washing of the waves.

The annual meeting of the shareholders in the Yangtsze Insurance Association was held on the 5th July. The accounts for the year ended 30th September last (which were adopted nem. con.) showed a reserve of Tls. 240,000, besides the paid-up capital of Tls. 600,000. A dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. for the half-year was declared. Messrs. Evans, Boyd, Lucas, and Krebs were elected a Consulting Committee for the current year. It was resolved to re-constitute the company at the close of the present term.

The statement of accounts of the North-China Insurance Company to the 30th June, 1877, which has just been published, shows a balance in hand of 90,405 taels on 1875 account, besides 102,459 taels placed to reserve, and 119,234 taels on 1876 account, with 92,760 taels at reserve.

The Courier's Tientsin correspondent, under date July 1, writes:—

That a line of Imperial Chinese telegraphs really exists and is in daily work is now an established fact, the first line of telegraphs ever erected by the Chinese Government having been just completed by Mr. Betts and the students of the Torpedo College. The line connects the College and Arsenal with the Yamen of H.E. Li Hung-chang, a distance of some six miles; H.E. the Viceroy takes great interest in the working of the instrument, which is placed in one of the private apartments of the Yamen under the charge of two of the College students. The river Pei-ho is crossed by a submarine cable, and special instructions have been issued to the guard boats to see that it is not damaged by junks' anchors. I am informed that not the slightest opposition was offered by the people to the erection of the line. Permission was readily obtained to cross the roofs of the houses in Tientsin, no officials accompanied Mr. Betts during the progress of the works, and no proclamation was issued by the authorities; going to work in a quiet manner, without any fuss, the line was got through with considerably less trouble than is experienced by the Postal Telegraphs when erecting lines in England. I believe that this is but the beginning of a complete system of telegraph lines in the province under the government of Li Hung-chang and that extension to the provincial capital is already contemplated.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 14th July; the French mail from London, June 1, arrived out on the 8th July, and the following P. and O. mail of June 8 was received on the 13th July.

By the present mail there is again but little of special interest from Hong Kong. The Colonial Secretary, the Hon. J. G. Austin, left on the 10th July by the M.M. steamer Tanais, for Yokohama, on leave. The Hon. C. C. Smith will be Acting Colonial Secretary and Mr. Wodehouse Acting Registrar-General.

The Daily Press gives the following particulars of the loss of the Russian ship Rhutinas in the China Sea on the 4th inst.:—

The vessel left Bangkok on the 27th June with a cargo of teak and rice for Hong Kong, and experienced fine clear weather in the daytime with cloudy nights, and at midnight on the 3rd inst. she suddenly ran upon an unknown rock, by reckoning supposed to be about thirty miles off the North Shoal and 100 miles from Hainan. The rock was not marked on the chart by which the vessel was navigated, and appears to be of volcanic origin and oval in shape, the lengthways bearing East and West. The vessel ran very high, and the soundings taken by Captain Anderson were found to be eight feet forward, twelve amidships, and fifteen aft. Finding there was no chance of saving the vessel, and as she was fast making water and breaking up, it was resolved to abandon her as by 7.30 A.M. on the following day there was eight feet of water in the hold and the vessel nearly broken in two. The captain and crew, sixteen in all, then left in two boats and made for the nearest land. Only a part of their clothing and effects were saved, and after having been in the boats two days a steamer bound north—evidently steering for Hong Kong—hove in sight, and the men pulled hard to get near her, but no one on board seems to have noticed them, and she soon steamed out of sight. A little after this the British barque Alphington hove in sight, and a signal being made to her and observed, she immediately bore down on them, and they were picked up and brought on to Hong Kong. The captain and crew speak highly of the treatment received at the hands of Captain Cunningham, of the Alphington, from the time they were taken on board till they were landed in Hong Kong.

The above paper also gives the following :—

As will be observed on reference to the shipping reports, the steamer Yesso encountered some heavy weather between Amoy and Swatow. A falling barometer and a S.E. gale gave every indication of a coming typhoon, and Captain Ashton at once ran the vessel into Namoa Straits. On arriving at Swatow he learned that a heavy gale had been experienced there, and that the steamer Douglas had arrived at 4 P.M. on the 5th instant with news of bad weather and a falling barometer outside. The steamship Glenfalloch also arrived, and reported passing several junks bottom up, from which she picked up the Chinese who were floating on them.

The Occidental and Oriental steamship Gaelic, which arrived from San Francisco on the 10th inst., brought six Japanese, part of the crew of a junk discovered near Yokosinning Island, flying signals of distress, and with her mainmast gone. A boat was lowered, and the men, who belong to the Loochoo Islands, were taken off. Several of the crew had died from exhaustion, they being without provisions. The junk had evidently been caught in a typhoon.

The two men charged with the murder of the Chilian seaman in Gough-street have been committed for trial to the next Criminal Sessions.

We understand that there are a great many counterfeit dollars about in Hong Kong at the present time, probably put into circulation through the same agency as that which recently at Singapore attempted to palm off twelve hundred spurious dollars on the Chartered Mercantile Bank there. Most of the bad coins are, it is stated, clever imitations of the American trade dollar, and they are very difficult to detect, except by the ring.

The Canton correspondent of the above paper writes :—

The one hundredth and first anniversary of the Glorious Fourth was celebrated at this port by the American residents with much spirit. There was a dinner provided for the American residents at Russell and Co.'s house, and the foreign community were invited to witness a display of fireworks subsequently. The whole affair passed off very satisfactorily.

An attack was made by a band of robbers on a chandler's shop in the Western suburb a few days ago, but proved unsuccessful. The miscreants were altogether foiled by the unexpected resistance they encountered, the shopkeeper having summoned his neighbours to his assistance. Two of the would-be burglars were captured and handed over to the authorities.

A collision nearly occurred between two guilds in Honam the other day. You are doubtless aware that the slaughter of cattle in China is illegal, but is winked at in the treaty ports where foreigners have to be supplied with animal food. The cattle dealers and butchers derive good profits from their trade, and some other folks occasionally throw covetous glances at them. This was the case the other day. The hardwood guild wished to exact a "squeeze" from the cattle slaughterers, and after some demur the latter agreed, for the sake of peace, to pay a small sum to the guild. But the members of the hardwood guild were not satisfied; the amount promised was too small. They therefore set to work to raise a strong force, armed themselves, and set forth with the intention of carrying off the cattle and other property of the slaughterers. The latter, however, getting scent of the designs of the hardwood guild, made great preparations to resist, and when the hardwood men arrived they found such a formidable array that they deemed discretion the better part of valour and dispersed to their homes without striking a blow. The affair affords some insight into the social life of the Chinese. Fancy one trade union in Great Britain attempting to levy black mail from another, and supporting the attempt by force of arms without interference from the authorities!

A body of soldiers has been despatched from here by the authorities to Sai-chew, in the Namhoi district, in consequence of its having become the rendezvous of bands of troublesome robber. Sai-chew has long been the haunt of these social pests, who sally forth to commit depredations upon the surrounding country. Whether this attempt to scatter them will prove successful remains to be proved, but it is seldom indeed that any effective steps are taken by Chinese officials to put down lawbreakers. On the contrary, they often collect toll from these rascals, who are generally willing enough to pay for freedom from interference.

I hear of great complaints amongst the Chinese of the exactions of the Hoppo. Since the present holder of the office arrived, the Customs dues are said to have been largely increased, and in some cases doubled. The people whom it more immediately affects are growing restive under the imposition, but they can do nothing but "grin and bide." I cannot say what foundation there is for the complaints, as my information is of course all from one side, and I have no opportunity of verifying it.

A good many heads have been chopped off lately. For three or four days running about ten prisoners were executed each day. The measures taken for the suppression of brigandage are, however, of the most futile description, and the robbers find their trade a profitable one and with small risks, as the number of arrests made is in ridiculously small proportion to the number of culprits. Only the other day a band of these pests of the country attacked a village, and, having sacked six houses, left at their leisure. One of the villagers received a shot wound, from which he died the following day. As usual, the matter has been reported to the authorities, who must have a wonderful number of such reports to read. I must do the officials the justice, however, of stating that two notorious leaders of the lawless characters who commit such outrages as this were arrested the other day.

A number of gamblers were arrested in the Northern suburb a day or two ago and have been handed over to the Nam Hoi magistrate.

The following paragraphs are from the China Mail:—

The eighth annual report of the Diocesan Home and Orphanage, Hong Kong, has just been issued, and from the statement of accounts it appears that the institution, like many other worthy objects, is sadly in want of money. It is proposed to effect extensive repairs found necessary to the building, and as these will cost something like $1,500, a strong appeal for funds will have to be resorted to. The good which the Home accomplishes ought to be a powerful recommendation for such aid.

The new Marine Insurance Company started lately under Chinese auspices had succeeded so well that the same office intends to augment its operations by the addition of the business of a Fire Insurance department. Most of the shares in this new Fire Office have been taken up, and the Company, named the Sheung On, "Constant Safety," will commence business on the 1st day of the 7th moon, while the capital to be paid up is to be collected from and after the 25th July inst. until the 8th August next. John Chinaman, we suppose, will next require a life insurance office. But before that we expect he will establish an issuing bank, the last attempt in that line having become abortive through the over-stringent nature of the rules and the limited knowledge of banking business possessed by the chief promoter.

A letter from Macao says :—"From the last number of the Boletim do Governo de Macao e Timor we learn that a concession has been granted by the Government to Mr. M. Ayres da Silva to construct an embankment along the frontage of the inner harbour, being a curve from the Harbour Master's office to the Green Island, something about a mile in circumference."

The annual general meeting of the Foochow Chamber of Commerce took place on the 4th July. The report, which dealt with various subjects, including telegraphs, mails, pilots, the proposed new channel between Mingan Pass and Pagoda Anchorage, &c., was unanimously adopted. Messrs. Paterson, Walkinshaw, Pim, Haslam, and H. R. Smith were elected to serve as the Committee for the current year.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 21st July; no later mail from London, had been received. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The Colonial Secretary has returned from Malacca, where he attended the ceremony of the funeral of the late Sultan Allie of Johore; and it has been decided not to invest Tunku Allum with the title and right of Sultan, but to keep the matter in abeyance. The Government and the Maharajah of Johore favour the claims of Tunku Mahmoud, who is a younger son, and only some six years of age—probably with a view to gaining time, and, it may be, with a vague idea of one day converting the young aspirant into a more important and useful man than his lately-deceased and misguided father. It is, perhaps, more probable that the title of Sultan of Johore has come to an end, and we have seen the last of this long line of chiefs—once so famous from being the terror of the seas in these parts. The Maharajah of Johore took an active part at the ceremony, and is likely to be the chief gainer by any change which may take place; however, the Government have been particularly reticent as regards their intentions as far as the public are concerned.

The Perak Chiefs, ex-Sultan Abdullah, the Laxamana, the Shahbandar, and the Muntri of Laroot took their departure for the island of Mahe—one of the Seychelles group in the Indian Ocean. They left in the Cotherstone, Captain Blanche, a barque bound for Seychelles and Mauritius, and were accompanied by a guard of one inspector and five police peons. Very little interest was taken in the chiefs here either by their Malay or Arab friends, and probably, it is the best that could have been done to send them 3,000 miles away. The four chiefs are accompanied by about fifty followers, composed of a few male servants, but chiefly women and children. An old Straits Resident who predicted exactly what took place at Perak before Mr. Birch's murder considers the guard on board rather small, but the authorities are probably the best judges, and certainly the expatriated noblemen (if we may call them such) appeared somewhat pleased with the change from prison walls to the deck of the ship. All arms were removed from them, and all precautions possible were taken on board for their comfort and the general safety of the ship.

The German brig Altha has come in from the wreck of the Spanish steamer Gloria with about $40,000 worth of cargo. It is reported that Captain Habekost of the Altha was aware of the position of the Gloria wreck, and went out with a view of doing some salvage on his own account. The result of his voyage is likely to feather the nests of the legal gentlemen of the place, and may open up some curious points. An Admiralty suit has already been commenced to settle salvage and other matters generally.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

TIENTSIN.—Business in imports had been quieter.

HANKOW.—Since the last advices no sales of Manufactured Goods had been reported. In Lead the business of the fortnight had been very small, and the market closed weak at Tls. 5.70 to 5.80 per picul. Quicksilver was nominally quoted Tls. 47 to 48 per picul. Tin: The value of "Foong Hing" chop was Tls. 17 to 18 per picul, with nothing doing.

SHANGHAI.—There had been somewhat less doing. The unsettled weathef and advices of inactivity at the Northern Ports had caused business to be greatly restricted.

FOOCHOW.—There had been a small demand for Manchester Manufactures, and the following sales are reported. T-Cloths, 200 pieces at $2.30 per piece for 8 lb. Mexicans; 150 pieces at $1.71 per piece for 7 lb. Lead: The market had shown increased activity at previous currencies; the stock in foreigners' hands was estimated at 3,400 pigs. Sales reported are: 3,073 pigs at $8.75 per picul against Tea; 150 pigs at $8.25 per picul cash.

HONG KONG.—The market had been firm during the interval, with a moderate amount of business doing. Cotton Yarns: 16-24s were nominally $2 per bale lower all round, in consequence of the only sale reported, one of 50 bales being made at $93, but there had been no demand to test prices. 28-32s had been in little inquiry, but offers on the basis of a sale of "Horse and Jockey" at $94 had not been accepted; 38-42s were neglected. Grey Shirtings: Common qualities of 7 lbs. had met with a fair demand, and the market for this weight was rather firmer, as also for 8¼ lbs. Heavy weights were steady. White Shirtings were from five to ten cents lower, with the exception of one special chop. T-Cloths: Ordinary 6 and 7 lbs. were unchanged in value. The former weight attracted some attention, but the latter was quiet. The better makes of 7 lbs. Mexicans were not wanted, and were 2 cents lower; common qualities were firm; 8 lbs. had been in good request, and stocks had been reduced by transhipments to Shanghai. Drills: There had been a better demand, butquotations had, notwithstanding, receded. Fancy Cottons: Quotations showed little change, and but few transactions are recorded. Woollens had been fairly steady, with a moderate business. Long Ells showed an advance of 20 cents. Iron: The market for this metal was quiet; the demand for Nail Rod had subsided; Hoop continued depressed, and Bar was not in much request. Lead: Small demand, and lower price. Steel: Weaker. Quicksilver: The market was weak, in consequence of rumours amongst natives of heavy shipments per Gaelic.

CANTON.—Lead: There had been little demand, and prices had further declined; quotations were $8.00 to 8.10 per picul for mixed brands, and $8.10 to 8.15 per picul for Hole Chop and WB. Sales 600 piculs; stock 1,200 piculs. Quicksilver had declined to $61½ to 62 per picul.

MANILA.—Wet weather had prevailed during the interval without cessation, and had greatly interfered with business. Values generally, although nominally unchanged, inclined downwards. The stocks of Plain Staples showed a considerable increase upon those held at the corresponding date last year, except as regards Grey Twills and White Jacconets. There were large stocks of Printed Goods in second hands.

PENANG.—No business of any importance had transpired during the fortnight; the demand generally had been limited, and prices were weak.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

HANKOW.—Second crop Yung-low-tungs commenced arriving on the 19th June, and were followed soon after by Won-kais and Nip-ka-szes. A fair business transpired at Tls. 14.5.0 to 17.5.0 for Yung-low-tungs, Tls. 13.2.5 to 15.0.0 for Nip-ka-szes, and Tls. 15 to 17 for Hon-kais. Sung-Yeong arrived about a week later and found buyers at Tls. 16.5.0 to 19.0.0. Cheong-sow-kais were not shown until the 2nd July, and there had been very eager competition for the first crops at about Tls. 18.5.0 per picul. The market closed about Tls. 1 to 2 higher, and teamen were coming out without loss on some chops and making a tael per picul profit on others. In quality the second crop was below the average; in quantity, as regards what had been picked, it was a full one, but as there had been so many failures amongst Teamen the buying up-country had so far been small, and a part of the crop would be delayed until the country people found the means to send it down on their own account, as they did with a large part of the latter portion of the first crop. The weather had been favourable for the third crop, and the advance in prices was likely to induce a large picking. The first crop closed about four millions in excess of last year.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A steady daily business had been transacted at prices which showed no material change from last quotations. Teas for price had been in demand, and although quotations were unaltered, many settlements had been fully one tael a picul worse in value than earlier purchases. Medium Teas had been very irregular, but on the average were lower. Fine and finest Teas were becoming scarce. Second crop Teas had arrived in moderate quantity, but business in them was checked by the prices asked being above buyers' ideas. Settlements for the fortnight, 33,857 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 3,635 chests; total 37,492 chests. Stock, 25,960 chests. Quotations:—Hohow and Tung-mo-kwan, Tls. 15½ to 40; Oonam and Oonfa, Tls. 11⅜ to 23; Ningchow, Tls. 17½ to 43; Oopack, Tls. 15½ to 23. Green: A fair demand continued without change in quotations. A few chops of Taiping and Hoochow kinds were on the market, but no offers were being made for them. Fychows were expected in a few days, and Tienkais in about a fortnight from date. Settlements are:—Pingsuey, 9,946 half-chts. at Tls. 18.00 to 42.00 per picul. Stock: Country Tea, 1,590 half-chts.; Pingsuey, 18,000; total 19,590 half-chests.

FOOCHOW.—Congous: Settlements during the interval had given a daily average of 6,500 chests. Prices of all grades below fine had been weak, and common to medium were quoted down one tael. The receipts had consisted entirely of second-crop leaf, and they were pronounced about equal in quality to last season's second crop. The supply of first-crop Congou was estimated at 340,000 chests, against 390,000 chests last season. Souchongs continued to meet with fairly ready sale, prices showing irregularity. Ooloongs: Prices were slightly easier. Scented Teas: Prices had had a downward tendency, latest purchases showing a drop of 2 to 3 Tls. in fine grades of Scented Orange Pekoe from the figures ruling on the 25th June.

AMOY.—But little had been done since last English mail. Settlements during the fortnight had been:—Formosa Oolongs, 2,234 half-chests; Amoy Oolongs, 6,937 half-chests; Amoy Congous, 10,722 half-chests.

CANTON.—Congous: There had been a good demand for all kinds, and a fair amount of business is reported at full prices. At Macao settlements had consisted of low common Teas principally, which had found buyers at Tls. 11 to 13. Scented Teas: There had been only a moderate business passing in these kinds, and the market closed quiet, with a tendency to lower prices. The settlements were mostly made during the first week of the fortnight, and showed no change from former quotations. Later arrivals of the second crop showed no improvement in quality, but although during the closing week there had been little inquiry for Scented Teas, the teamen continued to ask very full prices. Settlements are reported as follows:—Congou, 15,000 boxes at Tls. 13 to 26; Scented Caper, 12,000 boxes at Tls. 15 to 30; Scented Orange Pekoe, 4,000 boxes at Tls. 15 to 28.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—The new season's silk market was opened last week by the purchase of Buffalo chop No. 2, Beautiful Woman No. 2, Dancing Bear No. 2, and Double Phœnix No. 2 Tsatlees, at Tls. 415 to 420, and S.S.S.; Dollar chop at Tls. 390, amounting in all to only 95 bales; the prices paid are some Tls. 80 per picul over last year's opening rates, and seem generally considered very full ones. Business has been almost entirely confined to one firm, and they have further increased their interest for the outgoing steamer to the extent of some 200 bales in addition, comprising Common to No. 4½ Tsatlees at Tls. 335 to 390, a portion of which consists of old silk. About 60 piculs of coarse yellow silk, a small parcel of 9 × 12 Moss at Tls. 260, and 40 bales or so of best re-reeled Hainings (old cargo) at Tls. 445 to 480, complete the settlements for the mail. Natives have begun to speculate, and a few bales of Yakee chop (last season's silk) have changed hands at Tls. 452½ for No. 3, and some market chop No. 2 Kahings at the reported price of Tls. 410 per picul. More activity is being shown up-country, where prices seem about on a level with Shanghai rates; arrivals at this port to date are 3,500 bales, against 25,500 bales at the same date last year, 31,000 in 1875, and 23,000 in 1874; export of new silk is confined to 123 bales, against 6,315 bales in 1876, 13,375 in 1875, and 9,161 in 1874, and although it is noticeable that Continental buyers in particular are holding off, there has been no marked weakness apparent as yet amongst the native holders. Stocks are about 3,000 bales of new silk and nearly 7,000 of old. Statistics for the present season as compared with previous years may prove more interesting than usual.

CANTON.—Buyers had not shown any desire to make settlements at the prices asked by holders, and only 100 bales Tsatlee are reported settled during the fortnight. Stocks were large, and the third crop promised to give a very good yield; still in the absence of any export demand, and only a small inquiry for native consumption, prices in the country had advanced, and holders showed no willingness to make sales except at advanced quotations. The demand for Rereels had fallen off and no contracts are reported.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HONG KONG.—There was no vessel on the berth loading Camphor for a home port, and with less inquiry the value of the article had declined; Formosa was quoted $17.50 to 18, and Japan $20 to 20.50 per picul. Gamboge was scarce, and nominally unchanged in value. Vermilion was quoted $32 per case. At Macao more business had been done, and stocks of Drugs were smaller. Aniseed Oil had been quitted at $180 per picul, which was the current quotation. Of Cassia Oil, 70 to 80 piculs had been placed at $93.50 to 94, and the supply of 90 piculs was held for the same price. No Aniseed Stars were offering, and the nominal value was $24.50.

CANTON.—The only transaction of any importance during the fortnight had been a sale of 1,500 piculs Cassia, which is destined for the American and Indian markets. Owing to increasing stocks, and the absence of demand for Europe, prices were quoted somewhat lower.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar has declined, but Hemp and Coffee are steady. Tonnage has been coming in freely and rates are again lower. Exchange has fallen considerably, owing to bad weather and a limited supply of bills. Sugar: Late telegrams are very unfavourable for the article, and there are no buyers at over $5.50 per picul for superior, and $6 per picul for extra. Dealers, however, have so far refused to sell at these prices, but, if buyers hold off, we think they will soon have to give way, as present cost here seems to be much in excess of limits held. The exports of Sugar to date are much larger than those to same period of last year, and as the present crop will be rather less than the previous one, we estimate unsold stocks at something like 250,000 piculs only. Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight have only amounted to 2,500 piculs, half of which was taken at $3.68¾ per picul and the balance at $3.81¼ per picul. The crop is now very nearly exhausted, and all that remains will probably be eagerly taken up to ballast vessels. Ilo Ilo and Cebu show that although both markets had quieted down somewhat prices were still kept up at far too high a range. Stocks, however, have now been run down to a pretty low point, and we hardly look for any material decline. Hemp: Owing to dull advices from home the price dropped to $5.50 per picul (£22 10s. 9d.), at which a few parcels were picked up, but it almost immediately afterwards rallied, and now there are buyers, but no sellers, at $5.75 per picul (£23 8s. 10s.). Even at $6 per picul (£24 6s. 10d.) very little could be obtained, and stocks are apparently going to be kept very low, owing to the abundance of tonnage. The Hemp growers, who up till lately had been complaining of want of rain, are now lamenting that they are getting too much of it, but, up to the present, we see more reason to dread inferior quality than short supplies. In course of shipment there are now 19,000 bales going forward to Great Britain, and 19,500 bales to the United States. Stocks after deducting requirements for vessels in port, we estimate, here and in Cebu, at 1,571 bales. Coffee: Sales have been made during the fortnight at from $20.75 to $21 per picul (£77 10s. to £78 8s. 1d.), and the article is now pretty steady at the latter figure, but the demand is limited.

PENANG.—A fair business had been done in Tin, principally for China, and a limited business in Pepper. Tin: There had been no purchases for Europe, demand had been chiefly for China, transactions for India being limited. After last mail, purchases were made at $18.95 to $19, but at close the price had declined to $18.85. Black Pepper: There was some inquiry for China and England after last mail, but transactions were limited for want of supplies. Purchases amounted to 5,000 piculs—at $7.32½ to $7.10 for Atchin, and $7.40 for West Coast. Closing quotations were $7.15 for Atchin and $7.30 for West Coast. Stock: 3,100 piculs Atchin and 400 piculs West Coast. White Pepper: Small purchases at $12.75. Sugar: Penang No. 1 White in moderate demand at $7.30. No. 2 held for $5.30—no purchasers. A small quantity of Basket Sugar purchased at $3.80.

CHINESE IN QUEENSLAND.

The Daily News says:—At the present moment the colony of Queensland is being made the theatre of a social experiment of singular interest. Chinese are still pouring into the colony by thousands; and as they pay for their own passage, it is impossible that they can be kept out except by the passing of exceptional laws. It is quite possible that the local Parliament might resort to extreme measures, but a restrictive policy could not be carried out until it had first received the sanction of the Imperial Government. At a time when we are claiming for British subjects the right of free passage through the Chinese Empire, it would perhaps be difficult to make the Court of Peking admit that we were quite logical in excluding Chinese subjects from a British colony; and, therefore, before the Royal Assent could with propriety be given to legislation of this kind, it would require very careful investigation at the hands of the law officers of the Crown. If without very strong evidence of the necessity of such a step the ports of Queensland were to be closed against the Chinese, it would not be difficult to imagine the disagreeable sort of questions which it would be in the power of the Chinese Ambassadors to address to Lord Derby. There is another view of the subject which will naturally occur to those who have paid any attention to the peculiar circumstances of Queensland. For several years past it has been alleged that the coast lands of the colony could only be cultivated by tropical labour; and on this ground a very questionable traffic in Polynesians has been sanctioned by the Queensland Parliament, and also by the Home Government. Many islands have been denuded of their male population in order that the planters might be enabled to enjoy a sufficient supply of servile labour; and in spite of Government supervision and of great vigilance on the part of missionaries and others, it is generally admitted that the so-called "immigration" still leads to grave abuses. A considerable party in the colony have always been hostile to the traffic; and it is therefore not surprising that the present Colonial Government should propose not only to restrict the area in which the South Sea Islanders may henceforth be employed to the coast lands, but also to bring the entire system gradually to a termination. But if Queensland is really in need of tropical labour, why do not the planters—instead of employing "recruiters" to scour the South Seas for "blackbirds"—give John Chinaman a chance? He is industrious, patient, plodding, and capable of fidelity. Moreover, his labour is cheap, and he is anxious to establish himself in Queensland. Under fair and equitable conditions the Chinese might really solve the labour difficulty in the tropical parts of the Antipodes.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—NEUTRALITY OF COAL SHIPS.—It is notified in the Gazette that, with the view of obviating any interruption in the supply of coal for the use of steamers navigating the Suez Canal, the Russian Consul-General in London has been authorised by his Government to grant to owners and masters of vessels clearing from any port in the United Kingdom with coals for Port Said, certificates of protection against seizure by Russian cruisers, on production of shipping documents or other evidence showing that the coal is destined for commercial use. If London be the port of departure of the vessel, the application may be made direct to the Consul-General; in all other cases it may be made through the Consular Agent on the spot, who will transmit the same to the Consul-General.

RICE CULTIVATION IN CEYLON.—Mr. T. B. Potter gave notice, just before the close of the session, of a motion which he will submit to Parliament next year. The terms of it are as follows:—"To call the attention of the House to the question of the rice tax in Ceylon, to the mode of levying that tax by revenue farming, and to the fact that no article of production of the soil is interfered with and taxed in that island with the exception of cereals, whereby a scarcity of food is caused where abundance might prevail and used to prevail, and the difficulties of scarcity and famine are increased in Southern India, whence Ceylon is now obliged to obtain the supply which is not permitted to be grown at home."

HAMBURG, AUG. 21.

The past week has been a very quiet one, and very little worth mentioning has occurred. In the country the harvest is going on with all speed, but the hopes of the farmers for a good and plentiful crop have been very much disappointed by the still prevailing heavy rainfall. Much grain especially has been brought in only half dry, and a great deal has been destroped in the fields before it could be cut. The potato-disease also has attained fearful dimensions, and unless very dry weather prevails next month hardly one-half of the crop will be saved.

Our Emperor is now residing at Babelsburg, near Berlin, and is taking a rest in preparation for the great autumn military manœuvres next month. The Imperial Chancellor, who has been recently staying at Varzin, his estate in the province of Tommern, is said to be ordered by his physicians to take a sojourn at the seaside, and there is a rumour that the prince intends to select an English watering-place. The Prince arrived on Monday last in Berlin from Varzin, it is stated with the intention of proceeding to Gastein in Austria, and subsequently to Vienna, in order to confer with Count Andrassy upon the Eastern Question. Whether this report is correct the next few days will show.

The negotiations concerning the commercial treaty between Germany and Austro-Hungary are going on satisfacterily, and the only point of divergence is said to be the moderation of the Austrian iron duties, to which some amount of opposition is manifested.

The province of Sleswick-Holstein has been visited by fearful thunderstorms, which, being accompanied by tremendous showers of hail and rain, and hurricane-like winds, have caused terrible devastation. The little town of Neumuenster was visited by a waterspout, which, passing over several flourishing villages in the vicinity, carried away roofs, trees, windmills, &c., and destroyed thousands of sheaves of grain in the fields. On the other side of the river the province of Hanover has also suffered severely, and many villages are almost totally ruined. This visitation has of course very much diminished the expectations of a plentiful harvest.

Some nights ago this city, especially the large suburb of St. Pauli, was alarmed by signals of fire. The distillery owned by Mr. Nagel at Steinwaerder (a little island in the river) had caught fire, and the flames lighted the horizon for many miles round, but by the energetic exertions of the firemen the fire was confined to the engine-house, which burnt down to the ground. This distillery, which exports largely in all directions, especially to India and China, was some years ago the scene of a great fire, when the whole establishment was destroyed. Another fire broke out two nights ago at Altona. The store houses upon the quays at Neumuehlen, wooden buildings, were burnt, and the quay is at present without accommodation for stowing cargoes. At the time of the fire there was fortunately nothing in the sheds except empty petroleum barrels.

The Nordd. Regatta Verein (North German Regatta Union) has been favoured by the Crown Princes of Germany, Princess Victoria of England accepting its patronage. It is to be hoped that the new Protectorate will lead to a more frequent participation of English sportsmen in the races of this union than has hitherto been the case.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The tendency of our Produce markets has not undergone any change during the past week, as no hope of a speedy finishment of the Russo-Turkish War is longer entertained, and the prevailing demand is only for actual consumptive requirements. Money remains very abundant.

COFFEE.—No particular change in our market has taken place during the week; holders are firmly maintaining their quotations, the demand having been sufficient to cause pretty considerable transactions. Quotations for Java quality are unchanged at m.1.05 to 1.50 per lb.

SUGAR.—No first-hand parcels have changed owners. Quotations are per 100 lbs. :—Manila brown, clayed, m.28½ to 30; do. unclayed, m.22½ to 24; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 30; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia, white, m.34 to 35; do. yellow and grey, m.31 to 33; do. brown, m.22½ to 29½; Siam, Benares, and China, white, m.31½ to 34½; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.24 to 35; China, brown and yellow, m.22 to 32.

RICE.—For dressed quality the demand remains pretty lively, and the reserve of holders points to an advance in prices. No transactions in raw quality have transpired.

TEA.—Congou is quiet; of superfine Souchong new season, 492/8 boxes and 300/16 boxes have changed owners in first hand parcels.

COTTON.—The demand is of no importance, and transactions have only taken place in American provenience.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are quiet, prime quality being valued at m.5.50 to 6; Mace, m.4.50 to 4.70; Ginger, Bengal flat, m.26 to 26½; Cochin quiet, at m.63 to 86; Cloves maintain their value, Zanzibar at m.135 to 136; Amboina, are wanting; Pepper quiet, Singapore quality m.37½ to 38, Penang m.35 to 36, White m.66 to 80.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

The past week has been a very agitated one, the quotations of some bonds have reached a higher point, higher than at any time during the last six months. People here are doubtful whether this speculation a la hausse can be a healthy one, and are fearing a relapse. The current prices of the principal stocks are as follow :—

SHIPPING.

Arrivals and departures have been pretty numerous during the last fortnight, but still the shipping trade during this period has been of no great importance, as most of the vessels coming and going were either from European ports or were coasters, and many of them in ballast. Of arrivals from the Far East I have to report the Elise, Schmidt, from the South-sea Islands; Feronia, ss., Schultz, from China via Singapore; Sei, Valle, from Akyab; Dorothea, Melchertsen, from Rangoon; of departures: the Egeria, s.s., Paulsen, to China via Penang, &c., and the Leechmere, s.s., Cunningham, to Singapore, from whence she will proceed to the Amoor. At Bremen there have arrived the Richard, Hettmeyer, from Rangoon; Thuellin, Livingstone, from Bombay; Andreas Rickmers, Budelmann, from Rangoon via St. Thomas, where she had put in leaky. The departure from Bremen has been the English barque Fluellin, for Bombay. In vessels on the berth no alteration has taken place, but cargo is still scarce, and vessels find it difficult to fill up.

With regard to the loss of the Denderah, s.s., which vessel stranded some time ago in the vicinity of the Straits of Magellan, special advices have been received. It appears that the steamer struck in the Sarmiento Channel, at Point Delgada, some 200 feet from the shore, at a spot where the newest and best charts indicate hundreds of fathoms of water, so that the captain is not at all to be blamed for neglect of duty. The steamer, after a very short time, sunk in three fathoms of water, and very probably will be saved. The Saxonia, s.s., the same which ran ashore on Heligoland some time ago, but afterwards was got off again by the aid of a Liverpool salvage steamer, was a few days since brought to public auction on account of the underwriters. Notwithstanding the vessel being offered at the low figure of m. 180,000, no bid was made, and the sale in consequence was not effected.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, AUG. 22.

The King visits to-day the International Exhibition—which, I fear, will prove financially a monetary failure—and will return in the afternoon to the Hague, where he will reside till October, in the course of which month he starts for the Pyrenees. I am glad to state that the rumours about his residing in Paris have been very much exaggerated. It is quite true that he purchased last year a hotel, in the Avenue du Roi de Rome, which is now furnished, and where he will next year spend some months. Some of the works of art which were transported to the French capital from his Majesty's country-seat "het Loo" are destined to illustrate the Dutch section of the Exhibition which will be opened at Paris in 1878.

Politics have come quite to a standstill. It is not known when the Minister of the Home Department will answer the Section report upon the Lower Class Instruction Bill. It is known that the reply is quite ready, but Mr. Heemskirk is in no hurry. It is tolerably certain that it will not appear till after the discussions on the address in reply to the Royal Speech opening the Chambers, which perhaps will lead to a Ministerial crisis. Thus the rumours run on the Liberal side. The Conservative papers, however, assure us that Mr. Kappeyne is by no means disposed to form a Cabinet, if even he should be charged with the task. I need not add that these on-dits must only be accepted cum grano salis. Mr. Kappeyne is too prudent and experienced a man to wish to anticipate the future. In the meanwhile it is quite certain that his task in keeping office will be a very difficult one. The Budget Speech, which will be delivered by the Minister of the Financial Department a few days after the opening of Parliament, will inform us whether a loan is to be brought forward for home or for Java. It is stated that it is the intention of the Cabinet to raise a loan for the colonies, in order to provide the money required for necessary public works. The "favourable balances" have found their way to Atjeh. What we now hear about this very costly war is very little more than nothing. Our Government sends out month after month more troops, but it seems that we do not possess the force sufficient to make an end to this wretched struggle. Mr. C. Hartsen, ex-member of the First Chamber of the States General, has published in the Amsterdamsche Courant a sharp criticism upon the policy of the Liberals in our East India Colonies. He advocates, contrary to the system of Mr. N. G. Pierson, that the future of the Netherlands depends upon our maintaining that part of the culture-system which still exists.

Mr. Heemskerk arrived yesterday at the Hague from his trip to Baden-Baden. The rumours that his voyage would have a political significance is thus shown to be false.

On September 3 a conference will be opened at the Hague in order to devise some means to stop the pulmonary disease which has prevailed amongst our cattle for several years past.

Some days ago we lost a national treasure. The picture gallery of Mrs. Van Loon was sold to Baron Rothschild, of Paris, for a sum of one and a half million of guilders.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The affairs on our markets for Colonial Produce remained most calm. There was a total absence of speculation, and only the secondhand bought that was wanted. The Money Market is plentifully supplied, and every sum against security can be provided.

COFFEE.—The market looked somewhat duller the last few days, though all what was offered of private imports was sold at former prices. The public sale which will be held to-day by the Trading Company will have most certainly a good result, because the qualities are much desired.

TEA.—A few small lots found buyers. Particulars did, however, not transpire. The trade is inspecting the parcels which will be offered for sale on the 29th and 30th inst. They consist of 299/4, 5,809/12, and 224/16 chests China, and 490/4, 2,031/12 chests ditto.

RAW SUGAR.—The article looks most unhealthy. It would be necessary to offer at f.4½ under July prices to make it possible to sell. Refined is most dull.

TOBACCO.—Without transactions. The imports are considerable, so that the stock now includes 49,334 bs. Java, 4,220 bs. Sumatra, 3,633 bs. Manila, and 3,000 bs. East Indian.

COTTON.—Though some demand for export prevails the market is very calm, and there are no transactions to report.

SPICES firm, but without business. Only 26 casks and 36 chests Nutmegs, were sold, and 9 casks 11 chests Mace. The quotation is as follows: Nutmegs No. 1, c.170 to 225; No. 2, c.135 to 170; Cloves c.95 to 105; Mace D, c.120 to 140; Pepper is held too high in price to operate.

RICE is very healthy, and a good business was done in cargoes, Rangoon and Bassein. In cleaned sorts a regular business took place, and several lots Java and Japan changed hands at higher prices.

RATTANS.—Sold were 160 piculs ex Veritas, and 300 piculs ex Noach.

GUM DAMAR.—125 chests ex Koningder Nederlanden were sold.

INDIGO met with a good demand, especially for the qualities under 400 cents. The better sorts could only be realised at a reduction. The stock is very considerable, and includes about 4,000 chests.

TIN looks very dull. There is no transaction to report. The nominal quotation is for Banca f.40¼, for Billiton f.38¼.

HIDES.—About 5,000 pieces Buffalo were sold by private tender. No particulars transpired.

ARRACK.—50 cases Batavia changed hands.

The London & China Telegraph.

LONDON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1877.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

Some curious and interesting facts are given by one of the China papers with reference to the negotiations which have been going on at Peking between the German Minister and the Chinese Government in connection with the Lekin question as raised by the Chefoo Convention. It would appear that matters went much further than has been hitherto generally known of, should the present intelligence be reliable. According to it, at one stage of the discussions the German Minister was actually on the eve of taking his departure from Peking. The Tientsin correspondent of one of the Shanghai papers gives some very interesting particulars concerning the working of the line of telegraph established between the Arsenal and Li-Hung-chang's Yamen—a distance of some six miles. It appears that no opposition whatever was offered to the erection of the wire, and to taking it across the roofs of the houses in Tientsin—a proof apparently that the Chinese are not disposed to raise Fung Shui difficulties, with regard to such works when, as is the case in the present instance, the officials themselves are interested in their being completed. It is stated that this is probably only the commencement of a general system of telegraphy in the provinces under Li-Hung-Chang's Government. A very severe gale has taken place at Shanghai, doing considerable damage to property, both afloat and ashore, and it is also feared causing much loss of life among the boating population. The report from Dr. Nevius of his proceedings for the relief of the sufferers from famine in Shantung has been published. It is considered a most gratifying record of invaluable aid rendered at a very critical moment. The result is that many thousands of lives have been saved, and large tracts of country are bearing crops where there would have been starvation and waste but for the money so opportunely subscribed, and which Dr. Nevius and others so judiciously distributed. It is almost inconceivable how so small a sum as ten cash a day can have been instrumental in producing such results. But though the rain has insured good crops where the people were able to plant the land, it is painful to hear that many have been obliged to sell everything, and are still destitute. From Canton the latest accounts indicated that the populace were to some extent recovering from the recent severe floods. Some alarm was created by an exaggerated report respecting the appearance of cholera at Amoy. It was not without some foundation, but Mr. Glover, the Commissioner of Customs at that port, at once instituted inquiries, and in reply was informed that up to the 3rd July there had been one death among foreigners, and it was reported that some thirty natives were dying daily. Similar reports gained currency in Shanghai, but careful inquiries went to show that they also were much exaggerated, and that there was no reason for any special anxiety on the part of foreign residents in the Settlements. A distinct shock of an earthquake was felt at Foochow on the 28th June. A somewhat important order has been issued by the Admiral in command of Her Majesty's Squadron in China and Japan to the effect, namely, that Her Majesty's ships are not in future to visit non-treaty ports in Japan, except in cases of emergency, or when acting under special orders. It is reported that the difficulty between Spain and China in reference to the Soverina question has been settled, the Chinese Government paying an indemnity of several thousands of dollars to the relatives of the crew of that unfortunate vessel. The Hong Kong papers give the particulars of the loss of the Russian ship Rhutinas.

The news from Japan, brought by the present mail, has been anticipated via America.

From the Straits Settlements the news is without interest. The Perak chiefs whose deportation was ordered by our Government have left for the Island of Mahe, one of the Seychelles group, in the barque Cotherstone, accompanied by a guard. A considerable quantity of salvage has been recovered from the wreck of the steamer Gloria.

THE BLUE-BOOK ON THE CHEFOO CONVENTION.

OF much historical interest of no practical value, the long expected report of the Hon. M. GROSVENOR on the investigation into the murder of the late Mr. MARGARY has been at last published, in conjunction with the scarcely less long expected memorandum from Sir THOS. WADE, on the Chefoo Convention. The former fully confirms the conclusion very generally arrived at from the fact that the report was so long withheld that no satisfactory result had been obtained, and the latter, though undoubtedly a document of much weight, does not elucidate the Convention in the manner anticipated, but is rather a résumé of the whole of the negotiations which led to its conclusion, supplemented by special notes upon particular points. It is needless to say with regard to the MARGARY murder that the facts set forth in the larger portion of the despatches are already familiar to the public; but the report from the Hon. Mr. GROSVENOR himself is certainly a very able document, albeit it shows that the Chinese Government have done literally nothing towards hunting out and punishing the guilty parties. The state of affairs set forth pretty well explains the eagerness of the Chinese Authorities to carry out their part of the Convention even before it was ratified; as it was clear that they must find themselves in a more than questionable position should it become necessary to reopen the matter. After the long delay that has taken place, however, this is extremely unlikely, and this portion of the subject may be considered so far a thing of the past. With respect to Sir T. WADE'S memorandum, we cannot but express surprise that after pronouncing in a despatch dated Oct. 19, 1876, the Convention to be "highly satisfactory," and calling upon Sir THOS. WADE to return to England to give explanations as to the details, Lord DERBY should nevertheless have required the memorandum under notice, which at the present stage of matters cannot be regarded otherwise than as a great waste of mental power, the calling for which was inflicting a hardship and injustice on Sir THOS. WADE. Anyone who has read the despatches of 1875 will appreciate what the labour of going over the same ground again must have been, and the difficulties of writing out all his reasons. Nor can it be seen that any practical end has been gained by this needless expenditure of time and trouble. At the same time there are many points upon which the views set forth in the memorandum are of value, as, for example, his expressing a definite opinion against any interpretation of the Treaty which would do away with extra-territoriality; but it is nevertheless impossible not to feel that three parts of the observations made are of little practical value after so long a time has elapsed.

THE REBELLION IN JAPAN.

ALTHOUGH it would be too much to expect that the rebellion in Japan will be entirely put down, for at all events some little time to come, there are signs that the Government have at last succeeded in making their position sufficiently strong to be able to take a strong stand against the insurgents. Even those who have, and not without reason, shown themselves little disposed to believe in the Government reports of success, were speaking hopefully at the date of the last mail's advices. A junction had been effected of the Government armies, and confident hopes were entertained of speedily suppressing SAIGO'S rebellion and then diverting sufficient troops to overawe the malcontents in the Province of Toga. So far there seem to be grounds for hope that the movements are progressing satisfactorily, and that the Government will at last be able to make some definite headway against the rebels and redeem the promise so long ago made of speedily restoring order. Every well-wisher of Japan must desire to see an end to the present state of affairs, as nothing can tend more to impoverish and injure a nation than a protracted civil war. The time, however, which it has taken the Japanese Government even to put itself in a position to commence operations likely to prove successful shows the extreme folly of their having represented the outbreak as of a merely trivial character. The truth was bound to come out, and the result of misrepresenting matters has been to convey a very disparaging idea, first of the strength, and next of the reliability of the Japanese Government. It is to be hoped, however, that at last some headway is being made, and that, should the movements last reported prove successful, the Japanese Government will use their success with moderation, show as much clemency as is possible to the insurgents, and set about instituting the reforms which are needed and the absence of which has been to a great degree the cause of the outbreak. There seems, we are glad to note, to be room to hope that wise counsels will prevail, as it is stated that if the Government succeed in its present efforts to put the rebellion down, it is its intention to effect various administrative reforms, among which is the convocation of a semi-Representative Assembly.

Since the above was in type a telegram has been received from an independent quarter, dated Yokohama, Aug. 22, that the Government troops had been completely victorious, and that the Civil War is now virtually at an end. The rice crops are abundant.

THE LATE SULTAN OF JOHORE.

SOME discussion has taken place in the Singapore papers with reference to the successor to the late Sultan of Johore whose funeral took place on the 8th July last. It appears that there are two rival claimants, the eldest son and the youngest; that the former is of the blood Royal on both sides, the latter of blood Royal only on one side. It appears difficult, therefore, to understand precisely upon what grounds the Malay ideas of succession are based, though of course, as rules of succession in Asiatic countries are very different from those with which we are familiar in Europe, there may possibly be juster reasons for the claim of the youngest son than we can understand without further explanation. But the curious part of the matter is, that while the members of the family and their friends are disputing as to who shall succeed, it appears very probable that there will be nothing to succeed to, as by the Treaty of 1855 the late Sultan made over all claim to the sovereignty to the Tumongong of Johore, and has since been reigning only nominally and by courtesy. The complication which has arisen is thus of a somewhat intricate description, and it is to be hoped that it may ultimately be settled to the satisfaction of all parties. One point ought, however, to be considered and decided upon at once. It is said that the Government intend to discontinue the pension granted to the late Sultan, and it is feared this would cause much discontent among the Malays. It would probably be a somewhat harsh measure to the successors in the family, and the recommendation which is made by one of the Singapore papers to the Government to consider well before coming to a conclusion is sound. The case is one which ought to be considered upon broad and equitable principles, and any saving made by the discontinuance of the pension would be dearly effected if it give cause to the natives to consider they have been treated unjustly, or, in such a case, even inconsiderately.

THE remarks which are made elsewhere by a correspondent with reference to the new ports are worthy of attention. They show that, although, as we noticed at the time, as probable, merchants in China are not at the present day prepared to rush to new ports and to run such risks as were incurred in 1860, the ports are likely to become gradually developed, and will tend to further our trade generally with China. It is sincerely to be regretted that just at the time when an opportunity is afforded of obtaining new markets for our manufactures, the complaints with reference to the inferior quality of Manchester goods should be more wide spread than ever. It is certainly astonishing that the trade here persistently turn a deaf ear to the warnings which are given to it of the likelihood of its destroying its business by the present system of over-sising and artificially weighting the goods.

WE understand that no decision has been arrived at in regard to the successor to Sir WALTER MEDHURST as Consul at Shanghai, or that of Judge HORNBY. The amended Order in Council regulating the Courts of China and Japan has not been published. We regret to hear that Mr. HARVEY, who was lately appointed to the charge of the Consulate at the new port of Pakhoi, has, through ill health, been obliged to obtain leave to return to England.

THE case of DE BUSSCHE v. ALT has been set down for appeal, but it will probably be some time before it will come on for hearing.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Assistant Chinese Envoy Lieu Ta Jen, accompanied by Mr. F. Lieu, Attaché, visited Stowmarket on the 21st, and inspected the works of the Patent Safety Gun Cotton Company (Limited). A number of interesting experiments were made. A box filled with a number of slabs of wet gun cotton was placed upon a fire to prove that there is no danger of explosion in ordinary cases of accident. The box containing the gun cotton was consumed, and the blocks of cotton as they were dried were seen to smoulder, but there was nothing approaching a blaze. A charge of dry gun cotton was ignited on a slab of wet cotton and burnt without injuring the wet cotton, and next a service detonator was fired upon the same slab of wet cotton without doing any damage. When a dry charge and a detonator were combined the whole exploded with a loud report. Several other experiments followed, the whole closing with the explosion of a small torpedo in the neighbouring river. A dinner followed, at which "The Health of his Excellency Lieu Ta Jen" was drunk. His Excellency in responding said while he admired the experiments which had taken place he hoped gun cotton would not have to be used for war, but for mining purposes and engineering works.

FIRE INSURANCE IN JAPAN.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I have just seen, in your issue of Feb. 19, the letter of your correspondent "Fire," referring to the conflagration at Yedo on 29th November last, and, although so long a time has elapsed, I venture to ask you to afford me space for these few remarks, inasmuch as the impression sought to be conveyed by "Fire" is totally at variance with the facts, and betrays an absolute want of knowledge on his part of the way in which insurance business is conducted in Japan. Your correspondent says, "I am of opinion that property assured by natives is a very bad risk, and should not be taken except under some exceptional circumstances." Now, as the "I am of opinion" of the above presumes a knowledge of the subject, none would read the sentence without concluding that such risks were not only accepted, but accepted regularly, and, in fact, formed a regular and extensive part of the business, while, in actual truth, the very opposite of this is the case, and native risks are not entertained, except under very exceptional circumstances indeed. In an experience of some years, I have not known a single case in which such a risk has been taken by an insurance agent, although a little business has been done for Government; and as I am satisfied that your correspondent knows no office with such insurances on their books, may I ask why he advances an "opinion" so calculated to mislead. Mere ignorance of a subject, although not a thing to be proud of, is pardonable; but ignorance, put forward under an assumption of authority and superior knowledge, deserves the severest reprobation.—I am, &c.,

Yokohama, July 10, 1877. WATER.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS ASSOCIATION.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice with some surprise the remarks which are made by a correspondent signing himself "Observer" in your paper of the 11th June, with reference to the Straits Settlement Association; and as I think those remarks are eminently calculated to mislead the public at home with respect to the status and object of the body above-named, I trust you will also give insertion to the true version of the matter, which cannot perhaps be more succinctly stated than in the few remarks with which the Editor of the Straits Times prefaces the letter of "Observer" in reproducing it in his paper. He says:—

Its contents are not very intelligible, but if the writer means to maintain that the London branch of the Association is entitled to act independently of the branch here, and irrespective of public feeling and opinion here, or without co-operation with the branch here, then the writer and those who think with him make a very great mistake, and, if they act upon their convictions, the Association had better break up at once, for its influence for good will be effectually destroyed, and deservedly so. We take distinct issue with the writer when he asserts that in the palmy days of the Association "every step taken was taken at home, and was not suggested, much less dictated, from abroad." There was no dictation in the matter; but the branch here worked hand in hand with the London branch, and supplied it with facts, figures, and general representations, which enabled the London branch to obtain a hearing from the Colonial-office. The truth of the matter would appear to be, that the Association, having done the work for which it was established, has fallen into a moribund condition both here and at home. There has been no work for it to do since Sir Harry Ord's departure, and the members of the London branch have apparently been amusing themselves lately by quarrelling among themselves, while the branch here has been in a fitful state of existence, now waking up and then dozing off asleep.

Without, perhaps, going the full length which the Editor does in his somewhat trenchant remarks, I can certainly state without hesitation that it was never the idea that the Straits Settlement Association at home either would or could act independently of the branch here. Such an attempt would assuredly be very much like an endeavour to build a house without bricks, as it is to its being able to obtain information from this side that the Association owes its influence, or rather such influence as it once had at home. I fully agree with the Editor of the Straits Times that if the Association at home intends to act independently of the Branch here, or, in other words, to give up the means which it now possesses of obtaining accurate and reliable information, the sooner it comes to an end the better for all concerned.—Yours faithfully, ONE WHO KNOWS.

Literature, Science, &c.

A book has been published by "E.M." entitled "The Chinese: their Mental and Moral Characteristics." The anonymous author who has chosen this somewhat wide field undertakes (says the Academy), and without much success—"to trace the origin of laws and morals which for thousands of years have governed that vast empire." The writer has studied the Chinese in books, beginning thirty years ago with Du Halde's China and Chinese Tartary, and ending during the past year with Dr. Legge's translations of the Chinese Classics, and the result is naturally a somewhat odd mêlange. After a brief introductory chapter, which commences before 2,000 B.C. and ends with the murder of Dr. Morrison's teacher, we are furnished with a short biography of Confucius, followed by numerous extracts from Dr. Legge's version of the Classics. The chapter styled "Defects in the Confucian System" may be summed up in its last sentence:—"The crying need of China is the Gospel of God's grace." The title of the concluding chapter, "The Present State of China," is absolutely misleading, and the matter feeble in the extreme; it affords, however, one piece of information which will be new to most people—viz., that John Chinaman is addicted to opium-eating.

In the August number of the Church Missionary Intelligencer the Rev. C. F. Warren continues his interesting paper on "Places which he has Visited in Japan." He describes the Temple of Inari at Fushimi, near Kioto, and says:—

One of the most popular gods of the Shinto faith is a so-called deity of the mythological period, popularly known as Inari-sama. The god was worshipped from very ancient times, but the name just given only dates from the ninth century. At that time there lived a learned Buddhist priest, one Kukai—better known by his posthumous name, Kobodaishi—who invented the hiragana, or running-hand syllabary, and made a compound religious system from Buddhism, Shintoism, and Confucianism. The god, carrying a bundle of rice, is said to have appeared to this man, and ever since the title Inari-sama has been current—"Inari" being "rice-carrying," and "sama" a title of honour added to the names of both gods and men. Inari-sama is supposed to be the special protector of the rice-crop. Foxes are said to be the servants and messengers of this deity, and in multitudes of cases the popular worship of Inari is the worship of the fox.

The Inari shrine at Fushimi is near the town of that name, to the south of Kiyoto. The torii is the most conspicuous object visible. Whatever may have been its original use, the torii now marks the entrance to the grounds of a Shinto temple. The torii differ in size, material, and finish. Some are made of the trunks of trees, simply barked, without any embellishment. This was the original torii, and such are still found in some places, especially at the Dai-jin-gu—"the great divine palaces"—the most sacred of all Shinto temples in the Empire.

The Bulletin de la Société de Geographie for this month contains the full text of the journal written by M. Dupuis of his well-known journey in Yunnan, read before the Society in February last. It is accompanied by a valuable map, illustrative of the journey. The present publication forms a perfect and valuable record.

Naval and Military.

The Iron Duke will shortly proceed to China, to take the place of the Audacious as flagship on the station.

Commander John S. Eaton (1863), late of the Duncan, flagship at Sheerness, is gazetted to the command of the Hornet, on the China Station, Vice-Commander Hippisley, promoted.

Colonel R. Loyd-Lindsay, the new Financial Secretary at the War-office, has appointed as his private secretary Mr. Ralph Dalyell, who held a similar position under the Hon. Frederick Stanley.

Col. F. C. Hassard, C.B., R.E., having completed his term of appointment as Commanding Royal Engineer at Sheerness, has embarked for the Cape of Good Hope to take up a similar appointment there. He is succeeded at Sheerness by Col. C. W. Barry.

Captain Wm. Codrington has been appointed private secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, and Mr. Jas. G. Noel and Mr. Alpin Macgregor assistant private secretaries. Those gentlemen held similar offices to the late Mr. Ward Hunt.

Major M. F. Downes, Royal Artillery, has left Woolwich on being appointed to the command of the local forces, South Australia. Major Downes served in the Crimean campaign from May to August, 1855, including the siege of Sebastopol.

The two Greenwich Hospital pensions of £150 a year each for flag officers, vacant by the deaths of Vice-Admiral James Willcox and Admiral Sir G. Lushington, have been conferred by the First Lord of the Admiralty on Vice-Admiral Thomas Fisher and Vice-Admiral Sidney Grenfell, C.B., respectively.

The Philomel, 3, double-screw gun vessel, Commander Henry H. Boys, has arrived at Plymouth from the East Indies, to pay off and await Admiralty orders as to which port she is to proceed. She was commissioned at Sheerness in 1873.

The Penguin, 6, composite sloop, 1,124 tons, 900-horse power, has been commissioned at Devonport by Commander A. C. H. Paget. The Penguin and Wild Swan, composite (sister) sloops, have also been commissioned at Devonport, also the former by Commander Arthur C. H. Paget (1873), the latter by Commander Armand T. Powlet (1870). The Wild Swan will proceed to the West Indies, and the Penguin to the Pacific Station.

There would seem to be no longer any reason for entertaining the slightest doubts as to the legality of the proceeding of Rear-Admiral de Horsey in regard to the Huascar. Government goes entirely with Admiral de Horsey, and, acting upon the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, the Foreign-office and Admiralty have acquainted the Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific that his proceedings were justifiable and have met with approval.

Sir Henry Gordon, who last week received the honour of knighthood, is an elder brother of "Chinese" Gordon. Though less conspicuous than his brother, Sir Henry has had a distinguished career. Forty-two years ago he joined the army, and has served in China and the Crimea. He superintended the embarkation of the stores when he evacuated the Crimea. He next held successively important posts in the stores department at Woolwich, and was subsequently Controller and Commissary General.

The subjoined promotions, consequent on the death of Admiral Sir H. J. Codrington, referred to in our issue of the 20th inst., are gazetted:—Admiral the Hon. THE CHINESE IN AUSTRALIA AND QUEENSLAND.

The House of Assembly at Sydney has passed resolutions expressing sympathy with Queensland in its efforts to prevent excessive Chinese immigration, and recommending as a desirable measure that the English Government should obtain a modification of the treaty with China, so as to enable restrictions to be placed on the Chinese invasion of Australia. The Times has the following on the subject:—

We can understand and sympathise with the dislike of our Australian fellow-subjects to the catastrophe they thus apprehend. Our Australian Colonies are something more to us than wide regions under the dominion of the English Crown, with indefinite capabilities for almost every kind of material progress. We value them rather as the homes of men of our own race, as capable of receiving and providing for the vast multitudes which from time to time are driven from our own shores, and as likely in the distant future to grow up to a greatness equal to our own, and not wholly unlike it in the type it offers. It would sadly interfere with this agreeable vision if Australia were really destined to be peopled, not with English, but with Chinese settlers, if the abominations of a Chinese quarter are to be found everywhere, and if white labour is to be driven out before the advancing steps of its rivals. Queensland, under such a system, might produce more cotton and more sugar, and at a lower rate than before. The lands of Australia might be better tilled and her cattle might increase and multiply under the cheap supervision of the stranger. But if these results were to be obtained by the substitution of Chinese for Englishmen, if Australia, in short, were to become another China, with the addition only of a few great capitalists and landholders, we should feel that we had lost well-nigh all for which Australia is now valuable to us. We could look with no satisfaction at a country in which the great mass of the inhabitants were, in the fullest sense, aliens—in which English capital might be engaged with profit, but from which Englishmen would be practically excluded, or would find a place only such as the poorer class of whites did in the late slave States of America, under the designation of "white trash." As far as this is the prospect at which our Australian Colonies have taken alarm, we can only say that we dislike it as much as they do. Our only doubt is whether the case be as urgent as they seem to believe, and whether the preventive measures they are wishing to apply are, in point of fact, at all called for. The Chinaman in Australia and in California is nothing more as yet than an exceedingly useful auxiliary. The departments of work which he has appropriated are such, for the most part, as the white man is only too glad to be relieved from. There is nothing too mean, or too forbidding, or too irksome for the catholic taste of the Chinese. In waiting, or scavengering, or washing dirty clothes he is simply without a rival. There are plenty of spheres of this kind which may be surrendered to him without grudging, and in which no Englishman need wish to enter into any competition with him. It is chiefly when he goes beyond these, when he offers his services in the general labour market, or when he sets off to the diggings to gather gold on his own account, that his presence becomes at all questionable. Thereupon the white labourer who is underbid or thrust aside by the Chinaman calls out, at once, against the low tastes and habits of his intrusive rival. The remedy, it appears to us, is sufficiently in his own hands. We refuse to believe that white labour is not, for the vast majority of purposes, superior to what is termed yellow labour, or that it would not in itself be very much preferred by the employer. But when white men make exorbitant demands for wages, when they begin striking and giving trouble in a thousand ways, the employer of labour may be very glad that he is not absolutely dependent on them, and that he has at command a more docile race of beings, who can be satisfied on more easy terms, and who will be less forgetful of the relation in which they stand to him and the corresponding duties which it entails.

Monetary and Commercial.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 11 to 11½; Chartered Bank of India, 21 to 22; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 27 to 29; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.667½; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 34 to 36; Oriental Bank, 44½ to 45½; P. and O. Company, 39 to 41; Messageries Maritimes, f.615; Suez Canal, f.700; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 109 to 111; ditto, 7 per cent., 100 to 102; China Loan, 101 to 103.

The first batch of the second crop black leafs arrived on the 20th inst. per Gordon Castle, which left Hankow on the 28th June, with some eight chops. The leaf is pronounced as being fairly good but the crop is disappointing, and although costing lower than previous years, the teas are not considered up to standard in quality. A portion offered Friday at public sale realised only 11d. per lb., against a cost of 1s. 0½d. This fact should be taken as a further proof of the absolute necessity that shipments of common teas should entirely cease, seeing the disastrous results of the business which has been going on for the last five years. In other respects the market is much as before reported—teas having some quality still maintaining their position.

During the week ended the 18th inst. the total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London was 3,834,323 lbs., of which 2,264,477 lbs. was for home consumption, 763,527 lbs. was removed coastwise, 700,111 lbs. was exported, 102,107 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 4,101 lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received amounted to £56,612. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 513,948 lbs.: cocoa, 130,366 lbs.; tobacco, 370,679 lbs.; cigars, 15,688 lbs.; wine, 131,488 gallons; brandy, 34,638 gallons; and rum, 25,480 gallons.

Continued dulness characterises the Silk market, business having been on a very small scale only, and of a merely hand to mouth nature. No improvement has taken place in the deliveries, which continue noticeably small. The latest quotation from Shanghai of No. 5 is given at 15s. 6d., and although the settlements there, according to last accounts, were small, it is reported that there were large orders on the market at 14s. 9d.

In the Produce Markets the general dulness and inactivity continue. The arrivals of Tea have been heavy and a quieter tone is manifested; common grades of Congou are lower, and finest show 1d. to 2d. decline; Souchongs are 2d. lower than first sales, and Oolongs 1d. to 2d. per lb. Silk continues extremely quiet, but quotations are unaltered. Coffee is firm at a slight advance, owing to the satisfactory result of the Dutch Trading Company's sale. Black Pepper is in better demand and advancing, but white has sustained a further decline. Floating cargoes of Rice continue in demand at advancing quotations. Sugar is again lower. Sago shows a slight advance. Tin continues very dull; the value of Straits is unaltered, but Banca and Billiton are lower.

The Silver Market is somewhat firmer, at 54⅛d. per oz. for bars of fine silver. Mexican Dollars have been dealt in at 52½d. per oz., showing no change in value.

The P. and O. Company's steamer Hydaspes, which was despatched from Southampton Thursday with the heavy portion of next outward mails has on board £574,756 in specie for the East, including for Hong Kong, silver, £48,400; Penang, silver, £27,100; Singapore, gold, £10,000; ditto, silver, £7,000; Shanghai, silver, £2,500; Galle, gold, £1,000.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market has been rather quieter this week, the trade having bought freely of late, and seeing heavy arrivals announced have waited to see the samples before operating further to any extent. Prices generally show no material alteration, but common to fair kinds of new season remain dull of sale, whilst all the good to fine kinds remain firm at last week's prices. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings show no change; common to good common, both of old and new season, remain dull of sale; fair kinds, except with briskness, are also difficult to move; fair to good medium kinds are in moderate request; good to fine show no alteration; finest have been firm. In Pak Lin kinds the sales made have been at last week's prices, the demand being fairly sustained. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common, of old season, show no improvement; in new, good common to fair kinds have been dull of sale from 9½d. to 11½d. per lb.; fair to good medium show no change in prices, but the bids made have been generally refused, being below the ideas of importers; good to fine and finest remain firm, with a fair business doing. New-make kinds: Common to fair have sold from 8d. to 10d. per lb., being much as before; good kinds, from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d., have been saleable. Oolongs: There is no improvement to notice; it is difficult to get bids privately, while at public sale the prices realised are on a low range, say from 11¾d. to 1s. 0½d. for fair, and 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 2½d. for good kinds. Souchongs: Common sold at auction from 11¾d. to 1s. per lb.; fine at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 9d. per lb. Privately the sales made have been at rather easier prices. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Common kinds are difficult of sale; fair to good have also been rather less in request, but the finer kinds remain firm at fully last week's prices. Orange Pekoes: The short-leaf kinds have sold rather better; fair from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 1d. per lb.; fine Macao kinds also sell readily at full prices. The long-leaf kinds show no material change, but they have been in fair request. Foochow Capers: Good to fine have realised full prices. The further supplies of Orange Pekoes have sold at easier rates. Green Teas.—The demand is still dull, old season's are still only saleable at low prices. The first of the new season's, about 700 boxes, were offered at public sale yesterday, and fetched good prices. Further auctions have taken place to-day.

The public sales have comprised 15,436 packages, nearly the whole of which were sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

Home Consumption	2,283,119 ...	2,277,642
Coastwise	746,200 ...	699,843
Exports	644,651 ...	873,188
	3,673,970	3,850,673

SILK.

The business doing is very limited. Purchases for actual wants are all that take place, and as these are very small the market in consequence is weak. The deliveries are on the same small scale as during the last few months.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Business has been carried on on a limited scale, though with a fair amount of steadiness in prices. The transactions are exceedingly small in all departments. Producers maintain their quotations generally at last week's rates, but there have not been sufficient offers in the market to test them correctly.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

NEW CAPE MAIL STEAMER.—The Union Company's new steamer the German, recently built by Messrs. William Denny Brothers, of Dumbarton, has been taken to Stokes Bay, for an official trial at the measured mile. The German is of 3,028 tons gross measurement, her net tonnage being about 1,000 tons less, and she is fitted with compound direct-acting engines of 500 nominal horse power, which on her trial for speed developed to the remarkable extent of 2,651 indicated horse power; and though only going at sixty-five revolutions per minute, with 65-lb steam pressure, the ship was propelled at the mean rate of 13·813 knots, equal to sixteen statute miles per hour. She is fitted with every appliance for the accommodation and comfort of passengers and for the general purposes of ocean commerce. The German is flush-decked, brig-rigged, and can spread a large quantity of canvas, so that with her fine engines she may be expected to perform the voyage to the Cape in twenty days.

private meeting of the shipbuilders and engineers of Glasgow, Partick, Govan, Renfrew, Dalmuir, Port Glasgow, and Greenock was held in Glasgow, when it was agreed that the works should be opened, and as many of the old hands as were required should be engaged at the old rate of wages, pending the settlement of the dispute by arbitration. The masters and men, who both accept arbitration, will meet immediately to settle the basis upon which it shall proceed.

THE Eastern and Australian Company's steamer Normanby, which has been beached upon No. 2 Island of the Percy Group, is a brig rigged screw steamer, of London, built at Renfrew in 1874, fitted with five bulkheads, 220 feet long, 27 feet width, and 22 feet in depth of hold, and engines of 160-horse power.

NOTICE has been received at the Board of Trade of the adoption by the European Commission of the Danube of the system of tonnage measurement recommended by the International Commission of Constantinople and put in practice for the passage of the Suez Canal.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

THE BLUE-BOOK UPON THE MARGARY MURDER AND THE CHEFOO CONVENTION.

The long expected Blue-book with reference to the murder of the late Mr. Margary and the Chefoo Convention has at last appeared, and a copy reached us Thursday. It commences with an elaborate despatch from Mr. Hart, Inspector-General of Customs, to the Chinese Government, on the changes which are desirable commercially and judicially. It contains a large number of the well-known pro-Chinese arguments, the most important being with reference to judicial proceedings, the suggestion of a Court consisting of a Chinese official with a foreign Co-Judge in Chinese employ being among other things thrown out.

The following is the Text of the Agreement between the Governments of Great Britain and China, signed on the 13th of September, 1876, at Chefoo:—

Agreement negotiated between Sir Thomas Wade, K.C.B., Her Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of China, and Li, Minister Plenipotentiary of his Majesty the Emperor of China, Senior Grand Secretary, Governor-General of the Province of Chih-li, of the First Class of the Third Order of Nobility.

The negotiation between the Ministers above-named has its origin in a despatch received by Sir Thomas Wade, in the spring of the present year, from the Earl of Derby, Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated 1st January, 1876. This contained instructions regarding the disposal of three questions:—First, a satisfactory settlement of the Yün Nan affair; secondly, a faithful fulfilment of engagements of last year respecting intercourse between the high officers of the two Governments; thirdly, the adoption of a uniform system in satisfaction of the understanding arrived at in the month of September, 1875 (eighth moon of the first year of the reign Kwang Sü), on the subject of rectification of conditions of trade. It is to this despatch that Sir Thomas Wade has referred himself in discussions on these questions with the T-sung-li Yamên, further reference to which is here omitted as superfluous. The Conditions now agreed to between Sir Thomas Wade and the Grand Secretary are as follows:—

SECTION I.—Settlement of the Yün Nan Case.

1. A memorial is to be presented to the Throne, whether by the Tsung-li Yamên or by the Grand Secretary Li is immaterial, in the sense of the Memorandum prepared by Sir Thomas Wade. Before presentation the Chinese text of the Memorial is to be shown to Sir Thomas Wade.

2. The memorial having been presented to the Throne, and the Imperial decree in reply received, the Tsung-li Yamên will communicate copies of the memorial and Imperial decree to Sir Thomas Wade, together with a copy of a letter from the Tsung-li Yamên to the Provincial Governments, instructing them to issue a proclamation that shall embody at length the above memorial and decree. Sir Thomas Wade will thereupon reply to the effect that for two years to come officers will be sent, by the British Minister, to different places in the provinces, to see that the proclamation is posted. On application from the British Minister, or the Consul of any port instructed by him to make application, the high officers of the provinces will depute competent officers to accompany those so sent to the places which they go to observe.

3. In order to the framing of such regulations as will be needed for the conduct of the frontier trade between Burma and Yün Nan, the memorial, submitting the proposed settlement of the Yün Nan affair, will contain a request that an Imperial decree be issued, directing the Governor-General and Governor, whenever the British Government shall send officers to Yün Nan, to select a competent officer of rank to confer with them, and to conclude a satisfactory arrangement.

4. The British Government will be free for five years, from the 1st January next, being the 17th day of the 11th moon of the second year of the reign Kwang Su, to station officers at Tali Fu, or at some other suitable place in Yün Nan, to observe the conditions of trade; to the end that they may have information upon which to base the regulations of trade when these have to be discussed. For the consideration and adjustment of any matter affecting British officers or subjects, these officials will be free to address themselves to the authorities of the province. The opening of the trade may be proposed by the British Government, as it may find best at any time within five years, or upon expiry of the term of five years.

Passports having been obtained last year from a mission from India into Yün Nan, it is open to the Viceroy of India to send such mission at any time he may see fit.

5. The amount of indemnity to be paid on account of the families of the officers and others killed in Yün Nan; on account of the expenses which the Yün Nan case has occasioned; and on account of claims of British merchants arising out of the action of officers of the Chinese Government up to the commencement of the present year, Sir Thomas Wade takes upon himself to fix at 200,000 taels, payable on demand.

6. When the case is closed an Imperial letter will be written, expressing regret for what has occurred in Yün Nan. The mission bearing the Imperial letter will proceed to England immediately. Sir Thomas Wade is to be informed of the constitution of this mission, for the information of his Government. The text of the Imperial letter is also to be communicated to Sir Thomas Wade by the Tsung-li Yamen.

SECTION II.—Official Intercourse.

Under this heading are included the conditions of intercourse between high officers in the capital and the provinces, and between consular officers and Chinese officials at the ports; also the conduct of judicial proceedings in mixed cases.

1. In the Tsung-li Yamên's Memorial of the 28th September, 1875, the Prince of Kung and the Ministers stated that their object in presenting it had not been simply the transaction of business in which Chinese and foreigners might be concerned; missions abroad and the question of diplomatic intercourse lay equally within their prayer.

To the prevention of further misunderstanding upon the subject of intercourse and correspondence, the present conditions of both having caused complaint in the capital and in the provinces, it is agreed that the Tsung-li Yamen shall address a circular to the legations, inviting foreign representatives to consider with them a code of etiquette, to the end that foreign officials in China, whether at the ports or elsewhere, may be treated with the same regard as is shown them when serving abroad in other countries, and as would be shown to Chinese agents so serving abroad.

The fact that China is about to establish missions and consulates abroad renders an understanding on these points essential.

2. The British Treaty of 1858, Article 16, lays down that "Chinese subjects who may be guilty of any criminal act towards British subjects shall be arrested and punished by Chinese authorities according to the laws of China.

"British subjects who may commit any crime in China shall be tried and punished by the Consul, or any other public functionary authorised thereto, according to the laws of Great Britain.

"Justice shall be equitably and impartially administered on both sides."

The words "functionary authorised thereto" are, translated in the Chinese text, "British Government."

In order to the fulfilment of its treaty obligations, the British Government has established a Supreme Court at Shanghai, with a special code of rules, which it is now about to revise. The Chinese Government has established at Shanghai a Mixed Court, but the officer presiding over it, either from lack of power or dread of unpopularity, constantly fails to enforce his judgments.

It is now understood that the Tsung-li Yamên will write a circular to the legations, inviting foreign representatives at once to consider with the Tsung-li Yamen the measures needed for the more effective administration of justice at the ports open to trade.

3. It is agreed that whenever a crime is committed affecting the person or property of a British subject, whether in the interior or at the open ports, the British Minister shall be free to send officers to the spot to be present at the investigation.

To the prevention of misunderstanding on this point, Sir Thomas Wade will write a note to the above effect, to which the Tsung-li Yamen will reply, affirming that this is the course of proceeding to be adhered to for the time to come.

It is further understood that so long as the laws of the two countries differ from each other, there can be but one principle to guide judicial proceedings in mixed cases in China, namely, that the case is tried by the official of the defendants nationality, the official of the plaintiff's nationality merely attending to watch the proceedings in the interests of justice. If the officer so attending be dissatisfied with the proceedings, it will be in his power to protest against them in detail. The law administered will be the law of the nationality of the officer trying the case. This is the meaning of the words "huit'ung," indicating combined action in judicial proceedings in Article 16 of the Treaty of Tientsin, and this is the course to be respectively followed by the officers of either nationality.

SECTION III.—Trade.

1. With reference to the area within which, according to the treaties in force, li-kin ought not to be collected on foreign goods at the open ports, Sir Thomas Wade agrees to move his Government to allow the ground rented by foreigners (the so-called concessions) at the different ports to be regarded as the area of exemption from li-kin; and the Government of China will thereupon allow I-chang, in the province of Hu-Pei, Wu-hu, in An-Hui, Wen-Chow, in Che-Kiang, and Pei-hai (Pak-hoi), in Kwang-Tung, to be added to the number of ports open to trade, and to become Consular stations. The British Government will further be free to send officers to reside at Ch'ung-k'ing, to watch the conditions of British trade in Ssu-Ch'uen. British merchants will not be allowed to reside at Ch'ung-k'ing, or to open establishments or warehouses there, so long as no steamers have access to the port. When steamers have succeeded in ascending the river so far, further arrangements can be taken into consideration.

It is further proposed as a measure of compromise that at certain points on the shore of the Great River, namely, Ta-t'ung, and Ngan-ch'ing, in the province of An-Hui; Hu-k'ou, in Kiang-Si; Wu sueh, Lu-chi-k'ou, and Sha-shih, in Hu-Kuang; these being all places of trade in the interior, at which, as they are not open ports, foreign merchants are not legally authorised to land or ship goods; steamers shall be allowed to touch for the purpose of landing or shipping passengers or goods; but in all instances by means of native boats only, and subject to the regulations in force affecting native trade.

Produce accompanied by a half-duty certificate may be shipped at such points by the steamers, but may not be landed by them for sale. And at all such points, except in the case of imports accompanied by a transit duty certificate, or exports similarly certificated, which will be severally passed free of li-kin on exhibition of such certificates, li-kin will be duly collected on all goods whatever by the native authorities. Foreign merchants will not be authorised to reside or open houses of business or warehouses at the places enumerated as ports of call.

2. At all ports opened to trade, whether by earlier or later agreement, at which no settlement area has been previously defined, it will be the duty of the British Consul, acting in concert with his colleagues, the Consuls of other Powers, to come to an understanding with the local authorities regarding the definition of the foreign settlement area.

3. On opium, Sir Thomas Wade will move his Government to sanction an arrangement different from that affecting other imports

Digitized by Google

British merchants, when opium is brought into port, will be obliged to have it taken cognisance of by the Customs, and deposited in bond, either in a warehouse or a receiving hulk, until such time as there is a sale for it. The importer will then pay the tariff duty upon it, and the purchasers the li-kin; in order to the prevention of the evasion of the duty, the amount of li-kin to be collected will be decided by the different provincial Governments, according to the circumstances of each.

4. The Chinese Government agrees that transit duty certificates shall be framed under one rule at all ports, no differences being made in the conditions set forth therein; and that so far as imports are concerned, the nationality of the person possessing and carrying these is immaterial. Native produce carried from an inland centre to a port of shipment, if bona fide intended for shipment to a foreign port, may be by treaty certificated by the British subject interested, and exempted by payment of the half duty from all charges demanded upon it en route. If produce be not the property of a British subject, or is being carried to a port not for exportation, it is not entitled to the exemption that would be secured it by the exhibition of a transit duty certificate. The British Minister is prepared to agree with the Tsung-li Yamen upon rules that will secure the Chinese Government against abuse of the privilege as affecting produce. The words "nei ti," inland, in the clause of Article 7 of the rules appended to the tariff, regarding carriage of imports inland, and of native produce purchased inland, apply as much to places on the sea coasts and river shores as to places in the interior not open to foreign trade; the Chinese Government having the right to make arrangements for the prevention of abuses thereat.

5. Article XLV. of the Treaty of 1858 prescribes no limit to the term within which a drawback may be claimed upon duty-paid imports. The British Minister agrees to a term of three years, after expiry of which no drawback shall be claimed.

6. The foregoing stipulation, that certain ports are to be opened to foreign trade, and that landing and shipping of goods at six places on the great river is to be sanctioned, shall be given effect to within six months after receipt of the Imperial decree approving the Memorial of the Grand Secretary Li. The date for giving the effect to the stipulations affecting exemption of imports from li-kin taxation within the foreign settlements, and the collection of li-kin upon opium by the Customs Inspectorate at the same time as the tariff duty upon it, will be fixed as soon as the British Government has arrived at an understanding on the subject with other foreign Governments.

7. The Governor of Hong Kong having long complained of the interference of the Canton Customs revenue cruisers with the junk trade of that colony, the Chinese Government agrees to the appointment of a Commission to consist of a British Consul, an officer of the Hong Kong Government, and a Chinese official of equal rank, in order to the establishment of some system that shall enable the Chinese Government to protect its revenue without prejudice to the interests of the colony.

Separate Article.

Her Majesty's Government having it in contemplation to send a mission of exploration next year by way of Peking through Kan-su and Koko-Nor, or by way of Ssu-Ch'uen to Thibet, and thence to India, the Tsung-li Yamen, having due regard to the circumstances, will, when the time arrives, issue the necessary passports, and will address letters to the high provincial authorities and to the Resident in Thibet. If the mission should not be sent by these routes, but should be proceeding across the Indian frontier to Thibet, the Tsung-li Yamen, on receipt of a communication to the above effect from the British Minister, will write to the Chinese Resident in Thibet, and the Resident, with due regard to the circumstances, will send officers to take due care of the mission; and passports for the mission will be issued by the Tsung-li Yamen, that its passage be not obstructed.

The report of the Hon. Mr. Grosvenor is of a very interesting character. It details the nature of the trial, and gives the following comparative statement of the English and Chinese version of the murder of Mr. Margary:—

Inclosure 10 in No. 3.

Comparative Statement of English and China Version of the Yunnan Outrage—Murder of Mr. Margary.

English Case.

1. A Burmese, belonging to the King's cotton agent at Man-yün, deposed, on the 1st of March, at Bamo, that Mr. Margary was killed not by local savages or Chinese, but by order of the Chinese officials who had come down from Momein. These officials are called by the deponent Lyo Tsheng Tsheng and Shoon Tsheng Tsheng, and deponent concludes by stating that he has heard that the heads of Mr. Margary and the Chinamen who were killed were taken up to Mom-yeng after being exposed in the town of Man-yün.

2. A Burmese scout who was sent with Mr. Margary to Man-yün states, on the 25th Feb., 1875:—

I was sent from the fifth guard-house to see what was going on in Man-yün. We arrived on the 19th of February at the Tsarai Tsawbwa's house. We slept there, and the next day we went to Man-yün. On the 21st of February the Chinese officers killed Mr. Margary and five Chinese.

A Burmese belonging to the King's cotton agency states:—

On the 21st of February I saw Mr. Margary in Man-yün, I saw him several times. He was going about the town, sometimes accompanied by Chinese, and sometimes alone. Two officials, Lyo Tsheng Tsheng and Shoon Tsheng Tsheng, came down from Man-yün. On the evening of the 21st of February I heard that Mr. Margary and his men had all been killed. Mr. Margary was said to have been asked to go and see some hot springs, and when he got on his pony they knocked him off and killed him. His men were killed in the Kyoung, in which they were staying. This was done not by any local Shans or Chinese, but by order of the men from Momyeng.

A letter from Burmese officials (Customs officer, seller of the Royal cotton, and others), states:—

On the 20th of February, 1875, the Englishman Margary arrived at Man-yün, and on the 21st of February, 1875, the Chinese killed him, as also three Canton Chinamen, and two others, altogether six of them.

Colonel Browne on rising on the morning of the 22nd of February found a continuous line of armed Chinese defiling along a ridge on his right towards the rear of his camping ground, where, on a hill covered with jungle, a strong force had established itself. It soon became apparent that except on the steep to his left, by which it was impossible to attack him, he had enemies on all sides, and while in doubt as to what could have provoked their hostile action, the Chief, whom Colonel Browne had left at Tsaurai on the previous day, came up the steep on his left with the news that Mr. Margary and all the Chinese with him had been murdered the previous evening at Man-yün, that a force of 4,000 men had been assembled by Chinese officials at Momein to annihilate the mission, and that the men then approaching were but part of an advance guard of 800 men. He had endeavoured, he said, to reach the mission earlier to give the alarm, but had been detained and deprived of his pony. He had, however, escaped, and had come on on foot. While he was speaking, the Chinese, creeping up through the jungle in the rear, began to fire on the mission, and the Chief disappeared.

Some of the bolder Chinese advanced through a gap in the hills in rear of the position, into the open ground, waving guns and trident spears. They shouted out in Chinese that they were commanded by Shouk-goon, the nephew of the great Li, and called on the Burmese escort to retire and leave the "Kalas" to their fate.

The Sikh guard opening fire upon these Chinese soon drove them back with some loss. The Burmese also kept up a fire, but they were badly armed and did no execution. It is noteworthy that the Chinese throughout never fired at the Burmese, and that even when retreating before the fire of the Sikhs they continued as before to shout their advice to the Burmese to k ep away from the foreigners.

Chinese Case, as stated by Ting Taoutai.

1. The murderers of Mr. Margary turn out to be wild hill-men, robbers by profession, who inhabit the Yeh-jen Shan, and include certain renegade Chinese, who have fled from justice, and have joined the savages.

2. Li Chên-Kuo never expected that Margary would come on in front.

Margary reached Man-yün. He left the day before Li's men went to stop Colonel Browne, and passing by them unhappily fell in with the robbers. These are robbers by profession, and are not to be confounded with the body which hindered Colonel Browne with the sole intention of stopping him, not of hurting or plundering him.

It was after crossing the Husung River, 15 li from Man-yun, that Margary encountered the robbers, who, in accordance with their usual practice, demanded blackmail. They are a mixture of wild men, Chinese renegades, and Chinese captured when young, but include no Mohammedans amongst them. Margary refused their demand, and shot one of them, thinking to disperse them, whereupon they surrounded him: he dismounted to engage them, and was murdered, with four men who accompanied him. Margary was killed with their swords; they had no fire-arms. Another Chinese who was with Margary had remained at the temple (Mien Fo Sü), whence Margary had just set out, to attend to the baggage; immediately after the massacre the robbers hurried to the temple, but the man escaped.

Now who was the originator of the opposition to Colonel Browne's party? On this point several of the local gentry in command of the T'eng-yüeh train bands were questioned, not indeed judicially as criminals, but privately lectured and examined.

Strangely enough we discovered that the originator of the whole affair was the person mentioned in Sir T. Wade's despatch, namely, Li Chen-kuo.

We had previously heard that Li Chenkuo was suspected, but were unwilling to believe that a person of his condition could be implicated. Further inquiry left no doubt as to to his culpability. That he refuses to confess is not surprising; nor in view of the gravity of his crime can we proceed to torture, as he might afterwards retract, and assert that an admission was wrung from him by pain.

Such is his obstinacy that three months' examination has only elicited from him three words: "I know nothing" ("pu chih tao"), doubtless in the hope that if he does not confess he cannot be punished. Nevertheless he cannot escape justice; the evidence against him is overwhelming—the proofs a certainty.

Colonel Browne on the 22nd of February, about mid-day, when at the foot of the Panshi hills, was met by a band composed of wild men, Mohammedan outlaws— a remnant of a band once commanded by a son of Li Kwo-lun, and Shan people, all sent by Li Chên-kuo. There were also with them a number of Li Chên-kuo's personal retainers, as well as some of the robbers who had killed Margary. Li Chên-kuo's sole object was to stop Colonel Browne and Margary together. Li Chên-kuo was not concerned in Margary's murder. Li Chên-kuo was not present at the stopping ("lan tsu") of Colonel Browne; for Nge-yu-ko (Elias) saw him at Mêng-mao on the 18th of February. The band did not fire a single shot. Colonel Browne seeing that he was beset, opened fire and wounded a few of them, and paid the head-man of his coolies to go round and fire the jungle. Li Chên-kuo's band got frightened and disappeared; Colonel Browne returned to Burma.

English Case.

After their first repulse by the Sikhs, the Chinese did not venture out of the jungle, where they continued firing at long range until the afternoon. Colonel Browne succeeded in getting the jungle set on fire by some friendly savages whom he bribed, and the Chinese in rear of the position rushed back to gain the ridge along which they had originally come down.

The Chinese had left some dead on the field, and the head of one of the latter was cut off by a hillman, who brought it to Colonel Browne, observing that he might thereby be satisfied that his assailants had been Chinese, and not men of the hill tribes.

Letter from Burmese officials at Manyün (Customs officer, seller of the Royal cotton, and others) to the Bhamo Tsoare-taw-gyee (intercepted by Colonel Browne):—

The officials sent by the Won of Monyeng—viz., Bhwa Tsheng Tsheng, Shoon Tsheng Tsheng, and Tyo Tsheng Tsheng, have told us to write to you urgently, to say that, on the 23rd of February, 1875, you must not remain with the English Koolas, whom you are escorting; you must either leave them and return, or you must stay in some place a mile or two miles from them. If you do not do so, and if, in consequence thereof, any of your men are wounded and killed, you must not blame the Chinese. As they have told us, so we write. The attack will be made at night, on the 23rd of February, 1875. Above 3,000 and about 4,000 men are collecting and surrounding you. We think it will be wise for you to retreat.

Statement of a Burmese scout who was sent with Mr. Margary to Manyün:—

The Chinese officers said to Gua Hpo-moung and Gua Oon, 'you must send some one to tell the Burmans to separate from the Koolas,' and Gua Hpo-moung and Gua Oon accordingly gave me and Gua Lwon a letter to give to the Tsare-daw-gyee. We left Manyün on the 23rd of February. At Tsarai we met Yoon-tsun-lweng, and Toon Tseng Tseng, and the latter asked me if I would tell the Burmans to separate from the Koolas. I said I would. Some Kakhyengs of Tsarai and the Chinamen wanted to kill me, because they said I had come from Manyün, but Toon Tsheng Tsheng ordered me to go at once and tell the Burmans to separate from the Koolas, so I ran away.

On the road I met the Chinese officer Shouk Goon, who said he was coming back from the fight between the Kakhyengs and Chinese and the English. I ran away, and came up with the Burmese forces at Tsalee.

Statement of a Burman lately resident at Manyün, dated Bhamo, March 1st, 1875:—

On the 16th of February I think it was that I first heard rumours of Chinamen being collected to go on the hills. Two officials, Syo Tsheng Tsheng and Shoon Tsheng Tsheng, came down from Monyeng. It was said that they had a force of between 3,000 and 4,000 men. These men were not allowed inside the town, but we heard the noise made by them outside the town at night.

* * * * *

We Burmans were concealed by people of the place. On the 23rd of February one of the Chinese officers said, "These Burmans have joined the English, and have cut off the head of one of our officers. Many Chinamen and Kakhyengs have been killed by them, and they danced in front of the English when they opposed us. They ought to be killed.

Chinese Case.

Great stress is laid on the evidence (?) adduced in support of the above statement on the fact that officials and people at Têng Yüehting were unaware that foreigners were coming. Wu-chi-liang, in his evidence, however, says that, on December 21st, 1874, he was instructed that three British Envoys were coming through Burma from India to Yunnan. How, then, could he be aware of their arrival? In addition to which Sir T. Wade's despatch to the Prince of Kung, of the 20th of August, 1875, distinctly states, on the authority of the letter received from the late Mr. Margary, that Chen Futai excused himself from seeing Mr. Margary on his way through to Burma, but said that he should be happy to see him when he came back.

English Case. Chinese Case.

The Hon. Mr. Grosvenor supplements the above with a report which is of great importance as showing the manner in which the Chinese fulfilled their repeated promises that the matter should be fully investigated. It runs as follows:—

Mr. Grosvenor to Sir T. Wade.

Rangoon, June 7, 1876.

Sir,—The Government of China having given the strongest assurances that the investigation set on foot by them and the trial at Yünnan-fu should be conducted with a view to the production of trustworthy witnesses, and the punishment of the real offenders, I have now the honour to submit the following consideration of the manner in which their formal and repeated promises have been fulfilled.

In the first place, although the party which attacked Colonel Browne is admitted by the Chinese to have been "probably about two thousand," and to have included many Chinese outlaws and retainers of Li Ch'ên-kuo, yet out of this great number not a single individual has been produced. The savages who are put forward as having murdered Mr. Margary are represented as having subsequently joined the assailants of Colonel Browne; but the Chinese statement of March 14 expressly points out "that they are not to be confounded with that body."

As regards evidence it is sufficient to state that the Commissioners have not produced, nor even pretended to produce, a single witness, either of the murder or the subsequent attack.

With reference to the savages who are represented as having confessed the murder of Mr. Margary, it became clear to Messrs. Davenport and Baber during the process of the trial that the interpreter was understood by them with, at the least, very great difficulty; nor did they exhibit the demeanour of criminals who had confessed a capital offence. A question which Messrs. Davenport and Baber put elicited a further contradiction of passages in their depositions which already conflicted.

But all doubt as to the credibility of their confession is set at rest by their statement, so often repeated, that Mr. Margary was murdered "below the banyans" by the Hu-sung river, and that they afterwards repaired to Mien-fo-ssu to plunder the baggage. It was discovered by the merest accident that "below the banyans" is a local term for a spot near the Hu-sung, a little more than a mile distant from Manwyne. A well-marked path, the only apparent path in the neighbourhood, leads under three conspicuous banyans down to the ford, and there, right in the pathway, midway between the banyans and the river-side, we found the bubbling hot spring mentioned in the earlier accounts of the murder.

The scene of the murder is therefore put beyond doubt. It is not beyond the border, but in undoubted Chinese territory; not among hills, but in the midst of a long stretch of rice-fields; not five miles from Manwyne as deposed by Li Ch'en-kuo; nor eight as stated on the Chinese plan, but a little more than a mile by the windings of the route.

From this spot after the perpetration of the murder the savages are represented as confessing that they repaired to Mien-fo-ssu to plunder the baggage. Where is Mien-fo-ssu?

Li Ch'en-kuo, in his deposition, states that "Mien-fo-ssu" is something over ten li from Manwyne, and about the same distance from the Husung river.

There are no temples, nor indeed buildings of any description whatever on the road from Manwyne to the Husung.

It turns out that Mien-fo-ssu (temple of the Burmese Buddha) is a general name for the temples of the Shan tribes. These Shans, or Tai, as they call themselves, must not be confounded with the savage hillmen, nor with the Chinese to whom they are subject. They are a civilised people of unknown antiquity, with peculiar customs, arts and language, and possessing an elegant alphabetic writing in which they record, on paper, the chronicles of their race. One of their characteristics is extreme devotion and veneration for their priests and temples. These latter at once struck us as very different from the religious buildings of the Chinese, reminding us both in interior details and external appearance of Burmese Buddhism and Burmese architecture.

The only temples in the neighbourhood of this name, Mien-fo-ssu, or, indeed, of any description, are situated in Manwyne itself.

It is ridiculous to suppose that a devout population, every man of which goes armed with a formidable cutlass, should in broad midday, and within a walled place, allow their temple to be plundered, and the booty, comprising several heavy packages, securely carried away by a band of some dozen brigands.

It is a weary task to indicate the numerous contradictions and impossibilities which comprise the Chinese official case. It would almost seem as if they have not even taken the trouble to make their story consistent. The requirements of time and place are alike outraged.

If, according to their statement, Mr. Margary passed by the party sent by Li Ch'en-kuo to attack Colonel Browne, which party must have been considerable, even supposing it to have only formed a portion of the whole body of 2,000 assailants, he could only have passed them close to the banyan trees, as the way up to that point, about a mile distant, is by a path a foot wide, between flooded rice fields. That party must, therefore, have at least witnessed the murder a few hundred yards further on, and the murderers must have passed them on their way to plunder the temple.

The Chinese statement, written blindly, with the purpose of making it appear that the murder was committed by savages among the hills, completely ignores this difficulty.

Pursuing the same object at all hazards, the Chinese, in the official plan, interpose a range of hills between Manwyne and the main river, which latter they make about seven miles distant from the village,

Digitized by Google

The river, as a fact, runs close under the village, and the range in question is absolutely non-existent.

These same non-existent hills, with the same evident purpose, are provided with a population of no less than three savage tribes, with their designations carefully appended, extending to the junction of the Husung with the main river. This tract consists, as a fact, of a few rice fields, bordered by the sandy river shore, and is uninhabited. It was our usual bathing place while at Manwyne.

In the written depositions Erh-kŏn is made to assert that he "could not join in" the murder or robbery because he was "shot by the foreigner." In his re-examination he is represented as having received a sword wound from the foreigner.

When at the trial it was asked which man was wounded, Chiang Taotai at once replies, "Erh-kon." The interpreter interposes, "The wounded man is not here," thus taking upon himself to contradict the depositions and the official list of culprits. Upon the question being put to Erh-kon, the savage denies with an air of exceeding contempt that he was ever wounded at all.

It would seem scarcely possible to crowd so many contradictions into so few words.

The written opinion of Wu Ch'i-liang, that "when ten or more foreigners secretly enter the passes without previously informing our officials, there is a clear precedent for what should be done" boarders with suspicious clearness on a justification of his action, as having had clear precedent for what he did. In any case, this impudent declaration is in full and flat contradiction of the Commissioners' statement, that "the officials, seeing their passports, knew very well that they should be allowed to proceed."

The mention of the man Liu Hsiao-hung as present at the murder is another indiscreet lapsus on the part of the Chinese.

This individual, whose person and history have long been well known on both sides of the border, is neither a "robber by profession," nor a "wild man," nor a "Chinese renegade," nor a "Chinese kidnapped when young." By the Burmese he appears to have been looked upon as a minor Chinese official, but he is, in all probability, nothing more than a protégé of Li Ch'ên-kuo. His presence at the murder, and implication in the act, as asserted in the depositions, summarily disposes of the statement that the affair was a mere fracas with savages rising out of a demand for black-mail.

General Lei, the officer entrusted with our escort to Manwyne, asserts that this person planned the murder, having been sent from T'eng-yueh for the express purpose by the Commandant Chiang.

Lei, moreover, had instructions for his apprehension, and circumstantially informed Mr. Baber of the fact, indicating the characters of the name on his hand in the usual Chinese manner.

Whether Liu Hsiao-hung was present at the murder, or merely a witness of it with the band which Mr. Margary had just passed, or whether he returned to the attack on Colonel Browne from another direction, there seems little doubt that he is the "shoukgoon" mentioned in the Burmese letter as having been met returning from the fight; "shouk-goon" or shoung-goon" being the Burmese form of his name (Hsiao-hung), by which he has long been known in Bhamo and the neighbourhood.

It is difficult to believe that the band admitted by the Chinese to have been passed by Mr. Margary, and which could only have been passed just before he reached the scene of his death, held aloof from the murder; or even that the murderers and this band were separate parties; but assumptions of this kind are foreign from my present purpose. I merely take the Chinese case and indicate the inconsistencies and contradictions which it involves.

The letter of apology presented by H. E. Kwoh, the Chinese Minister, on his presentation to Her Majesty is given. It states :—

That Mr. Margary, whilst travelling under passport within the frontier of Yünnan, should have lamentably been murdered, is a fact which not alone involves the question of a loss of life, but which also has gone near to disturb our relations of amity and concord. We profoundly regret and lament it. We have now made special appointment of Kwoh Sung-tao, an acting Senior Vice-President of the Board of Ceremonies, and one of the Ministers of the Office of Foreign Affairs, as Envoy Extraordinary, to proceed to your Majesty's country to give utterance, on our behalf, to the sentiments we have at heart, as a proof of our genuine desire for amity and concord.

We know Kwoh Sung-tao to be an officer of capacity and experience, of loyalty and truthfulness, who is in disposition amicable and just, and far-reaching in intelligence. He has acquired great familiarity in the treatment of affairs between Chinese and foreign Powers. We would ask that sincere confidence be reposed in him, to the end that the blessings of friendly concord may for ever be experienced in the highest degree, and that all alike may enjoy the happiness of a state of peace. This, we doubt not, will be greatly to the satisfaction [of your Majesty].

Sir Thomas Wade's elaborate memorandum, which, had it appeared sooner, would have been of very great interest, concludes this valuable batch of papers. The document, though lengthy, is still of a very valuable description, and sets forth in a clear light many points which were hitherto doubtful. It is important to note that Sir Thomas Wade declares his opinion very emphatically against the removal of exterritoriality as proposed by Mr. Hart, and places a construction upon the clauses of the Treaty relating to this, which will be generally accepted as reasonable. He says :—

I am myself satisfied that no distinction was contemplated between civil and criminal procedure either in 1843 or in 1858. On the other hand, difficulty had been occasionally experienced where British subjects, being defendants, had to be tried before a higher Court than the Consul's. This, until 1865, might have been, in some cases, the Court of the Superintendent of Trade, in some, the Supreme Court of Hong Kong. In either case the Chinese, when it suited them, would uphold that, as the Treaty named no one but Consuls, appeal to any other authority was in contravention of Treaty.

It was to meet this allegation that, in 1858, the words "other public functionary authorised thereto" were introduced after the words "tried and punished by the Consul" in Article XVI. Here again, I admit, the Chinese text, for which I am also responsible, might have been more precisely rendered; but, at the time, not without considerable amplification. The words British Government were consequently used, as the Chinese use similar words, to include any or all of Her Majesty's servants, small or great. Any obscurity on this head is now obviated by the text of my agreement, which declares the establishment of a Supreme Court at Shanghai with a special code of laws, which it is obliged to revise, that Court having been established in order to the fulfilment of Treaty obligations.

The Supreme Court at Shanghai, which, in 1865, superseded alike the jurisdiction of the Superintendent of Trade and the Supreme Court of Hong Kong, had been equally with the latter a point of attack both at Shanghai and elsewhere, not in all instances, but whenever a decision has differed from what the Chinese authorities desired or expected, whether on the civil or the criminal side.

I am compelled to declare my belief that the letter of the Treaty has had little to say to the objections advanced against the decisions of our Courts, higher or lower; and although the Articles of my Agreement may save the Legation some bickering over the text of Articles XVI. and XVII. of the Treaty of 1858, or over the absence from that Treaty of any precise words describing the higher Court which, among other functions, is created to regulate the judicial proceedings of the Consuls, that improvement in the administration of law which is to bring it nearer our notions of justice is still far to seek.

No nation, undoubtedly, has worked harder at its legislation than China, and although the spirit of its code is eminently vindictive, I should not deny its framers the credit of an earnest desire to be just. But in the way of justice there are, at least, two serious impediments; an ignorance which renders due appreciation of the value of evidence, especially in criminal cases, impossible, and a dishonesty that would be fatal to the administration of any laws, no matter how enlightened. In a case the termination of which is just announced at Peking, we have a woman wrongly convicted, on a confession extorted from her by torture, of the murder of a husband who died a natural death; the injustice being so patent that the fellow-provincials of the accused appealed to Peking. Orders being issued for a re-hearing of the case, the former decision was affirmed in the province, and this a second and again a third time. The proceedings were then removed to Peking, and it is in the end established that Magistrates of Districts, Prefects of Departments, the Governor of the Province, and the high officer charged with the public instruction of the Province, who had been specially commissioned to re-hear the case, have all more or less combined to conceal the delinquency of the first authority who heard it, with whose guilt the rest, his seniors, had associated themselves either through carelessness or from a corrupt motive. It is vain to talk of the abandonment of our ex-territorial jurisdiction in China so long as burlesques so revolting are dignified by the name of judicial proceedings. These had lasted over two years.

The despatches from Sir Brooke Robertson, Consul at Canton, Sir W. Medhurst, Consul at Shanghai, and Mr. Mongan, Consul at Tientsin, with reference to the posting of the Proclamation, are given.

THE NEW PORTS.

A correspondent writing from Shanghai with reference to th new ports says :—

Of the new ports opened under the Chefoo Convention, Wenchow has up to the moment turned out the most immediately successful. The latest news from thence indicates prospects of increasing trade. The importance of Ichang, which in itself is not a port of commercial activity, remains to be developed through the opening of the Upper Yangtsze. Wuhu will probably ship tea and take imports in a moderate way next year, and Pakoi will develop by degrees, though less rapidly, perhaps, than Kiungchow, which bids fair to be a successful experiment. Meanwhile the deterioration in the quality of Manchester goods is making itself felt everywhere most prejudicially, and the benefits of an insane competition are probably by this time beginning to be appreciated.

YOKOHAMA.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 11th July, and we have advices via San Francisco fourteen days later, viz., to the 25th July. The French mail from London, June 1, arrived out on the 16th July, and the following P. and O. mail of June 8 was received on the 21st July.

Since the departure of last mail the Yokohama papers contain very little further intelligence concerning the progress of the rebellion. The Choya Shimbun gives the subjoined with reference to the operations at Kagoshima:—

A letter from Kagoshima says that since the 7th of this month the roar of the rebel cannon has never ceased, and the shells were falling into the chief encampment of the Imperialists and the Kencho, in consequence of which the officers of the Kencho have removed their families and furniture to the old castle. The rebels are said to have fourteen pieces of artillery.

The rebels in Kagoshima have divided themselves into two bodies and surrounded the Imperialists; one body has taken up a position west of Kagoshima, encamping at Ishiki, with lines extending to Tagami. These are all men who have returned from Higo; their number is about 1,200, besides 800 goshi (half samurai, half farmers) who have joined them. Most of the goshi are armed with old-fashioned muskets; only one-tenth of them have Minié rifles. If it be asked how the rebels got there? then the answer is that they must have marched from Okuchi, which lies north-east of Kagoshima, to Kokubu, and from thence in junks passed secretly round the men-of-war which are stationed in Kagoshima Bay, and landed in the rear of the Imperialists, at Arata. This movement of the rebels is said to have very much impressed the Imperialists.

The second body of rebels have made their encampment at Yoshino. They are said to be superior in number to those of Ishiki, and their commander is said to be Kirino, but this is very doubtful, as Kishima and Nakamura are also said to be in command of the whole army. In regard to numbers the rebels are much inferior to the Imperialists, and on that head there is no cause for fear. But the Imperialists in Kagoshima keep on the defensive and never make a sortie to attack the rebels; the reason of this is that the rebels, being natives of the province, are thoroughly acquainted with the country, which permits them to carry on guerilla warfare with great success. They appear and disappear; if the Imperialists make an attack on the right, suddenly another party springs up on the left; if the Imperialists make a front-attack, they are themselves attacked in the rear. Besides, nearly all the goshi, who have not openly joined the rebels, are in secret communication with them, and whenever the Imperialists make a slight advance beyond their lines of defence they find their line of retreat cut off by the rebels. Lately a battalion of Imperial troops fell into an ambuscade, and was very severely handled. For these reasons the Imperialists now keep within their lines of defence, and do not attempt any attack upon the rebels; and the Imperialists' line of defence is as strong as an iron wall, making it impossible for the rebels to pass.

The Report on the Trade of Yokohama by Mr. Consul Robertson for the year 1876 is published. The import trade falls below that of 1875 by $3,112,029, while the export trade of 1876 exceeds that of 1875 by $8,965,149. Of the above sum of $3,112,029, as exhibiting the decrease in the import trade of 1876, only $260,805 is the decrease in the actual trade of the place, for while in 1875 articles on Government account figured for $3,119,535, in 1876 they only amounted to $621,284, or a decrease under this heading of $2,498,251.

Reviewing, however, the general result of the import trade for the past year, Mr. Robertson thinks he is right in saying that more satisfaction in respect to trade is generally expressed, and it is admitted that not only have profits been realised on most goods, but that heavy losses on the importations of the year have been avoided. He goes on to observe that merchants must necessarily be actuated by different motives in disposing of their goods, and while one is enabled to quit his consignments immediately on arrival, incurring perhaps but a small loss, another may have peremptory orders not to sell unless a profit can be realised, and in the attempt to gain this end a further loss has generally to be submitted to, for he is informed that in nine cases out of ten an offer once refused is but seldom improved upon unless from some unforeseen and unexpected circumstances.

Referring to the question of Exchange, he says:—

The low value of silver created great apprehensions at one time, and it was feared that the rate of exchange might decline to 3s. 6d. for six months' sight bills or even lower, and this to a great extent prevented shipments being made to this market, for prudent men were naturally disinclined to enter into transactions when it seemed impossible to foresee at what rate their money could be returned to them. Indeed, I understand that so fearful were some of the tendency to depreciation in silver that they would listen to no transactions unless the exchange was settled at home at the time of entering into it. The failure of the silk crop in Europe naturally re-acted upon the market, and the banks being unprepared for the large purchases made both here and in China, the consequence was a great scarcity of money and a rise in exchange from 3s. 9½d., at which it had stood in March, to 4s. 6d. The fluctuations subsequently were considerable, and though this rate was not maintained, exchange ruled much higher than what had been expected, rendering the outturn of goods satisfactory in a corresponding ratio. The Japanese, too, were enabled to purchase more freely, and I am informed that at one period of the year the excitement among the import dealers was such as had not been witnessed for many years.

From the Japan Herald we take the following:—

Mr. Benson, late Municipal Director, has been invited to visit the Kencho, where Mr. Nomura, the Governor of Kanagawa, complimented him very highly on the manner in which he had performed the duties of his office. He also presented Mr. Benson with a substantial acknowledgment of the aid and assistance he had rendered to the Japanese Government. In the evening Mr. Benson was entertained at a dinner at the Grand Hotel by the Governor and the principal officers of the Kencho.

The despatch of troops to the seat of war still continues. The Genkai Maru sailed on July 14, the Kumamoto Maru on the 15th, the Saikio Maru on the 16th, and the Wakanoura Maru on the 17th July. All these vessels are filled with troops, and the number embarked must be nearly 5,000 men, who are under the command of Prince Higashi Fushimi-no-miya. The majority of these new levies seem, however, mere boys, not at all fit for hard work in the field.

The repairs of the late Candia have now been completed, and on the 15th July she left Yokoska and proceeded to Shinagawa. She left here on the 17th July, with troops for the South, taking the small steamer Suwonada Maru in tow. In consequence of her late accident, the Japanese appear to think that her name is unlucky, and it has therefore been again changed. In place of the Amakusa Maru she will in future be known as the Wakanoura Maru.

The annual celebration (the summer opening of the Sumidagawa for pleasure traffic) took place on the 15th July. Thousands of spectators lined the banks of the river, filled the tea-houses, and crowded the bridge. The fireworks were better than usual, and an infinity of paper lanterns decorated the myriad of boats on the river. The coup d'œil was remarkably gay, and gave much gratification to those present, both natives and foreigners.

The rumour that another foreign loan is contemplated, which has been reproduced by one of our contemporaries, has been contradicted by the native journals.

A statement has appeared that the number of cards issued for silk worms' eggs this year will amount to over three millions, of which one-third will be for exportation.

The submarine cable between the islands of Yesso and Nippon has, after having been disabled for a long period, been again placed in working order.

The Japan Mail has the following description of the annual distribution of prizes to the cadets of the Imperial Naval College:—

A number of visitors, both native and foreign—amongst the latter of which we noticed a leavening of ladies—assembled by invitation of the Japanese authorities upon the 13th inst. at the Kaigunsho, for the purpose of witnessing the annual distribution of prizes, now for the first time held in public, to the cadets of the Imperial Naval College who were successful at the midsummer examinations.

Owing to the difficulty of finding a suitable room in the building the ceremony was held upon the parade-ground of the institution, where a central marquee for the officials of the college, flanked by two rows of open tents to accommodate the visitors, had been erected. In the mid space thus left the cadets, upon whom no doubt the future efficiency of the navy of Japan will altogether depend, were drawn up in double line, under command of the officer of the day. The ceremony was a simple one enough; upon the name of the prize-winner being called he stepped out of the ranks, and advancing to the table in the marquee, received at the hands of Rear-Admiral Nakamuda the prize for which he had fought, after which he retreated to his former position amongst his comrades.

The examinations, of which these proceedings were an appropriate sequel, may be described as a triple event, composed, firstly, of the ordinary class examinations designed to ascertain the amount of progress made by each individual cadet in the subjects taught to him during the previous twelve months; secondly, the entrance examination for students prepared at the Preparatory School attached to the College; and, thirdly, the final examination of cadets whose period of theoretical instruction had come to an end, and who, on receiving certificates of efficiency, are drafted to the training-ship for one year's practical instruction afloat, at the end of which time they become eligible for promotion to the rank of sub-lieutenant.

YOKOHAMA, JULY 25.

The past fortnight's business in Silk has been very limited, owing to the demands of native dealers for higher prices. The increased rates are unwarranted by any favourable advices from Europe, and are simply forced upon purchasers, who have in consequence confined their operations to a few trifling settlements, aggregating about 500 bales. Quotations are easier, as stock is accumulating, and a fair business will probably ensue upon more reasonable prices being accepted. The unsold stock is about 900 native bales, and business might be done at a trifle under current quotations. To pay at the rate of 22s. per lb. here, when rates are about 18s. in London, with little if any prospect of an immediate rise, is speculation of the rankest sort.

Owing to the accumulation of wounded men in the hospitals of Nagasaki and Osaka an outbreak of cholera is thought to be more than likely. By the mail just in I learn that there are reports of several cases at the latter place. It is certainly raging in Amoy, and other of the Chinese ports; and the fears of its being imported into this place have been so far productive of a good result that a Quarantine Hospital is being rapidly erected on the shore of Mississippi Bay, a couple of miles out of Yokohama, to provide accommodation for cases which may possibly arrive. The Governor of this Ken, in concert with the Consular Board, is framing regulations for quarantine, which there is every reason to hope shall be strictly enforced, if necessary.

I regret to announce the death of Commander Bax, of H.M.S. Sylvia, which took place at Nagasaki.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The correspondent of the Shanghai Courier, writing under date July 3, says:—

Herr von Brandt, the German Minister, has again succeeded in obtaining favourable consideration from the Chinese Government to his demands, it being now arranged that negotiations with the whole of the Powers represented at Peking are to be re-opened in the autumn on the question of lekin and such like irregular taxes on foreign goods not authorised by Treaties. The Chefoo Convention, therefore, will be of no effect as regards its lekin clauses.

Before Herr von Brandt could obtain the assurances he required from the Tsungli Yamen respecting the negotiations on the lekin question, he was put to the trouble and expense of a journey to Tientsin. That is, he was compelled to put this pressure on the Chinese Government; and it was only in deference to the earnest advice and representations of the Grand Secretary Li Hung-chang that he consented to return. When he arrived in the Capital again, he found that his show of determination had had the desired effect, and the result we know.

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News correspondent writes :—

The "Glorious Fourth" has come and gone again. The day was not ushered in by the "booming of artillery," as is the "time honoured custom" in many places, but more quietly, as the sun arose, with the "Star Spangled Banner" by the band of the Monocacy—an equally appropriate and impressive way of beginning the day, we would fain believe. The day was not as propitious as could have been wished. There were light falls of rain or mist all the forenoon. The sun appeared for a short time in the early afternoon, which gave hope of clear weather for the execution of the programme.

The procession formed at the U.S. Consulate, and proceeded to the place selected, near the Settlement, for the various performances. These furnished a great deal of amusement to all present, to none more than to the "jack-tars" themselves. The most comical of all, with its jumping, tumbling, rolling, scrambling, was the "race in sacks."

After these various performances were finished the procession reformed, and the representatives of "George Washington" and the "Goddess of Liberty" were escorted back to the place of starting. We cannot speak too highly of the morale of those who took part in the performances of the day, whether it be of their external appearance or of their conduct and behaviour. The entire ship's company, saving perhaps four or five to keep guard, were on shore, and, with scarcely an exception, returned on board sober. As the entire affair was managed by the ship's company, including the petty officers, too much praise cannot be given them for the creditable manner in which they acquitted themselves.

In the evening the ship was beautifully illuminated with about 1,700 lanterns, and many transparencies—stars, shields, &c. the vessel's name on the wheelhouse, and the motto "E Pluribus Unum." The wind was so high that most of the elevated lights were soon extinguished, and a large and beautiful transparency suspended at the mast-head was carried away. But the lower lights gave a beautiful appearance to the vessel as one viewed it from a little distance. There was also a fine display of fireworks.

The only features which detracted from the pleasure of the day were the constant "spits" of rain during the performance and the wind in the evening, yet it was generally voted a success.

The locusts have made their appearance in this province as well as in the south. They have come in great quantities, and extend over large tracts of country. Whenever I have met them, they are migrating eastward, but so slowly as to leave only a barren track behind them. An idea of their destructiveness may be formed when it is said that acres of "kaoliang," or large millet, already having attained the height of twenty to twenty-five inches, was stripped of its blades, only a stalk of six or seven inches remaining. The people are ploughing and replanting such things as they hope may ripen before the autumn frosts—beans, buckwheat, &c.—but the prospect is sad enough.

The rejoicings over the wheat yield, and the promises of the springing grains, are turned into gloomy forebodings, for "they (the locusts) eat everything," and desperate ventures are made for another crop.

In addition to this calamity, the "tail-cutting mania" has also made its appearance in the country south-west and south of this.

A placard has been posted in the town of Ning Ching, in Pechihli, describing the horrors of tail-cutting, and recommending various charms as antidotes. A correspondent, in sending us the placard (which is said to have been posted by the local magistrate), mentions a report that tales of the doings at Ning Ching having come to the ears of the Viceroy, he sent deputies incog. to investigate, and that one had been buried alive! If so, we would not give much for the Magistrate's tenure of office. He will be lucky if he saves his head. It will not be necessary to show that he was cognisant of the deed. It will be enough that he governs so badly that such things are possible. The reference to the Futai of Kiangsu will be remarked. It may be remembered that this official distinguished himself, in the early part of the year, by a memorial on paper-men and tail-cutting, which we characterised at the time as dangerous and reprehensible. Here we have, possibly, one of the effects of thus officially recognising the absurd tales, and connecting them with foreign missionaries. This is no longer done so openly as it used to be, but the implication is unmistakable.

NEWCHWANG.

A correspondent of the North China Herald says :—

On the 6th of the 5th moon (16th June) the new native tax came into force. On all imports the fee which was charged was 3½ mace per Tls. 100. It is now to be 7 mace per Tls. 100 (double) on arrivals per junks and foreign vessels. Shipments per foreign vessels, which were not taxed before, are now to pay 4 mace (four mace) per Tls. 100. The troops which the Taoutai says are wanted by the Tartar General have not arrived yet, and the extra impost is required to pay towards their maintenance. It is possible that more force is necessary to put down brigandage; but I should not be surprised if the near approach of the Russians, whose quarters are unpleasantly near to the Empire—some say they are actually on Chinese territory—were the bete noire to be put down, as much as the sword racks or mounted highwaymen.

The Wm. Phillips is in port, and some say that she is or will be arrested by the Chinese Government on account of the collision and sinking of a native vessel last autumn. We hardly suppose, however, that the Wm. Phillips will be troubled, as the captain stood his trial and got a clean verdict. If he was favoured by the Court he is not likely to object; but if the native Government is displeased it should go for the United States. It seems likely to become a national question. What a pity the United States Consul did not have the Taoutai on the bench with him. The plaint now is that the junk owner was not allowed time to appeal, as the vessel left the day after judgment was pronounced. Some latitude should have been allowed for notice of appeal, as in British Courts. If the Taoutai goes on the principle "possession is nine points of the law," and takes the Wm. Phillips, it would make the United States plaintiffs, and perhaps substantial justice would then be done in the premises. Anyhow the poor junk people lost Tls. 4,000—for being at anchor where hundreds or thousands had anchored before, and where not a few foreign vessels have also anchored.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 15th July; the French mail from London, June 1, was received on the 13th July.

The North China Insurance Company held an extraordinary meeting on the 9th July, in order to sanction further ad-interim dividends. The aggregated balance shown in the open statement for the two years 1875 and 1876 was Tls. 289,640. It was decided to appropriate Tls. 70,000 in proportion to the number of shares held, Tls. 70,000 in proportion to the premia contributed, and to add Tls. 70,000 to the Reserve Fund, keeping the balance of Tls. 79,640 in hand to meet outstanding liabilities. The return to contributors would be 3 per cent. for 1875, and 4 per cent. for 1876, making with the contributory dividends previously declared, 13 per cent. for each of the above years.

Attention is called in the North China Daily News to the anomalies connected with the postal system in Shanghai, and suggests that it would not be impossible to remedy this state of affairs, and at the present time what little difficulties once existed have been got rid of by the establishment of the system denominated the Postal Union. It was only a few months ago that the British colony of Hong Kong joined, with the approval of the Home Government, the Union. Similar permission has been granted to other British colonies, the result being that, by a system of mutual collection, it becomes possible for the institution to despatch mail matter to the most distant and isolated parts of the earth. "The Municipal Government has certainly not shown itself backward in taking up new-fangled ideas. Some people think, indeed, it has occasionally gone too far; but in this matter of postal reform it has stood still and permitted things to take their own course. There is therefore no primâ facie reason why Shanghai should not become a member likewise, and no one will deny that the convenience of such a course to the residents would be very great. The machinery already exists in the Local Post-office, which undertakes the receipt and delivery of letters within the Settlements and from Home ports; and the extension of the office to include mails arriving by, or to be despatched by, foreign-going vessels need not require any substantial change. The disadvantage of joining the Union would be that a plain and simple system of accounts would be introduced, which would be perfectly understood by all other countries in connection with the Union; and which, so far from entailing additional expenses on the powers subsidising mail services, would result in considerable economy to all. The only question is, whether the Municipal Council would be recognised as a body having a sufficient status to be admitted into the Union."

The above-named paper gives the following items :—

Some rather sharp correspondence seems to have been exchanged between the Taoutai and the U.S. Vice Consul-General, regarding the foreshore of the river at the Astor House corner. The Taoutai protests against the filling in of the foreshore as implying a surreptitious acquisition of land to which the projectors have no right. Mr. Bradford remarks that the foreshore in question is comprised within the Bund scheme, which was some time ago sanctioned by the Council, the Foreign Consuls, and the Taoutai's predecessor; and that H. E. should be more careful to ascertain facts before making charges. There is no doubt the Taoutai, in this instance, is in the wrong. We are glad, however, of any indication that encroachments are being looked after; and hope the Taoutai will turn his energies to more useful purposes. If he would take some steps to preserve the river channel, instead of caring so anxiously for the ground rent of the accretions which are injuring it—he would immortalise himself.

There have been two cases of drowning of foreign seamen in the Hwangpoo during the present week. The first happened on the 9th July, on which day John Lawson, an able seaman of the Sir Lancelot, fell from a plank while cleaning the ship's side, was swept away by the current and no more seen alive. The second case occurred on the 12th July, when James Muncaster, cook of the Caller Ou, accidentally fell from a sampan, and sank before assistance could be rendered. Both bodies have been recovered, and inquests held, the finding in each case being accidental drowning.

The hearing of the charge of perjury arising out of the Tunsin collision case again occupied the attention of the Mixed Court during the greater part of the 13th July afternoon. Chang-van-ho, the owner of the lost junk, was ordered into custody, and, in answer to Mr. Robinson, adhered to his statement made in the Supreme Court that the other accused, Hoo Ts'en Ts'ei, alias Chung Chu-dang, was his supercargo at the time of the collision. Both prisoners were remanded for a fortnight, and bail was allowed. The prosecutors gave an undertaking that if in the opinion of the Court there were insufficient grounds for having instituted these proceeding, they would compensate the prisoners. Mr. Drummond represented the prisoners, and explained that it was owing to a mistake he did not appear on the previous occasions; he had not been informed when the case was to be heard, and was in ignorance of it being before the court until he saw the report in the papers.

A curious nuisance case has been decided by the Mixed Court. It appears that a native working jeweller, whose shop is in the Foochow-road, close to a large foreign hong, appeared to answer a complaint made against him by the occupant of the hong of causing continual annoyance, while in the exercise of his trade, by hammering on an anvil, frequently from an early hour in the morning till a comparatively late hour at night. Defendant had been spoken to privately on the subject, but had taken no notice. It did not appear that the noise was considered generally annoying, but it was so considered by the complainant, and the Court decided that the defendant should be restrained from making the noises complained of from six A.M. to eight A.M. on week days, and altogether on Sundays; but that he be allowed to work from eight A.M. to eight P.M. on week days.

A correspondent writes to us upon the above case, and observes, we think with considerable justice, that the decision is certainly unduly hard upon the jeweller; and that it is absurd in a commercial city, as the Foreign Settlement in Shanghai virtually is, that a man should be forbidden to work between 6 and 8 A.M. because one particular individual objects to it.

The Celestial Empire has the following:—We are sorry to hear of the large amount of sickness which is said to be prevalent just now among the Chinese. Their malady seems to be a species of cholera or choleraic diarrhœa, and many deaths are reported daily in the city. We have often thought—indeed it has been often represented to us by Chinamen themselves—what an excellent thing it would be if the Shanghai Waterworks Company could extend the blessings of its operations into the native town. The residents there have absolutely no water fit to drink, or even to wash in—for Chinamen do wash sometimes—and we have been assured that any scheme whereby a plentiful supply of clean, fresh, sweet water could be purveyed would be warmly supported by a large majority of the inhabitants, and prove a great boon to both themselves and the promoters.

The Celestial Empire prints the subjoined strictures on the proceedings of tea buyers at Hankow:—

At Hankow prices have been steadily advancing, exhibiting the infatuation that besets a knot of tea buyers isolated from the larger business centres, with nothing to do but to compete with each other and no news from the outside world to disturb them. We have instances this week of more than one chop bought up the river for resale here realising a loss to the sanguine speculator of four to five taels per picul. The misfortune to all connected with the trade of the removal of the bulk of the black tea business from Shanghai to Hankow has never shown itself greater than in this present season. Were Hankow connected by wire with this port the evil would be considerably mitigated, but as there is not the slightest chance of the present generation of Chinese permitting this innovation, we can only hope that importers at home will see fit next season to say the word which would stop the tea steamers going up the river to load.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 21st July; no later mail from London had arrived out.

The system of competitive examinations introduced by Mr. Pope Hennessy is being put into practice, and twelve Chinese candidates passed a preliminary examination for the post of second clerk in the Magistracy; and a further examination, in order to decide upon the successful candidate, was to take place shortly.

Hong Kong seems to be going completely through her dull season, even the ordinary run of public matters being interrupted by the fact that several of the officials were absent for vacation. The papers for the time being are silent regarding the changes which it was rumoured were to be introduced by Mr. Pope Hennessy; and from private information we understand there is reason to believe he has wisely seen the advisability of hesitating to proceed to some of the extremes which he threatened to go to on taking office.

The Report of the Hong Kong, Canton and Macao Steamboat Company for the ordinary half yearly meeting to be held at their office on the 25th July has been published. The accounts to the 30th June last show that after paying running expenses, premia of insurance, salaries, repairs, and the sum of $6,727.20 for alterations to the steamer Powan there remains, including $16,484.87 brought forward from last account, a net profit of $33,018.92, from which the directors recommend the distribution of a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. on the paid up capital for the half-year, which will absorb $18,000.00, the appropriation of $2,500.00 as directors' fees, and the carrying forward of $12,518.92 to new account. The directors trust that this result will be viewed as satisfactory, considering that opposition to the company's traffic has continued on both the Canton and Macao lines, and that still lower rates of freight have ruled than at the date of the last report. The alterations to the Powan have been carried out and the new machinery fitted, and it is satisfactory to note that on a trial trip the changes made proved to be as beneficial and effective as had been anticipated. She is now an efficient reserve boat. All the company's steamers have been recently surveyed, and are reported in good working order.

The Humane Society is becoming an established institution in the Colony, and is persevering in its practices. Some little difficulty it seems occurred through the police not being informed that they had permission to practice west of the Sailors' Home; but H.E. the Governor with equal good sense and good taste wrote to the Secretary expressing regret at the circumstance, his interest in the Society, and his hope that they would persevere in their laudable efforts.

The Daily Press recurs to the report of the Hong Kong Colonial Surgeon with regard to opium smoking, taking exception to some remarks which appeared in this paper on the subject. It says:—

There are few young Europeans, we will venture to say, who would make a second trial of the drug. To the Caucasian it is extremely nauseating and disagreeable, and the process of preparing it for smoking is so tedious and troublesome that comparatively few would have the patience to make a second attempt. Indeed, we have heard of several gentlemen who were anxious to really test the effects of opium for themselves, giving up the effort to smoke because of the trouble it cost. The Chinese are naturally very patient, and will spend any amount of time over the pipe, being in this respect, as in most others, true Orientals. But the Western strongly objects to the labour and waste of time involved, and prefers a stimulant which costs less trouble to consume. There is little fear, in spite of the alarmist reports in some of the more sensational American journals, of opium smoking ever coming into favour among the peoples of the West. They are, unfortunately, more likely to eat it as the Indians do, than smoke it. There is, in fact, absolutely no cause for the apprehension expressed by our contemporary. If young men of a sensational turn of mind should be so foolish as to try their hands at smoking we may confidently predict that with nineteen out of twenty the first pipe would be the last, while the others would certainly be satisfied with a second experiment.

An accident was caused at Ma-low-chow (Monkey Island) just outside Macao by the lightning, which was very vivid. There is, as you are doubtless aware, a Chinese Customs station on this island for the purpose of collecting duties from the native junks. The lightning struck the flagstaff at this station and shivered it to pieces. Two Chinese soldiers who were standing by were so terrified by the occurrence that they fell down insensible, and it was at first believed that they had also been struck by the electric fluid. But they dispelled all doubt in the matter in the course of the day by reviving, and the services of two stout-hearted warriors have, therefore, been spared to their grateful country. Some of the native traders who are periodically subjected to the squeezing process would have been just as well pleased if the station itself instead of the flagstaff had been destroyed.

CANTON, JULY 20.

On the night of the 16th instant three Chinese soldiers repaired to a house of ill-fame which is situated in the Ng-sin-tuung-street of this city to dine. Becoming more or less inebriated, they broke the lamps, chairs, and other articles with which the room in which they had dined was furnished, and on the proprietor of the establishment expostulating with them on the impropriety of their conduct, they immediately fell upon him in a most brutal manner. The proprietors of twenty other disreputable houses, which are, also, situated in the aforesaid street, hearing of the misfortunes of their "fellow-in-trade," quickly came, together with several of their male attendants, to his rescue, and soon succeeded in ejecting and driving away the three drunken soldiers. The difficulties of the occasion, however, did not end here. For, in a very short time, the soldiers returned with two hundred of their comrades, and attacked the disreputable houses which the street contains. For some few hours the greatest disorder and confusion prevailed, and many respectable citizens residing in the neighbouring streets were so afraid lest the riot should extend to their quarters that they actually fled, for the time being, from their homes in search of places of greater security. Much property was damaged, several heads were broken, and one person—a soldier—was killed.

A Tartar, who, for some crime or other, was sent, a few years ago, as an exile from Tartary to this province of Kwang-tuung, and who is now a "ticket-of-leave man," had, it appears, pawned at the Hop-Wo pawnshop, which is situated in the Tai-sze-poo-street of this city, a quantity of wearing apparel. On the 13th inst. he called at the place in question and demanded that his articles of clothing should there and then be returned to him. The pawnbrokers said they were quite prepared to comply with his wishes, provided he would refund with interest the sum which had been advanced upon them. This he refused to do, and upon being ordered off the premises as a rogue and a vagabond he ran his bare head—as if it had been a battering ram—full tilt against a stone-wall. The blood, of course, flowed most copiously from the wounds which he had, in this singular manner, inflicted upon himself, and calling to his rescue several persons who were passing at the time, he unblushingly informed them that the wounds from which he was then suffering had been given him by the pawnbrokers. The indignation of the crowd, which had now become very large, was directed against the pawnbrokers; and it was not without great difficulty that they at length succeeded in making the angry populace believe that he who was now the object of their sympathy had been the cause of his own sufferings.

The various scenes of excitement of which we have just given a description are not the only events of the kind which have tended to disturb the peace of certain quarters of this city during the last few days. Thus, as a gentleman named Wong, who resides in the street styled Kong-ngalaan, was celebrating on the 16th inst. the natal anniversary of his aged father, about fifty beggars assembled, as is usual on such occasions, around the door of the mansion in the expectation of receiving presents of money and broken meats. Of these mendicants, twenty, who were somewhat advanced in age, asserted their right in consequence to be first served. To this assertion the younger ones objected, and the result was that a free fight took place, during which earthenware bowls—with one of which each beggar is provided—were thrown right and left by the belligerents. This unseemly struggle was at last stopped by several policemen, who had been summoned to the scene by the terrified members of the Wong family.

On the 6th inst. five malefactors and on the 8th inst. sixteen malefactors were beheaded on the common execution-ground of this city.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

The Grand Canal between Cua-tien and Vaico was opened on the 10th July. This work is the first canal work completed since the French occupation, and the Governor presided at the inauguration. Magnificent triumphal arches were erected by the Annamites in his honour, and great enthusiasm generally was displayed. The Governor, in responding to the toast of his health, said that this magnificent work had demanded on the part of the thousands of workmen who had been so well directed great efforts and great fatigue; and he transmitted to them the expression of the satisfaction he felt at their having been able to undertake and bring this important work to an end.

Several criminals were pardoned in celebration of the event, and about 3,000 natives of note were entertained at a banquet, the Governor taking an opportunity of looking through the hall where they were assembled.

The new canal shortens by three hours the navigation of vessels from Saigon to Mytho, and secures their passage during all states of the tide.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The latest advices from Atchin announce that the Dutch had attacked the stronghold of Tuku Muda Nia Malim, ex-Rajah of Simpang Olim, Panty Siram, and captured the place after a short, but severe fight. The ex-Rajah took to flight, leaving behind a considerable amount in dollars and valuables, thirteen cannon and a large quantity of arms and ammunition. The loss on the Dutch side was one officer and five men wounded. The ex-Rajah was one of the most powerful and wealthy of the Atchinese chiefs, and this success has therefore more than ordinary importance for the Dutch.

An Atchin correspondent of the Sumatra Courant states that so long as large stocks of pepper were on hand at Analabu the population there out of fear of blockade put on a friendly appearance and submitted to the Dutch. But scarcely had the pepper been sold at uncommonly high rates when the apparently submissive and friendly people showed their teeth and revolted.

The Handelsblad of the 16th July says :—"The British ship Christian MacAusland, laden with sugar and hemp from Manila, and bound for the Channel, has struck on a reef in the neighbourhood of the Thousand Islands, and has sunk. The first mate and eight of the crew have arrived at Anjer; the fate of the boats wherein were the captain and second mate is unknown."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 28th July; the P. and O. mail from London, June 22, was received on the 22nd July. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The "counterfeit dollar" case has been tried in the Supreme Court, before the Acting Chief Justice and a common jury. Chan Ah Tye and Chan Ah Soo, two Chinese women, were placed in the dock, charged, first, with delivery of current coin possessed with the knowledge that it is counterfeit; secondly, with delivery to another of coin possessed with the knowledge that it is counterfeit; thirdly, with possession of current coin knowing the same to be counterfeit when they became possessed thereof; fourthly, with possession of counterfeit coin knowing the same to be counterfeit when they became possessed thereof. The trial lasted two days. The Attorney-General, who prosecuted, in opening the case, said that on the 26th June four Chinese women came to Mr. Sheerder's dispensary and told him they wanted to buy a bill on Hong Kong. Mr. Scheerder recommended them to go to the Chartered Mercantile Bank, and they accompanied him there, carrying a basket which they had brought with them. There Mr. Scheerder and the women saw Mr. Scott, the assistant-accountant, and upon being told the rate at which the bill could be granted they went to the cashier and placed the dollars on the counter. The cashier proceeded to count the dollars and found they were all bad. Some of them were bored by him, and by some extraordinary process the silver had been scooped out and lead or tin substituted. However, the substance of the dollars was tin and the outside part silver. The extraordinary circumstance in the affair is that although the cashier discovered by the ring that the dollars were all bad, he permitted the women to leave the bank without handing them over to the police. They were, however, subsequently captured. The Judge summed up the evidence, and, in conclusion, left it to the jury to decide whether a suggestion advanced by Mr. Bond, counsel for the first prisoner, namely, that she was merely a tool in the hands of the other, might be reasonably drawn from the evidence. The jury retired for about three quarters of an hour, and having returned into Court, found by a majority of six to one, prisoner No. 1 guilty, and, unanimously, prisoner No. 2 not guilty. His Lordship directed that the second prisoner should be discharged, and sentenced the first to five years' rigorous imprisonment.

On the 26th July the steamer Kjobenhavn returned from the wreck of the Spanish steamer Gloria, with a quantity of cargo salved, and, we learn, that there is every probability of the steamer being floated off. She is said to be in excellent condition, and would float off herself if the hole or holes in her bottom could be discovered and plugged. Meantime the Admiralty suit with regard to the portion of cargo salved by the German brig Altha is being matured, much to the profit of the lawyers, and we are informed that there are four claimants to the ownership; first, Captain Habekost for salvage, &c., secondly the underwriters; thirdly, the Spanish Consul for his Government; and, fourthly, the company who bought the wreck and cargo at auction.

A few nights since an alarm of fire was given by mistake. It appears that three junks lying at the entrance of Qualla Kallang near Sandy Point were having their bottoms cleared and burned. About twenty men with torches were at work, and the blaze was so great that the man in charge at Fort Canning naturally fired the signal gun. Sub-Inspector Scott and his men were immediately on the spot, and ordered the workmen to reduce the number of torches used.

Ex-Inspector Millar has been found guilty, on the second count of the indictment under which he was charged, of voluntarily causing hurt, and was sentenced by the Acting Chief Justice to six months' rigorous imprisonment.

Mr. L'Estrange, the Australian Blondin, has given two performances on the Esplanade before a large assembly, including H.E. Colonel Anson and Mrs. Anson, H.H. the Maharajah of Johore, and H.H. Tunku Dia Oodin of Salangore.

The French steamer Francois Premier, Captain Lecacheur, from Amoy and Hong Kong, anchored in the roads on the 24th July, with 360 Chinese coolies for the Straits Settlements.

It is rumoured that the French Mail steamers are to call at Penang from the 1st January, 1878.

The following notifications appear in the Gazette:—

The Secretary of State has confirmed the leave of absence to Dr. A. F. Anderson, for two months with full salary and six months with half salary; also to the Hon. H. Plunket, Superintendent of Police, Penang, for six months with half salary.

The Hon. John Douglas, C.M.G., Colonial Secretary, has been appointed Chairman of the Raffles Library and Museum, and of the Gardens, in the place of William Adamson, Esq., who has resigned.

Mr. Peter Auguste Johannes Weber has been granted a certificate of naturalisation.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been quieter. Yarns: The demand had been chiefly for 28-32, and considerable contracts "for arrival" had transpired; 16-24 have also been taken to a moderate extent. Values show little, if any, change. In Grey Shirtings, with exception of 9 lbs. 45 in. goods, which were wanted at higher rates, there had been little doing to test prices. Grey T-Cloths had been dull. Victoria Lawns had met with more attention. Indigo Shirtings remained unchanged. In Turkey Red Cambrics and Black Velvets a fairly large attendance is reported. The demand for Prints had improved. Woollens: More inquiry had been made for Black Lustres and Italian Cloths. In Mousselines a moderate business had been done, chiefly in Plain goods, at rather better rates. Moderate transactions in Presidents are reported. Blankets continued saleable. In Bar Iron there been but a small business, and dealers had exhibited no inclination to extend transactions. In Nail Rods there had been rather more doing, and good brands of small sizes showed some improvement in rates.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—The low prices ruling have at length induced some speculative demand for one or two articles, and an improved feeling has consequently been established. Quotations generally are, however, still unchanged, although the tendency is towards greater firmness. Cottons: A large business has been done in Grey Shirtings by Chinese, the lower qualities being, as usual, principally taken. Turkey Reds: The value of these goods appears to have reached its lowest point, and business has been done at a slight advance. Black Velvets have likewise recovered somewhat, the demand being, however, entirely speculative. Woollens and Worsteds: Black Lastings and Plain Black Lustres are quoted slightly higher. Mousselines de Laine are unchanged. Attention has been directed to some descriptions of Cloth, resulting in an advance upon previous quotations. Blankets have met with fair inquiry. Iron is somewhat weaker.

SHANGHAI.—Piece Goods: All Cotton manufactures had been more difficult to realise, and the amount of private settlements had been limited in the extreme. The usual auctions had been held, but had gone heavily at a decline in value of 2 to 4 candareens under last mail's quotations. A few common 8-4 lbs. Grey Shirtings had been asked for from Tls. 1.09 to 1.26 per piece; Dewhurst's 8-4 lbs. Scarlet Pheasant at Tls. 1.67, Mendel Horse and Jockey at Tls. 1.75 and Hand Chop at Tls. 1.85 per piece. T-Cloths, except few first-class qualities, were neglected, nominal quotations, being without change. White Shirtings; small sales reported of 80 reed goods at Tls. 2.57½ and 64 to 66 reed from Tls. 1.65 to 1.92½ per piece; market quiet. Drills saleable at last mail's quotations, and some 9,000 pieces reported realised from Tls. 1.79 to 1.85 per piece for common 14 lbs. English. Woollens continued saleable, and CPH Camlets assorted were worth Tls. 12.75; HH sold at 12.30 and other better chops up to Tls. 12.60 per piece; assorted HH Spanish Stripes at Tls. 0.54¾. Long Ells improving, 200 pieces V sold at Tls. 6.35 per piece. Prices for Metals remained as last quoted, and the demand for Lead and Iron had been limited; Tin Plates, Quicksilver, and Copper were still neglected.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been rather less business doing, settlements for the period amounting to about 9,000 piculs, while arrivals had hardly equalled that quantity. Immediately after the departure of last mail a decided advance was established for the lower grades. Prices for fine Teas, up, had ruled very irregularly,— indeed, this may be said of all sorts, and it was difficult to give accurate quotations. The s.s. Glamis Castle was expected to load for New York, via Hiogo, China ports and Suez Canal, at £4 per ton. The Etta Loring was loading slowly for New York, at £2 15s.; and the schooner Benedicta had obtained a full freight for San Francisco at terms which have not transpired. Export from 1st May to date: To New York, 3,078,283; San Francisco, 700,729; Boston, Chicago, &c., 1,540,853; England, &c., 1,363. Total, 5,321,228 lbs.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The market had continued active and without much fluctuation in prices. All grades had met with fair inquiry, the lower qualities being in fuller supply. Settlements for the month had been 14,500 piculs, making 37,000 piculs for the season to date, against 26,000 piculs for the same time last year. Stocks were estimated at 2,200 piculs. The s.s. Belgic took forward about 270 tons on the 26th June and the City of Tokio 675 tons on the 5th July. Shipments by the present mail per s.s. Gaelic were 170 tons. The s.s. State of Louisiana left on the 13th July for New York, via Amoy, taking 1,220 tons from this port, and the s.s. Glamis Castle had been circulated to leave about the 2nd August for the same destination, via the Canal.

HANKOW.—During the week a large and general business had been done in second crop teas, and as buyers had been eager to get all parcels of desirable quality, there had been an advance in price, and teamen were realising profits of in some cases Tls. 2½ per picul. As with the first crop the Oanfas had given the best value. The reports of the sales ex Loudoun Castle and Gleneagles were likely to check operations, but more would depend on the opinions ultimately formed of the full extent of the second and third crops. So far the most contradictory rumours were afloat as to the quantity being prepared by the teamen. Settlements and shipments for the week amounted to 31,000 chests; and the total export from Hankow to all parts to date had been 51,007,109 lbs., against 49,938,123 lbs. at same date last year.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Business during the week had been only moderate in amount, settlements being about 8,000 chests, against 27,000 chests in the corresponding week last season. Prices for the very few Teas left with any pretension to quality had remained firm, but the settlements of common and medium Tea had been at daily weakening rates; in fact, but few bids had been made for this class of Tea at all, and natives would have to submit to another considerable drop to effect any sales of consequence. Green: There had been a moderate business during the week, settlements being 10,000 half-chests, viz.:— Fychow, 2,500 half-chests at Tls. 22½ to 27; Pingsuey, 6,000 half-chests at Tls. 22½ to 37; Shanghai-packed, 1,500 half-chests at Tls. 22½ to 29; against a total for the same week last year of 10,000 half-chests Pingsuey at Tls. 22 to 43; and 2,000 half-chests Shanghai-packed at Tls. 23 to 28. The business of the week had been small, the firmness of holders maintaining rates above the views of the majority of buyers. Pingsueys had sold well up to previous quotations. Fychow and Taiping chops had sold at full prices, being very undesirable in quality, besides containing a heavy proportion of common grades, some of which were hardly worth the freight home. Quotations were 4 to 5 taels lower than those of last year; half of this reduction was however lost in inferiority of quality, it being evident that it would not pay the Chinese at current prices to devote that amount of time and care which the manufacture of a Green Tea chop (each line selected and packed up to standard as used formerly to be done) demands.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The demand had been fully maintained, and a fair amount of business had been done in new Hanks, at prices showing $20 advance on those last quoted. In old Silk a few parcels of Oshius and Filatures had changed hands at a slight advance. The high cost of Silk in the interior had made dealers unwilling sellers; the market, however, closed quiet, and a weaker tendency was noticeable. Quotations were:—Hanks, best, Nos. 1 and 2, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 6d. per lb.; good, No. 2, 20s. 5d. to 21s. 2d.; good all round, No. 2½, 19s. 9d. to 20s. 1d.;

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—A few small purchases have taken place this week at unchanged prices, and settlements for the mail are within 200 bales, the principal portion being market Tsatlees. Arrivals up to the third week in June were composed of market chop silks of the first crop, which are being held for high rates, but the later supplies have consisted to a large extent of second crops of a very common quality, very mixed and worse than foul. These latter are being pushed forward for sale, but even in an excited market at home there would probably be great difficulty in even getting a bid for such rubbish, and with such samples to choose from it would appear impossible for any large business to result here. There doubtless remains plenty of good cargo yet to come forward, and until musters of a better quality are shown there seems no chance of any general buying. Taysaams generally seem neglected by native operators, and are not being sent to this market. Including shipments by the mails of the previous three years corresponding to the outgoing steamer, the export was over 14,000 bales in 1876, 17,000 in 1875, and 15,000 in 1874. Settlements of new silk are confined to 750 bales, against 15,000 last season. Stocks are 5,500 bales of new silk and nearly 7,000 of old, against close upon 17,000 bales at the same date in 1876.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—Rice was quoted $2.40 to 2.70 per picul; 28,500 piculs had been exported per Glamis and 19,500 piculs per Cynosure, both vessels being bound to the Channel for orders. Camphor was quoted $18 to 19, Isinglass $25 to 26, Tobacco $10 to 12, and Wax, $10 to 10.50 per picul.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Camphor: Deliveries on account of former contracts had amounted to 650 piculs, in addition to which 500 piculs had been settled at $16.00 to 16.50 per picul. Wax: There had been no transactions, and owing to the limited stock of the unbleached article, dealers were demanding $15.00 to 15.50 per picul, for distant delivery. Tobacco: Operations had been restricted to the purchase of 500 piculs, at about previous rates. There had been no fresh arrivals, and the market had been cleared of all desirable parcels.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co.'s Report says:—Tin: During the fortnight the demand has again been principally for America, 650 piculs having been purchased at $19.45 to 19.15, besides 330 piculs for China, at $19.20 to 19.35, and 150 piculs for India, at 19.30. Available supply at market very small, and at close there are no buyers at $19.15. London advices continue very unfavourable, and there is no inquiry for that market. Gambier: Supplies have been coming to market very slowly, and business has been restricted in consequence. Purchases for England to the extent of 600 tons are reported at $4.60 to 4.70, and at close the higher figure is quoted, dealers refusing to accept less. The demand for America has been quite satisfied by the purchase of 200 tons, at $4.60 to 4.65. Cube Gambier: Transactions have been confined to No. 1, of which description 130 tons have been contracted for at $5.50 to 5.62½, delivery in 4 or 5 weeks; no supplies of No. 2, and the price is nominal. Cutch: No alteration; wanted for the States at about $5, but the market keeps bare of supplies. Black Pepper: The market opened quiet, and the price gradually declined from $7.70 to 7.52½, purchases for England being reported to the extent of 3,780 piculs; since then dealers have held for $7.55, at which 2,100 piculs have been taken. No inquiry for the States. White Pepper: There has been a moderate demand for England, and prices have advanced slightly; 2,030 piculs of Singapore and Rhio bought at $13¾ to 15½, according to quality. Coffee: The only business to note in Bontyne is the sale of 170 piculs at $21½, clearing the market. Bally has come in more freely, and arrivals of 2,100 piculs unpicked found ready sale at $18 to 18¼, a considerable advance on the price previously paid. Further supplies shortly expected, and as there are several buyers for England still in the market, the price is likely to be maintained. Nutmegs: The market has been cleared for the States by purchases of about 200 piculs, and at close the price is firm at $70; further supplies ought soon to be here. Mace: Trifling sales of No. 1 at $50, leaving a small stock, for which the same price is asked. Cloves: Amboyna have been sold at $44, and $45 is now held for; quantity at market is rather large, but the price is firm. Cubebs: Unaltered; no transactions. Sago Flour: The demand for England continues, and 400 tons of Sarawak have been taken at $3.02½, as well as 200 tons of Borneo, at the same figure, both to arrive. Pearl Sago: This article has been in fair inquiry, but dealers, having large contracts in hand, refuse to sell more at present, and prices are nominal at $3.55 for small, $3.65 for medium, and $3.75 for large. Tapioca: 1,880 piculs of Flake have been sold for England, the demand being principally for small, best quality of which has fetched $6.05; good medium is quoted at $5½; nothing done in large. Pearl has been in small supply, and the only sales to note are 50 piculs of medium at $4, and 50 piculs of large at $5. Borneo Rubber: The market has been cleared by purchases for England of 175 piculs at $27½ to $31; more wanted, and further small arrivals expected. Gutta Percha: Finest kinds are again rather weak; sales of White reported at $20.90 to $20. Buffalo Hides: Supplies continue very small, and the only sale reported is 200 piculs of ordinary No. 1 Singapore at $10½. Cow Hides: No transactions to report. Buffalo Horns: There is now less inquiry, and $10½ has just been accepted for 130 piculs of 3 lbs.

ABOUT twenty of the Glasgow city police left last week for Hong Kong, to serve under the Colonial Government. They are under an engagement for five years, at a salary of $40 per month, commencing at the date of embarkation. They will receive a bounty of £15 at the end of the five years, and a pension if they serve for ten.

DR. CHARLES RICHARD ALFORD, formerly Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong, has resigned the vicarage of Christ Church, Claughton, Birkenhead, to which he was appointed about three years ago. Dr. Alford is about to undertake for a time the management of the British Protestant church in Rome.

The London & China Telegraph.

LONDON: MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 3. 1877.

THIS MAIL'S NEWS.

The China papers by the present mail explain more fully than heretofore the manner in which the Chinese Government consented to reopen negotiations with reference to the Lekin taxes. The German Minister was ostensibly the chief mover in the matter, though it is probable that he also had the support of some of the other representatives at Peking. It is stated that he has been engaged in negotiations for the revision of the German treaty; but that he had to go so far as to threaten that if his wishes were not conceded to he would make the Chinese pay for infractions of the actual treaty by taking the execution of it into his own hands. Distressing news comes from Tientsin. The crops were progressing favourably, and it was hoped they would enable the poor people to recover to some extent from the effects of the famine; but the locust scourge has appeared in that neighbourhood, too, where the insects are reported as swarming in such masses as at a short distance to look like a fog bank. Some apprehensions of the plague were also felt at Soochow, but as yet locusts had not appeared in any serious numbers. The memorial which was sent by the Taoutai of Taiwan, Formosa, with reference to the establishment of telegraphs on that island, has been the subject of much interest, as the arguments which he uses in favour of the measure are justly observed to be so powerful that they not only make his case but would "equally support the need for a line between Peking and Canton." The advantages of telegraphy, both to the Government and to mercantile people, are recognised, and the harmlessness of the lines impressed upon the people, who are also carefully informed that the telegraphs will be under the care of the authorities, and must therefore be respected. Some excitement has been caused at a town called Ningching, in Pecheli, by the appearance there of the ridiculous tail-cutting mania. One of the Viceroy's deputies sent to investigate the matter was buried alive. The local news from the ports and Hong Kong is scanty. At Shanghai the hearing of the perjury charge arising out of the Tunsin collision was proceeding; and some correspondence had taken place between the United States Vice-Consul and the Taoutai regarding the foreshore of the river. A correspondent at Chefoo complains that this port, which was a favourite watering place, has obtained an unjustly bad name for fever, in consequence of a few exceptional cases. At Hong Kong the competitive examination system was being put into force for Chinese clerks.

The news from the seat of war in Japan is unimportant. The daily papers make mention of a few skirmishes, but no action of a definite character is recorded. It was, expected that a decisive battle is shortly to be fought, and that the Government were massing all the available troops for the emergency. A body of troops numbering about 5,000 men, under the command of Prince Higashi Fushimi-no-miya, had been despatched, and it was presumed that until the arrival of this reinforcement at the scene of the conflict no important effort would be made. The Mikado still remained at Kioto, but the native papers stated that he would return in a few days to Tokio. One or two slight shocks of earthquake had been felt in Yokohama.

From the Straits Settlements there is no news of importance. The two Chinese women who were detected in an endeavour to pass a quantity of counterfeit dollars at the Chartered Mercantile Bank have been tried before the Supreme Court at Singapore, and one was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, the other being acquitted. There has been a further recovery of salvage from the wreck of the steamer Gloria, and hopes are entertained of saving the vessel itself. Advices from Atchin announce that the Dutch have captured the stronghold of the ex-Rajah of Simpang Olim.

THE SHANGHAI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND THE CONVENTION.

IT is to be regretted that the commendable patience with which the Committee of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce have been awaiting Sir THOS. WADE'S long expected memorandum was not exhausted a little sooner than was the case, and that some such letter as that recently forwarded to the London Committee had not been despatched at an earlier stage of proceedings. Had such been the fact there is every probability that it would have done some good, and it would at least have had the effect of inducing a little more alacrity on the part of the Government than has been displayed by them during the protracted negotiations which have been going on. However, we trust that the action which has at last been taken may prove "better late than never," and that it will be followed up with energy by the representatives of the Shanghai Chamber here to whom it has been addressed, and it is satisfactory that they will have the advantage of the explanations in the recent Blue-book to assist them in any representations they may consider it necessary to make. The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce can hardly be blamed for having thought it desirable to wait until Sir T. WADE'S memorandum was complete before taking steps to bring any remarks of their own before the Government, and we cannot but reiterate the regret which we have more than once expressed at the somewhat unfortunate and certainly misleading course of action which has been adopted in this matter. It would naturally be concluded that Sir THOS. WADE could complete any memorandum he might think it necessary to write in the space of a few weeks, and ordinary courtesy almost made it incumbent upon those interested to wait until he had done so. This reasonable and respectful forbearance has therefore been scarcely well met by the protracted delay; and we almost think the Committee of the Shanghai Chamber might without impropriety have taken, some time back, the action which they have now inaugurated. Fortunately, however, the additional delay which has occurred while the matter is being referred to the Indian Government will give the opportunity which might otherwise have been lost of bringing the views of the leading merchants in China under the cognisance of the Government here. It would undoubtedly be a mistake to ratify the Convention without taking these views into very careful consideration, and it is perhaps to be regretted that Sir THOMAS WADE did not formally invite an expression of them before he left China, in the same way that Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK some years ago asked the mercantile public of Hong Kong to meet him and express their ideas on the Convention which he had then concluded with the Chinese Government. No doubt the peculiar form of the negotiations, originating as they did with the MARGARY difficulty, and being consequently in their first stage of a political rather than a commercial character, made it unadvisable, if not impossible, to call for formal memorials in advance, as was done by Sir RUTHERFORD; but at least when the Convention had been drawn up, the merchants might reasonably have been called upon to express their views, as they are doing at the present time. The gentlemen who represent the Shanghai Chamber here are men of experience, and their Chairman, Mr. MICHIE, is specially entitled to be heard, not only from his long residence in China, but from his having taken part in many matters of this description, and being well versed in such questions.

CHINESE IMMIGRANTS.

IT is somewhat remarkable that attention here has been aroused from two very different quarters to the question of Chinese immigration into European countries or colonies. As recently noticed, the Chinese in America have sent in a petition to Senator MORTON, with a view to obtaining some amelioration of their condition; and late advices from our own colony of Queensland show that the Chinese question is likely to become equally important there—the local Legislature, indeed, having already passed a Bill with a view to restraining the Chinese, though it still requires the confirmation of the Home Government before it becomes law. In both places the question is at bottom the same, though it has, of course, assumed a somewhat different shape in the United States and Queensland, and to some extent its different aspects must be considered separately. In the United States the Chinese labour question is a very old one. Ever since the completion of the Pacific Railway, the accomplishment of which work was due in a great degree to the Chinese themselves, the labouring population in San Francisco have been bitterly hostile to the Chinese, and several severe and wanton acts of cruelty and oppression have in consequence been perpetrated against the despised Asiatic rivals. In this state of affairs it appears that the Chinese in California have petitioned Senator MORTON to bring in a Bill with the object of checking Chinese immigration. They suggest that a tax of $100 a head should be put on every Chinaman landing in America, and that the proceeds of this should be devoted to paying the passage back to China of those Chinamen who desire to go; and it is further proposed that the steamer companies should be induced to take Chinamen back to their native land at $30 a head, while charging $75 to bring them from China. That the Chinese in California have only too good ground for complaint as to the manner in which they are treated is certain; but the remedy which they propose is somewhat noticeable; and we hardly imagine that our astute American cousins will fail to see through the bearing of the proposed Bill. The Chinese already in America place themselves by it in precisely the same attitude as the Irish and other labourers. They have no objection, having already the command of the field, that restrictive measures should be introduced which will have the effect of reducing competition and increasing their earnings. The idea is a clever one; but it is to be hoped that no error will be made as to the precise bearing of the Bill, and that the interest which the Chinese who have set it on foot have in its being passed will be duly borne in mind. We have always considered that the outcry against the Chinese immigrant in America is as unwise as unjust, and that it will be a grave error to do anything which would deprive the United States of valuable labour.

A similar view we hold to be the sound one also with respect to the Chinese labour question in Queensland. Its bearing is very clearly set forth in the article and the letters which have appeared in The Times on the subject, which we reproduce, as well as by an old China resident who writes to us on the subject. There are two phases of the matter which need to be treated separately. First, we have to consider the competition of Chinamen on the gold fields, and secondly their competition in general labour. As respects the first, we can scarcely see that there is much injustice in making Chinese pay a reasonable sum for permission to work upon the gold fields. Such a tax is all the Government is likely to obtain out of the Mongolian diggers, and it is just that they should pay something for the privileges they obtain. But as respects Chinese, who come and settle down as labourers and servants, it would clearly be against the best interests of a rising colony to throw obstacles in the way of so useful a set of men. The question of placing restrictions upon the Chinese in Queensland acquires a somewhat serious aspect in connection with the colonisation of the northern part, where the heat is too severe to admit of Europeans doing outdoor work. It would clearly be a great mistake to allow a narrow restrictive policy to deprive us of labour which would be invaluable in the development of a very important colonial possession.

A DETAILED account of the distress which has been caused by the famine in the Korea, to which we have from time to time called attention, has been furnished to The Times. The state of affairs which is disclosed shows very clearly the grave error which the Koreans have made by the continuance of their exclusive policy as regards foreign nations. There can be very little doubt that, as the correspondent of our contemporary suggests, the Koreans, notwithstanding their exclusiveness would have looked with satisfaction upon the arrival of a foreign vessel with supplies of food; and there can also be no question that had they opened their ports, as has been done in China and Japan, the sufferings which they have had to undergo would have been much less severe than they have been. The present ought to be a favourable opportunity for again urging upon them an amicable opening of ports to foreign nations, and we trust that Sir HARRY PARKES, our Minister in Japan, may be on the watch for an opportunity to bring about this result. It seems very strange that the Korea should grant advantages to Japan which are denied to other nations, and we cannot but think that when the Treaty between Japan and the Korea was signed, our Government should have demanded to be at once accorded the like privileges.

"H.M." has written a letter to The Times, in which, referring to a statement in an extract from the Celestial Empire, regarding opium-smoking, to the effect that both the Chinese Minister and the EMPRESS were "moderate indulgers in the drug," he emphatically denies the truth of this assertion, so far as H.E. KUO is concerned. He says that the whole life of KUO SUNG-TAO disproves the accusation; for, unlike many of his countrymen who have contented themselves with writing essays on the immorality of opium-smoking, or with launching counterblasts against it after the manner of our own King JAMES in the case of tobacco, he has gone to work, and, commencing at home by precept and example, extended his influence until, it is said, there was not an opium-smoker in the place where he lived. Further, on his appointment to the Court of St. James's, the greatest care was exercised by him in order to exclude the possibility of his staff containing a single individual addicted to the vice.

THE Chinese labourers in Cuba have drawn up a memorial of their grievances, in which they complain of ill-usage on the part of their employers. We are informed that no official information has been received with regard to it at the Chinese Legation.

THE Gazette contains the official announcement that the Board of Trade have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a despatch from Her MAJESTY'S Acting Consul at Pakhoi, notifying the opening of that port to British trade.

THE MAIL ROUTE FROM AUSTRALIA TO SUEZ.

A writer in The Times, Mr. C. M. Smith, lately undertook to make comparisons between the time occupied by the steamers traversing the Cape line and those of the P. and O. Company on the Suez route. But notwithstanding some exceptionally fast passages made by a few steamers, he advocates the Suez route as a permanent thing, and herein he shows wisdom and experience. Most merchants know how the attempts to convey mails by the Cape have signally failed. But the writer goes on to argue that the service by Suez might be done in eleven or twelve days' less time, but his demonstration of how this is to be effected is singularly void. In fact, he seems to jump to conclusions, and state them as facts. The only tangible scheme he illustrates is the alteration of the service from Melbourne to Aden direct, instead of Galle, and he quotes the distances. To quote the distance from Melbourne to Galle and from the latter to Aden may suit the landsman who knows nothing of navigation. If Mr. Smith had obtained the aid of any commander acquainted with those seas who would study his charts, and not an ordinary Mercator's map of the world, he would have found that the actual saving of distance by coming direct to Aden would be about 300 miles, or say one day's steam. This slight difference is not to be compared for a moment with the superior advantages of Galle as a junction for the Mail service with England, India, China and Japan.

Correspondence.

THE CHINAMAN IN QUEENSLAND.

A correspondent at Brisbane writes as follows:—

BRISBANE, JUNE 21, 1877.

I have been somewhat amused and not a little surprised at finding that Sir Arthur Kennedy, whose public career I had occasion to watch when in China, will have very much the same problems to deal with here as he had when Governor of Hong Kong. Johnny Chinaman is an undoubted feature of the place, and the difficulties of dealing with him are becoming more and more felt. Your readers are already well acquainted with what the Chinese labour question is in these parts. The Chinaman is a strong competitor with the European, and the feelings entertained with regard to him are anything but friendly. In consequence of this the local Legislature is desirous of bringing in restrictive measures to keep the Chinaman out. I only hope that they will be emphatically negatived at home, as no graver mistake could possibly be made. In a new country like this, and more especially considering the heat which has to be encountered—at times almost as bad as that of China—Asiatic labour must be indispensable, and it will be indeed penny wise and pound foolish to exclude such men because, for a time and in certain special directions, they happen to compete with the English labourers. I imagine that Sir Arthur Kennedy will hardly give his support to such measures as are proposed, though, in face of the evidently strong public feeling on the subject, he has a difficult question to deal with. I do not go the length of holding that the Chinese should have all the benefits of our protection scot-free, and that some special taxes may not advantageously and reasonably be imposed upon such purely transitory visitors, who from their way of life contribute little or nothing to the Exchequer directly; but I do hold that such measures should not be of a restrictive nature, and that it would be a very grave error to do what the public here stricken with "yellow fever" would like to see done, namely, to drive them away from the country altogether. It is fortunate that in Sir Arthur Kennedy the Chinese will find a Governor who is, as his past career shows, always willing to do them justice. As to the difficulties of governing them, I think they are vastly exaggerated, and I have no doubt myself from what I know of the Chinese in Hong Kong and elsewhere that it will be quite possible to maintain order among them here and to make them not only a harmless but a profitable element in the Colony.

SIR THOMAS WADE'S ADROITNESS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I observe in one of the morning papers (the Daily Telegraph) a cleverly conceived article with reference to the Blue-book on the Margary murder and the Chefoo Convention. That paper, however, gives Sir Thomas Wade credit for an amount of diplomatic astuteness which even those who are fully willing to recognise his talents and his merits will scarcely attribute to him in connection with the present matter. It is gravely set forth that Sir Thomas Wade "first demanded satisfaction for the Yunnan outrage," and then "adroitly making this a plea for the opening up of the whole question of our relations with China . . . . . forced the hands of the Celestial Government in regard to these questions also." This is true with the exception of the first and the last words. It can scarcely be said that there was much adroitness in the matter, seeing that the Chinese simply refused such satisfaction as Sir Thomas Wade had demanded; and the Convention touches but very little on the general questions, and cannot be held to settle them and obtain reparation for the Margary murder also. Sir Thomas Wade wished to place himself in a firm position, and the Chinese assisted him to do so by forcing him to deal only upon two widely different subjects. Having got so far we find Sir Thomas Wade's ground adroitly enough changed; but whether the adroitness was on his side is another question. The Chinese having succeeded in this have wisely left the commercial part of the business to the chapter of accidents The claim for reparation for the murder of Margary cannot now be renewed, and they have thus at last the game entirely in their hands; and unless our Government be very wary they will find themselves shuffled off from obtaining commercial concessions of any real value, so that the end will be that after three years' negotiation we shall, in accordance with the well-known proverb, come to the ground between TWO STOOLS.

London, August 29.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The second Chinese Envoy H.E. Liu has been on a visit to the various places of interest in Dublin. On Monday last he visited the Lord Mayor, and was entertained at luncheon, and on the following day, he went, in company of the Mayor, to the Training Schools in Marlborough-street, and expressed much interest in them, obtaining the special grant of a half-holiday to the scholars in celebration of the visit. The party have also been to Trinity College, and inscribed their names in Chinese in the visitors' book. They next visited the Mountjoy Convict Prison, over which they were shown by Captain Barlow, and they expressed (as may be expected, considering what prisons are in China) great appreciation of its cleanliness and order. They were also taken to the National Gallery, through which they were conducted by Sir George F. Hodson, Bart., Colonel L. G. M'Kerlie, K.C.B., members of the board, and Mr. Kennedy. H.E. Liu manifested a special interest in the various works of art forming the collection. After a full inspection they next visited the Royal Irish Academy, the honours of which were done by Captain M'Eniry, resident curator. The Envoy thoroughly appreciated the value and interest attached to the rare collection of relics of ancient Ireland contained there, and was very greatly pleased with a very remarkable collection of Chinese portrait prints. The party afterwards visited the Bank of Ireland and the City Hall. Everywhere they were received with the greatest courtesy and respect. His Excellency Liu-ta-jen, attended by Mr. Liu, Attaché to the Chinese Legation, and Mr Walter Hillier, accompanied by Colonel Caulfield, occupied the Viceregal box in the Gaiety Theatre on Tuesday night.

While at Stoke-upon-Trent the two Envoys visited Messrs. Minton's porcelain and earthenware works. They were accompanied by Mr. Robert Heath, M.P., and Mr. C. D. Adderley; Mr. C. M. Campbell, M.P., head of the firm, conducted the party over the works and showed the various processes. They afterwards went to the Campbell Brick and Tile Company's Works, and inspected the making of encaustic tiles.

H. E. Liu started on Wednesday morning by the nine o'clock train from Harcourt-street for Rathdrum, whence the party proceeded to visit the Seven Churches of Glendalough and the Vale of Avoca, between which two charming spots they spent a most enjoyable day. They returned to town by the five o'clock train, and in the interval between that time and dinner his Excellency visited the poplin manufactory of William Fry and Co., and evinced a special interest in the various stages undergone by the material ere it comes out finished as the celebrated Irish poplin. After dinner the Envoy paid a visit to Hengler's Circus, where the large audience accorded him an enthusiastic reception. H. E. Liu and suite left in the limited mail for Belfast, where they arrived on Thursday morning, and after a stay of a few hours, during which he visited some of the large factories in the town, left by the Larne and Stanraer short sea route for Scotland.

It is satisfactory to find that the Envoys evince so much interest in the practical side of English life. Indeed, they seem indefatigable in their efforts to acquire really sound and useful information.

H. E. Kuo Tah Jen was unfortunately compelled to return from his tour from Stoke-upon-Trent, in consequence of ill-health, and is at present in London. This was, we understand, a great disappointment to him, as Glasgow, Edinburgh, Sheffield, Liverpool, and some other places had notified their intention of giving him an entertainment when he should visit them.

Advices of heavy Tea settlements at Shanghai, notwithstanding the warnings which have been given, have had the natural effect of causing the market here to give way entirely, both in tone and price for all but teas of really fine quality. As will be seen by the details in our market report, a fall of about 1d. per lb. on all good common to medium teas is noted. This is not surprising in the face of the fact that purchases have been made in China at rates fully up to those of last season at this time, when the teas bought eventually sold on this market at 1d. to 5d. per lb. loss. Any hope of an ultimate falling off in the total export for the season 1877-8 seems now more than doubtful, and the reason for such action as has been taken in China is quite inexplicable, seeing that, with one or two isolated exceptions in fine teas, no good has been done by the Tea importing this season; but on the contrary heavy losses have been made in some cases, and the prospects for common teas have long been of the most unpromising character. But still there have been people found sufficiently ill-advised to invest in an article which for years past has been sold at a loss. Without further supplies, there is enough of common teas to last till next Spring, and the stock is increasing. The Eliza Shaw has just arrived with a cargo of old leaf which, according to last sales, is worth 6¾d. to 7½d. per lb. The latest advices by telegram give 97,000,000 lb., against last year, to 31st inst., 103,000,000 lb., while stocks of Congou at Shanghai were 50,000 chests more than last year at the same time, so that at present there are no signs of the short export so confidently expected a month ago, and so much hoped for by those who have the well-being of the trade at heart, and who hope that the position here may be made more profitable.

The Silk market continues as dull and discouraging as ever; indeed, if possible, the stagnation appears to be on the increase, notwithstanding that by the latest advices the settlements in China and Japan are very small. Indeed, the total amount of Chinas this season to London is only 2,000 bales, so that there cannot possibly be any quantity here till October, and the market in China is reported dull and drooping. The only feature giving any encouragement is that the deliveries have been a shade better, especially within the last few days, but the unsettled state of affairs on the Continent generally, and the untoward condition of commercial and manufacturing matters in Lyons especially, take all spirit and enterprise out of the trade. It seems, however, still reasonable to believe that the stagnation is entirely exceptional, and that it would take very little at the present moment to cause a turn for the better.

In the Produce Markets with few important exceptions, all articles have exhibited continued dulness, and the movements in value have frequently been unfavourable to both importers and holders. The advance in the Bank rate of discount has exercised little if any effect. Tea continues flat; common grades of Congou have been sold in auction at a further reduction, and new Pingsuey Greens below valuations. The Silk market is in a condition of complete stagnation. Good and fine qualities of Coffee are again higher, but common kinds are in large supply and lower in value. Sugar has been quiet but steady. The demand for floating cargoes of Rice continues, and thirty cargoes have been sold during the week at a further advance. The quarterly sales of Cinnamon have gone off at an advance of 2d. to 5d. upon the prices realised at the May sales. Black Pepper is dull, and White continues to decline. Manila Hemp is again lower. Nutmegs have slightly advanced. Tin is dull at unchanged quotations.

The Silver Market has been firm since the raising of the Bank rate, bars being quoted 54½d. to 54⅝d. per ounce. It is estimated that the German Government will sell about a million sterling of their demonitised silver here during the month of September, against which they will take a proportionate amount of gold, chiefly, it is believed, from the Bank of England. Mexican dollars are quoted 53½d., showing a fall of ½d. per oz.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Consequent upon advices of heavy settlements in China, the market has given way considerably, and all good common to medium are lower by 1d. per lb. as compared with last week, first crop leaf, sweet useful teas, selling at 8¾d. to 9d., and with Pekoe flavour at 1s. to 1s. 1d. per lb. The Teas of course show serious loss to the shippers, but not to the Chinese producers, or they would not be such eager sellers as this season in China again indicates by the heavy export to date. Were a total stoppage of shipments of third crop leaf (which is not wanted here) to take place there would be some prospect of saving losses; as for profits, such seems to be ignored—the aim of shippers being apparently to flood this market at high cost, which is increased by the high steamer freights on common Tea equal to 15 to 20 per cent. on cost. Green Tea: The new Ping Sueys which have come to hand are very inferior, and only the No. 1 Gunpowders have sold at anything like fair value, at 1s. 10d. to 2s.; the lower lines of the different kinds sell at most extraordinary low prices, down to 6½d. per lb. for Gunpowder. India Leaf: Supplies as usual, at this time, are beginning to arrive. The City of Carthage, from Calcutta on 24th July, took 1,702,449 lbs., being the largest cargo of tea ever despatched.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—We have had a very quiet market during the past week, and the amount of business has been smaller than for some time past. Good to fine kinds of Congou are firmly held, but they are dull of sale, whilst common to fair kinds have sold at a further decline, especially at public sale without reserve, it being very difficult to get offers for this class of Tea privately. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain steady, the quantity offering being moderate. Common to good common, both of old and new season, show no change. Fair to good Saryune kinds have been in fair request at previous prices. Good Kaisow kinds from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. have also been inquired for; the finer kinds have been less saleable. Pak Lin kinds have been without change for good kinds; the fair descriptions have sold rather lower. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common of old season are without change. In new sales have been made from 7¾d. to 9¼d., showing fully ½d. per lb. decline; fair kinds as well as fair to good medium are dull of sale at rather lower rates. Good to fine kinds are firmly held, but it is difficult to get bids at previous prices finest show no change. New-make kinds: Common to fair have sold at last week's prices; the better kinds have been readily taken at full prices. Souchongs: The demand is inactive, and prices have ruled in favour of buyers. Oolongs show no improvement; the Amoy and Swatow kinds are dull of sale, even at the low rates current; good to fine Formosa kinds are saleable. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Common kinds have sold ½d. per lb. lower; the better kinds are also hardly so readily taken as before. Orange Pekoes show no material alteration. Foochow Capers remain much as before. Orange Pekoes have sold at rather lower prices. Green Teas: The demand for old season's show no improvement, and prices remain much as before. About 5,000 packages new season's were sold without reserve Wednesday at from 6d. to 2s. 2d. per lb., being about the same as the opening rates. The public sales have comprised 15,763 packages, which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

Home Consumption	2,254,574 ...	2,230,062
Coastwise	699,117 ...	820,020
Exports	678,749 ...	796,688

SILK.

There is no alteration in the market which has exhibited extreme dulness throughout the week. Quotations are without change.

CINNAMON.—The quarterly public sales held on the 27th ult. offered a total of 1,059 bales Ceylon, against 2,424 bales in May, and 1,196 bales in August, 1876. A good business has been done recently by private contract at advancing prices, and at the sales an active demand prevailed, and nearly the whole of the small supply was disposed of, viz., 900 bales, at an irregular advance, fine being 1d. to 3d., medium qualities 3d. to 5d., and in some instances 6d., and fourth sort 2d. to 3d. above the May sale. Subjoined is the result in detail:—

COTTON.—In the London market transactions have been on a restricted scale, and with prolonged dulness prices have shown a downward tendency, but East India descriptions exhibit only a slight decline either on the spot or afloat, whilst American future delivery is ⅛d. lower. Quotations: On the spot, Tinnivelly 5⅛d. to 5⅜d. fair to good; Western Madras 4⅞d. to 5⅜d., middling fair to good; Coconada 5¼d., fair; Scinde 4⅞d., good fair; Bengal 4⅜d. to 4⅝d., fair to good; Rangoon 4⅞d. to 4⅝d., good. For arrival, Tinnivelly 5⅜d. to 5 7-16d. April sailing to August shipment, good fair.

COFFEE.—As is usual towards the close of the season an increasing proportion of the supply of Plantation Ceylon has consisted of undesirable qualities, which have been rather slow of sale, and prices after slightly advancing have been in buyers' favour, whilst colours has sold with competition and shows an advance of 3s., middling to good selling from 109s. to 112s. Native Ceylon has advanced 1s., good ordinary quoted 86s. 6d. Quotations are:—Plantation triage and low kinds from 74s. to 94s. 6d., common to good small 92s. 6d. to 101s., fine ordinary to low middling faded and grey 98s. to 106s. 6d., middling 107s. 6d. to 109s. 6d., good middling to fine 110s. to 114s., bold 114s. to 120s. 6d., pea-berry 107s. to 114s., Native small 81s. 6d., fine ordinary 88s. 6d., bold 90s., pea-berry 91s. to 92s.; of 1,340 bags Manila offered 700 bags sold, good ordinary pale greenish Indian at 85s. 6d., good pale ditto at 89s., damaged at 85s. to 86s., the remainder being bought in, Indian at 87s. to 88s., yellow 95s., a parcel of 150 bags Singapore was sold at 82s. per cwt.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction the good supply of 670 bales met a moderate demand, but holders being in most cases free sellers, about 450 bales were disposed of at easier rates. BANK BUILDINGS, HONG KONG.

ESTABLISHED 1859.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

SIR THOMAS WADE'S MEMORANDUM.

In continuation of the extracts given last week from the recent Blue-book on the Chefoo Convention we subjoin the more important portions of Sir Thomas Wade's Memorandum. The receipt of the news of the murder of Mr. Margary and the steps then taken are thus detailed:—

On the 11th March, 1875, a telegram from the Viceroy of India, dated 2nd March, reached Peking, informing me that, on the 22nd February, the Mission commanded by Colonel Browne, which Mr. Margary had been appointed to accompany into China, had been driven back by the advanced guard of a force 3,000 strong, which had been moved from Momein to annihilate the Mission by order of the Momein authorities. "Of this," added the telegram, "there is no doubt." Mr. Margary had been killed, whether in the collision or not, was not as yet clear. The attacking party was stated to have been commanded by a nephew of Li Sieh-tai.

The facts, as thus telegraphed, being brought to the notice of the Prince of Kung, a short correspondence ensued, in which, on the Chinese side, promise was given that the Yun Nan Government should be called on for a report, and a recriminatory allusion was made to the recent acquittal of a British subject who had been tried for homicide. It was not until the 19th March, seven days after my first communication, that certain of the Ministers of the Tsung-li Yamen came to the Legation to inform me that the Prince had it in contemplation next day to lay the matter before the Throne.

I reminded the Ministers present of what had passed between me and them after the Emperor's death, and I demanded,

1st. That a special mission should be despatched to Momein to inquire into the circumstances of the outrage reported; the investigation to be conducted in the presence of British officers, to whom special passports must be issued.

2nd. That passports should be given me for a second mission into Yun Nan, should the Government of India see fit to send one.

3rd. That the sum of 150,000 taels should be placed in my hands, to be applied as the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Secretary of State for India should decide.

4th. That steps should be at once taken to give effect to the Treaty provisions affecting diplomatic intercourse.

5th. That steps should at once be taken to relieve British trade from taxation in excess of Treaty provisions.

6th. That all money-claims arising out of the action of Chinese officials should at once be satisfied.

As to the inquiry I demanded, the practice of Chinese Courts, and all other circumstances considered, I scarcely ventured to hope for a result that would content me. It was at the same time clear that, without inquiry, no further action in the case would be possible, and it became me to do my best to prevent such a miscarriage of justice as had heretofore characterised the so-called judicial proceedings instituted where foreigners had been the victims of treachery or violence in China. Outrages, imperfectly accounted for or punished, had been sufficiently frequent since 1860 to justify precautions of the kind. The story of the Tien-tsin massacre, the last and gravest on the list of these atrocities, was scarce five years old. It would be hard to say, in that instance, how little of the evidence was deserving of credence, or how few of the prisoners punished were the really guilty. The magistrates who, if they did not actively promote, beyond doubt by their culpable inaction encouraged, the massacre, were transported, but on separate grounds, and not for their share in the offence as I have here stated it. I considered it indispensable, therefore, that officers of Her Majesty's Government should be present at the trial to hear and see for themselves.

For the rest, the demands relating to diplomatic privileges and trade were put forward not only because I had earlier signified my intention of referring to them, but for the reason, throughout my correspondence so often repeated, that the Yun Nan outrage, I was persuaded, was but the natural offspring of the exclusivist policy of China, our surest guarantee against the consequences of which is expansion of intercourse to the extent that under treaty it is reasonable for us to require. The settlement of claims arising out of official acts, mainly the undue detention of imports or produce, need hardly have been separated from the general question of trade.

The lengthened negociations which succeeded this are then set forth. Sir Thomas says:—

At Tien-tsin the Grand Secretary, Li Hung-chang, and the ex-Governor, Ting Jih-chang, since named Governor of Fuh Kien, were empowered by Decree to treat with me. They urged me strongly to return to Peking, and to allow Mr. Grosvenor to proceed to Yun Nan. I declined, unless I should receive guarantees that Her Majesty's Government was not about to be trifled with, and being called on to name my guarantees, I fell back pretty nearly upon my original programme of the month of March. The reply to my first report home of the demands then made having instructed me that Her Majesty's Government would defer raising the question of indemnity until the result of the inquiry should be known, I made no mention of indemnity; but I demanded, if Mr. Grosvenor was to be sent—

1. That a safe passage as far as the frontier, or across it, should be promised for my secretary (Mr. Grosvenor) and a new Indian mission.

2. The immediate despatch of a Chinese envoy to England with a letter declaring the Emperor's regret for what had occurred.

3. The immediate issue of an Imperial Decree, in which T'sên Yü-ying, the Acting Governor-General of Yun Nan, and Kuei Chou, should be censured from the Throne for delay in reporting progress.

4. The publication in the Peking Gazette of the Decree last-mentioned, as also of the Decree appointing the mission to England.

5. That intercourse between the Government and foreign representatives should be immediately placed upon a better footing.

6. That the irregular taxation of our general trade should at once be rectified.

7. That regulation of trade across the Yun Nan frontier should be considered by any officer whom the Government of India might appoint as head of a new mission, and a Chinese official.

These propositions being referred to Peking, the Prince of Kung wrote to promise me an escort across the frontier of Yun Nan for a new Indian mission. A decree was obtained naming two civilians Envoys to England; also a decree censuring the Acting Governor-General Ts'ên for his dilatoriness. Copies of these were forwarded to me, but their publication in the Gazette, though guaranteed by the Grand Secretary Li, was at once declared impossible by the Tsung-li Yamên. The decree naming the Envoys was subsequently published, but the words representing "British Government" were so placed in the text as to oblige me to object to the discourtesy. I could not get a published decree corrected, and I could only insist upon it that the Envoys, whom there suddenly appeared an extraordinary desire to hurry off, must not be for the present sent on their way. With a mission in England, and Mr. Grosvenor in Yun Nan, it was possibly assumed that pressure, moral or material, would be much restricted.

I had made a very great point of the publication of the papers in question, both on the general ground that, if properly framed, these decrees constitute the most informing affirmations that can be desired of the relations of outer nations with the Chinese Empire, and for the particular reason that, in the decree of censure at all events, the people of China would see some evidence of the indisposition of the Government to identify itself with the perpetration of the Yun Nan atrocity.

The memorandum then goes on to set forth the nature of the negotiations which culminated in the appointment of the mission of Mr. Grosvenor to Yunnan, and the issue of the proclamaton by the Chinese Government, much opposition having been offered by the Grand Secretary, Wensiang, whose irritability is described as having gone beyond all bounds. The shuffling and prevarication which were then resorted to by the officials, and are familiar from despatches which have been already published, are described at length:—

On the 26th May the Grand Secretary Wensiang died. I had already on the afternoon of the same day taken leave of the Prince of Kung at the Yamên, and I had declined a visit from the Ministers on the 30th, when I was led to suppose that the Prince of Kung had a personal explanation to make, and it was arranged that his Imperial Highness should call at the Legation on the 31st. In the forenoon of that day, however, I received fresh information regarding the complicity of the Sub-Prefect Wu; information that I could not make public, without compromising the person from whom it came, but which justified me, in my judgment, in imputing to the Sub-Prefect the immediate instigation to hostility which it had been attempted to fasten upon others; and feeling certain that, as I have just said, the Sub-Prefect would not have ventured to take the part I had reason to believe he had taken, without authorisation, I demanded the citation to Peking not only of the Sub-Prefect, but of his chief, Ts'ên Yu-ying, as well also of the Brigadier Chiang, of Li Chên-kuo, and of the thirty-three notables who had signed the letter earlier mentioned as addressed to Li Chên-kuo.

Ts'ên Yu-ying was at this time no longer acting as Governor-General. The death of a parent necessitates the retirement from office of a Chinese official, and a decree of April 21 had relieved Ts'ên Yu-ying from his acting charge in order that he might mourn the death of his stepmother. Various memorials presented by him were published at the same time setting forth the services he had rendered during the Mohammedan insurrection, and the consequent tranquillisation of the province. His withdrawal at this crisis was differently explained by the vulgar.

It was suggested by some that the Chinese Government, foreseeing that some charge in connection with our grief would be pressed against him which might involve his degradation, had allowed him a way of escape from this disgrace. Once in retirement, a decree retrospectively censuring his conduct might be issued, which would not to the same extent humiliate the Government nor compromise the future career of the individual.

Another explanation was this; that he stood in danger of impeachment for his cruelty. Excessive severity in dealing with rebels is readily excused in China. When Yeh, in 1855-56, beheaded 70,000 persons at Canton (many of them brought in from the country by their own kinsfolk), the decapitation of 500 prisoners a-day seemed to shock no one. But it was not only that Ts'ên had put to death his thousands of rebels; he was accused of having broken faith with rebels to whom their lives had been promised, and to have massacred the innocent and the guilty alike. I had had some time in my hands a memorial, of which I cannot doubt the genuineness, in which a high officer of Yun Nan had denounced him for various acts of misconduct, those just referred to among the rest. The Acting Governor-General was stated to have taken steps to prevent the transmission of this paper to Peking, and that it was not laid before the Throne is nearly certain; although men high in office had, I know, cognisance of the memorial. Offences so grave as those charged in it, once the Regents were publicly apprised of them, could not have been altogether condoned. But it would have been very unpleasant to the Court to be obliged on any ground to punish a man who had trampled out a rebellion so serious as the Mohammedan movement in Yun Nan.

My own impression is that both issues, his barbarous conduct towards his own people, and his "mismanagement" of our affair, had their weight with the Central Government, when his retirement was permitted or directed. Whatever its occasion, the fact that he was now in retirement was the first reason alleged for his non-production when I demanded it. The removal to Peking of proceedings which, the Yamên argued, were closed in Yun Nan, was resisted on other grounds with greater show of reason; but the manifest alarm my new proposal created was suspicious. Not less so the spontaneous invitation to me at once to reopen negotiations on the questions, eminently the commercial question, satisfactory arrangement of which had so recently appeared impossible.

I did not then and there accept this invitation, but the conference being renewed next day, I eventually consented to hand to the Ministers of the Yamên a paper of propositions which, had I found the Yamên to my mind more reasonable, I had been earlier prepared to bring forward. These were debated during the fortnight ending 14th June, when I abruptly closed the discussion and quitted Peking.

It has been not unnaturally objected that it should never have been recommenced; that if I held in my hands proofs of the complicity of the Sub-Prefect Wu, I should have put all aside save the prosecution of Wu and those above him. But the dilemma of the preceding September had nearly reproduced itself. As an example, the arrest and trial of these persons would have been excellent; but months must elapse before they could arrive, if their arrest were conceded, in Peking; and there was plausible ground for refusing their arrest upon a charge which, from the nature of my information, I could not as yet make more precise. I could not, in fact, bring forward my evidence until the parties I named were in Peking, and it by no means followed that I could then make sure of a conviction. Still, with the whole story that I had to tell before me, my demand was in itself just, and, should reference to Her Majesty's Government eventually have to be made, far too valuable to be lightly relinquished.

On the other hand, looking forward, I did not regard the alternative measure to which I was about to have recourse as an indifferent means to the great end of which I may say that I had never lost sight, the future security of relations assured us by the removal of causes of quarrel, and by extension of intercourse wherever it may be safely maintained.

On the 2nd June I communicated to the Ministers of the Yamên eight propositions.

For the rest, I received such assurances in writing as led me to believe a settlement at last at hand, and I sent Mr. Mayers to the Yamên to inspect the draft of the memorial and to make other necessary arrangements. The memorial, which stood first in order as in importance, proved to be a widely different document from what I had contemplated. The circular which was to have been addressed to the Legations was so modified that, while indeed it might be declared to comprehend much more than I stipulated, its scope might, on the other hand, be narrowed so as to make it of no effect whatever. Lastly, the indemnity about which I had supposed all controversy was at rest was once more limited to the minimum earlier conceded. The right of Her Majesty's Government to a voice in the matter was ignored. I might refer it to the Government, but the Government's decision was to regard me alone.

Mr. Mayers brought me back the text of the draft memorial. He was shortly followed by an ambiguous note on the subject of the indemnity; and I now found myself in a position which, had the recent negotiations been preceded by none, or by negotiations of a shorter duration, might have greatly embarrassed me. For the text of the memorial might, of course, have been reconsidered. The alteration of the circular I had required, regarding trade to the Legations, was not the Yamên's own, but had been suggested (I do not doubt with the best intentions) by Mr. Hart. Had this, therefore, stood alone on my list of complaints, I should certainly have invited reconsideration of it. Lastly, although in the matter of indemnity the Yamên had receded from the understanding, as I viewed it, twice, if not thrice, accepted by it, that the amount should be fixed at Tls. 200,000 I was still prepared, and should have preferred, to submit the question of indemnity, any or none, much or little, to Her Majesty's Government. I did not reopen the discussion of any one of these questions. I simply requested that my list of propositions might be returned to me, and I abruptly left Peking.

The Tsung-li Yamen made haste to declare that I had misunderstood the intentions of the Ministers concerned upon the last occasion. Had I but waited, it was presently urged upon me, further negotiation might have smoothed all difficulties. Further negotiation, I would allow, was possible as often as I might choose to return to it; but I was not, in my judgment, at liberty, independently of no little antecedent acquaintance with the conduct of negotiations in China, to forget the experience I had acquired in the three periods of this last most painful history; in the spring of 1875, in the succeeding autumn, and now throughout the first six months of 1876. I had in the last fortnight again and again threatened either to remove the Legation or to recommend to Her Majesty's Government the extremest measure of coercion, unless I had secured to me a very moderate form of reparation for the past, and certain stated guarantees of a better order of relations for the time to come. I had been again and again obliged to withdraw from negotiation; my demand for the trial of the authorities, whose prosecution I had consented to waive if my conditions were satisfied, invariably producing a fresh overture, destined shortly to end in disappointment like the preceding. My only menace now was that if, pending the reference to Her Majesty's Government which I was on my way to Shanghai to make, the Chinese Government were to take action of any kind without first communicating with me, I should consider myself at liberty to take any step I might deem fit, without either consulting the Chinese Government. I have no reason to regret my decision to waste no more time in Peking.

I had some days earlier taken formal leave of the Prince of Kung and the Ministers of the Yamên. I now sent my cards with a verbal announcement of my intention to proceed to Shanghai. This was not believed, but as soon as it was ascertained that, on the morning of the 15th, I had really quitted Peking, a decree was sent to the Grand Secretary Li Hung-chang, then at Tientsin, instructing him to confer with me "on the Margary case." A copy was forwarded to me in a note from the Prince of Kung, which had reached Tientsin before me, and in which his Imperial Highness deplored the hastiness of my departure from Peking. The Grand Secretary invited me, under this decree, to reconsider with him the eight propositions in the form last submitted to the Yamên. This I declined to do. Those propositions, as I had already written to the Yamen, were now to be regarded as non avenu. Further I had to remind his Excellency that when, in the summer of 1875, he had received similar powers from the Throne, the validity of promises given to him had been disputed by the Yamên in Peking. I accordingly continued my journey to Shanghai.

To Shanghai I was presently followed by Mr. Hart, who had been sent by the Yamên, with a note from the Prince of Kung, to discuss the commercial question with me. I did not see my way to recommencement of such a discussion with Mr. Hart; but learning from his further account of what had passed after my departure that the Tsung-li Yamên would be prepared, if I would consent to meet a Special Commissioner, to move the Throne to appoint one, I authorised him to say that if the Grand Secretary Li Hung-chang were at Chefoo by the middle of August I would confer with him; upon what subjects I did not particularise. The Grand Secretary Li Hung-chang was appointed High Commissioner accordingly.

The final negotiations which culminated in the Chefoo Convention are thus set forth:—

Having promised to re-open negotiations, I first, on the 1st September, placed on record the conditions under which I had agreed to communicate my proposals to the Grand Secretary. They were to be discussed as a whole. If not acceded to, I was to telegraph to your Lordship, in whose hands all earlier correspondence would be by the end of the month. If agreed to, I would recommend that such agreement be regarded by Her Majesty's Government as having closed the Yun Nan case. The Prince of Kung would be expected to obtain a Decree confirming the arrangements undertaken by the Grand Secretary. If such Decree were not obtainable, our negotiations were to be counted as nothing. The draft of this note having been shown to the Grand Secretary, we began at last to treat upon the 4th September, and upon the 13th I signed the Agreement in three sections, forwarded on the following day to your Lordship.

In this, in an important particular, I went beyond the limits I had originally prescribed myself; for I undertook, if certain conditions were immediately satisfied, not only, as at first agreed, to recommend the closing of the case, but, on my own responsibility, to report it closed.

Within a few days of its signature the Chinese text of the agreement appeared without authority in the native newspapers at Shanghai. I had sent the English text to be printed there for communication to my foreign colleagues, and finding that, as was to be expected, translations from the Chinese newspapers were beginning to be circulated, I authorised the publication of a correct version of both texts of the agreement in our own local journals. This will explain the appearance of the instrument in public before it could have reached Her Majesty's Government.

On my return to Peking a few days later I found that the Tsung-li Yamên had already printed the Chinese text, and communicated it to the Legations.

The Agreement has naturally been the subject of much criticism, but I shall here notice but one of the observations that have reached me concerning it. It has been objected that the nature of the outrage to be atoned for considered, the satisfaction exacted should have been kept formally apart from the settlement of any other question, and especially from the question of trade; further, that no indemnity should have been accepted; or, if any, an indemnity of such magnitude as might have made it remembered as a deterrent penalty.

Looking to my instructions, I had not originally contemplated anything in the form of a convention. Had my negotiations been brought to a conclusion at Peking, the engagements entered into by the Chinese Government would have been conveyed to me in notes with no greater formality than such as belongs to ordinary correspondence, and reported home in the usual manner. The circumstances that obliged me to break off negotiations in June, and the Special Commission of the Grand Secretary, determined the course eventually adopted Telegraphic communication with Europe was fitful and uncertain, whether by the submarine line south, or by that passing via Japan through Siberia, where it had been damaged by the floods. This was for something in my proceedings. Lastly, I was influenced by the reasons stated in my despatch giving cover to the agreement, already adverted to.

As to the inclusion in the Agreement of stipulations affecting diplomatic intercourse and trade, one purpose of the long exposé which fills the earlier pages of this Report has been to show that from the beginning I had fought for an improvement in our relations diplomatic and commercial, on three grounds; first, that we had, under both heads, matter of complaint; secondly, that, before the occurrence of the Yun Nan outrage I had given notice that I would formally call upon the Chinese Government to remove this; thirdly, that the Yun Nan atrocity was but a consequence of a policy of which the restrictions embarrassing foreign intercourse in trade, or otherwise, were both a cause and a symptom.

The question of indemnity, as shown above, I had not had it in view to revive further than as one upon which the right should be reserved to Her Majesty's Government to demand an indemnity, or to decline to demand any; the amount to be paid, if any, being of course to be decided by Her Majesty's Government. The Grand Secretary Li, pressing hard for a final settlement of all conditions, I agreed to name the sum before named in June to the Tsung-li Yamen, namely 200,000 taels, to be applied to the purposes stated in my first reference to the subject in March 1875.

It should be borne in mind that the demand had never been put forward as for an indemnity for the Yun Nan outrage, which, I contended, was an international offence; nor even for the terrible incident, the murder of Mr. Margary, which was the aggravation of that offence. At Peking for many months a persistent effort was make to ignore the international character of the crime. The case had been constantly described as a case of life for life, and I had as constantly protested against the inaccuracy of that description. Had I contemplated acceptance of an indemnity as in, so to speak, general satisfaction of the international offence, I should have felt bound to propose something much more considerable; an indemnity of such magnitude as would have rendered either occupation of territory or other material guarantee unavoidable.

As it was, my demand was limited to what would cover—

(1.) Payment of £10,000 to the family of Mr. Margary, and of certain lesser amounts to the Chinese accompanying him, who were murdered with him. Some of these, as I have reported, have, by my authority, been receiving small allowances from Her Majesty's Consuls at Shanghai and Hankow.

(2.) Payment of the expenses occasioned, in particular to the Government of India, by the occurrences of February, 1875. In these I contemplated including the expenditure called for by Colonel Browne's mission; the losses of the gentlemen composing it, the very moderate estimate of which had been forwarded to me; the expense of Mr. Margary's mission across China in 1874-75, and of Mr. Grosvenor's mission in 1875-76; and the expense of maintaining one or more British officers in the interior, as stipulated (Agreement, Section I., iv.), for a term of five years, should Her Majesty's Government see fit to take advantage of the stipulation.

(3.) Satisfaction of various claims of British merchants arising out of the action of officers of the Chinese Government up to the commencement of the year 1876. The action referred to was, in general, wrongful seizure and detention of imports or produce the property of British merchants. There was one claim outstanding for payment on account of supplies provided to the Chinese Government towards the close of the rebellion. It was not large, but bore interest. I had estimated that these claims would amount in all to about Tls. 30,000; but it was not impossible that others might be presented the validity of which would be recognised. The whole indemnity having been paid, by my desire, into the Oriental Bank at Shanghai, I set apart 50,000 taels as a sum to be available for the liquidation of claims under the authority of the Legation. The remaining 150,000 taels were deposited with the bank, paying interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum.

The third of these items, satisfaction of claims, as I have elsewhere observed, belonged to our chapter of commercial griefs. It was placed where it stands as part of the question of indemnity; indemnity itself being connected with the Yun Nan outrage, only as a minimum of costs or damages adjudged on account of injury to persons or property.

The following explains the object of the suggested Missions from India and Thibet :—

I may say the same of the provision contained in the last clause of Article IV. The Mission sent by the Government of India into Yun Nan having been expelled, I thought it well that the right to replace that Mission should be recorded, if for no other purpose, in order that the concession of it might serve in some sort as an amende to the Government of India. Practically, I did not assume that if officers were stationed by the Legation in Yun Nan to observe the trade a Mission from India would be for the present regarded as necessary.

The provisions of the separate article, regarding a possible expedition into Thibet, belong to the same category. The dignity of the Government of India is recognised by it, and the Chinese Government is pledged, when called upon, to withdraw the restriction it has so long maintained upon the examination of a curious country, into which, for more reasons than one, it is our interest to penetrate. The Article could not be ranged, symmetrically, with the rest of the conditions proper to settlement of the Yun Nan case; I therefore made it separate; but the engagement it records was none the less intended to be regarded as to a certain extent compensatory, so far as the hindrance offered to Colonel Browne's mission is concerned.

It will be observed that the Tsung-li Yamen, if the mission enter Thibet from the Chinese side, is to grant authority with "due regard to circumstances;" and that if it be sent from the side of India, the Chinese resident in Thibet is, also "with due regard to circumstances," to send officers to escort the mission.
